ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Ten years after we began work on this text, and seven years (and four printings) since the publication of the preliminary edition, we have the welcome but daunting task of thanking all those whose suggestions, comments, criticisms, and corrections have helped us so much along the way. We owe a special debt to Floyd L. Moreland and Rita M. Fleischer, whose LATIN: An Intensive Course provided the original inspiration for this book, developed for use in the Greek Institute of the City University of New York. During the winter of 1977/78, Floyd, Rita, and Stephanie Russell read successive drafts of this text and criticized acutely our oral presentation of each of the lessons. Over the nine summers of the Greek Institute other members of the staff have also given us invaluable help; we would like to mention particularly Seth Benardete, David Brafman, John F. Collins, Dennis Curry, Dennis Looney, and David Sider. We are greatly indebted, also, to Brooklyn College and to the Graduate Center of the City University for their continuing support of the Latin/Greek Institute, and especially to Ethyle R. Wolfe, Provost of Brooklyn College, without whose support and encouragement the program might never have begun.

We cannot thank by name all those who have used the earlier versions of this text with classes elsewhere and who have kindly sent us their comments, but we must mention in particular Anthony C. Sirignano and James Clauss. Thanks also to Jerry Clack, George Goold, Fred Schreiber, Leslie Threatte, Stephen V. Tracy, and David C. Young for their help and support, and to Peg Kershenbaum, Michael O'Neill, and George Shea for their comments on the proofs of the present edition.

The last group of friends and helpers is the largest. They are also the most critical, the most demanding, the most lynx-eyed, the most indefatigable: the 350 students of the Greek Institute during the past nine years. They have taken great pleasure in pointing out every misplaced accent and missing macron, and every slightly odd turn of phrase they could find, and they have greatly improved this book thereby. And the students of Summer 1986 merit special praise: using as their text the bound page proofs of this edition, they were a formidable phalanx of proofreaders.

VIII ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

For the errors and inaccuracies which must, we fear, remain, we are of course solely responsible. Users of this text are invited, once again, to send us their corrections, comments, and suggestions.

Thanks to the never-ending vigilance of users of this text, especially the students of CUNY's Greek Institute, we have been able in this new edition to make a few corrections and improvements. To all who gave us suggestions we offer our thanks and again solicit from users of this text their comments.

H.H. & G.M.Q.

The second edition was at the printer when the terrible news arrived that Gerald M. Quinn had died in an automobile accident. All those who knew him mourn the loss of such a generous, caring, and committed teacher, colleague, and friend. Gerry's enthusiasm and humor, his real personal concern for every individual, his unflagging dedication to the highest standards—all were evident in everything he did, most recently as Dean since 1989 of Fordham University's College at Lincoln Center and as a member of the 1991 Greek Institute. Every word of this book bears his imprint. He was unique, and irreplaceable.

ON THE USE OF THIS TEXT

Users of the preliminary edition of this text will be pleased, we trust, by some major improvements: continuous pagination, an index, and a now complete English-Greek vocabulary. We would also like to draw attention to some minor changes: the second agrist has been moved to Unit 7 from Unit 8, and the imperative to Unit 11 from Unit 17. The comparative is now introduced in Unit 17, and additional material has been incorporated into Unit 20. Certain rules are highlighted in SMALL CAPITALS, and new terms are given in boldface.

Although this text was written for use in the intensive summer Greek Institute of the City University of New York, the experience of the last decade has shown that it can be used successfully in a wide variety of regularly paced courses.

We present the grammar in such a way as to enable students to grasp whole morphological and syntactical systems as soon as possible: all principal parts of all verbs are learned as soon as the verb is encountered, and by Unit 8 the student has acquired the complete conjugation of the thematic verb, except for the imperative mood. It is especially important that the subjunctive and optative are introduced early, in Unit 3.

In the Greek Institute each unit is presented in a two-hour afternoon session during which the students practice the material they are learning by doing some of the drills of the unit. These drills focus on the points of morphology and syntax which are new, but, except where necessary, they do not employ any of the new vocabulary of the unit. Thus students can immediately practice new morphology and syntax with familiar words. We strongly urge instructors of regularly paced courses to use these drills orally as the new material is being presented, before the students go home to master it. We indicate in the text of the first ten units where the drills can appropriately be done. In the Greek Institute these drills add liveliness to the grammar presentations and give the students self-confidence.

The exercises in each unit employ the new vocabulary; there are enough of them so that not all need be assigned. In the two-hour morning sessions of the Greek Institute, the students are expected to translate the assigned sentences and to do others at sight. They are always responsible for identifying every form fully and for accounting for it syntactically. Most of the morning session is spent in ringing changes upon the sentences: e.g., changing from singular to plural, active to passive, or an aorist to a future.

The result of this process is that when the students read real, unedited Greek they hold themselves to the same standards of explication. It is hard work, but they get a real grasp on their first substantial text, Plato's Ion, which they begin in their seventh week.

Starting with a number of fragments of Menander in Unit 4, unaltered selections from ancient authors are presented at the end of each unit; by Unit 16 students are capable of starting a passage of Plato's Gorgias which continues through Unit 20. Glosses at the bottom of the page give standard vocabulary listings for each word which the students do not yet know. Not every unit needs a full two hours for the presentation of new material, and, time allowing, some of these passages from ancient authors are read at sight in the afternoon sessions; others are used in optional sight readings during the lunch breaks. These sight readings serve two functions: first, it is very important that students learn how to handle unseen Greek systematically and without fear; second, although the concentrated practice necessary for mastering the morphology and syntax of ancient Greek cannot be provided by unedited ancient texts, students want and need the reward of reading real Greek. Thus, the readings are something of a treat, but they also show the students the linguistic strengths they are building through doing the drills and exercises.

During the summer, each unit requires about four hours for the presentation of the material and the doing of the exercises. In adapting the book to a regularly paced class, teachers may want to assign some of the drills as homework while the student masters the vocabulary and the first half of the grammar of the unit. Some teachers may also want to spend more than four hours on certain units, e.g., Unit 5 or Unit 8.

The pronunciation suggested in the text is that used most frequently in the United States. Others may want to use the pronunciation reconstructed by modern philology; they need only explain their system to their students when they present the alphabet and the accents.

When the grammar is presented at the Greek Institute, students are given one- or two-page handouts for each Unit which serve as summaries of the material to be learned. Copies of these for reproduction will be sent to those instructors requesting them from the publisher on their letterhead:

CONTENTS

Greek: An Intensive Course is divided into a Text, with twenty Units, and an Appendix. Each Unit is divided into Sections which are numbered continuously (1–153). At the end of each Unit there are Vocabulary, Vocabulary Notes, Drills, Exercises, and, beginning with Unit 4, Readings of original Greek texts. The Appendix contains additional grammar (Sections 154–168); a summary, for reference, of morphology and syntax; Greek–English and English–Greek vocabularies; and an Index of the Text and Appendix. The Appendix has a separate table of contents.

INTRODUCTION

1. THE GREEK LANGUAGE

Ancient Greek belongs to a large family of languages which includes English, Russian, Latin and the Romance languages, Persian, and Sanskrit, whose common characteristics show that they are descended from a single ancestral language, called Indo-European.

The history of Greek extends back from modern times to the second millennium B.C., and the language, as written in different locales and in different ages, varies. At any one time there are various dialects, differing somewhat in pronunciation, vocabulary, and grammar, but mutually comprehensible. Over the centuries also, the language has steadily changed.

This book presents Attic Greek, the dialect of Athens, as it appears in prose authors of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C.—the Greek of Plato, Lysias, Xenophon, Demosthenes, Thucydides. Attic prose lays the foundation for reading the poetry of Attic tragedy and comedy, the closely related Ionic dialect of the historian Herodotus, and the archaic Ionic poetry of Homer. Also, there developed out of Attic Greek the later Koine or "common dialect" in which the New Testament is written.

3. ROUGH AND SMOOTH BREATHING

Greek also has an h-sound, which occurs only at the beginning of certain words (cf. English hand, his). This sound is indicated not by a separate letter but by a rough breathing (') placed above the initial vowel of a word and pronounced before the vowel sound.

έξάγωνον

hexagon

When a word is capitalized, the rough breathing is written before the initial vowel.

Έλένη

Helen

In words beginning with a vowel and lacking an h-sound, the absence of this sound is indicated by a smooth breathing (') placed in the same manner as a rough breathing.

όλιγαρχίā Ἡλέκτρā oligarchy

Elektra

All words beginning with a vowel must have either a smooth breathing or a rough breathing. All words beginning with upsilon have a rough breathing.

δπόθεσις

hypothesis

Likewise, all words beginning with rho have a rough breathing; this is not pronounced. Note the name of the letter: rho. Rho is the only consonant which takes a breathing.

δητορική

rhetoric

4. LONG AND SHORT VOWELS

Greek vowels can be classified into five long vowels and five corresponding short vowels. Long vowels took approximately twice as long to pronounce as short vowels.

The vowels alpha, iota, and upsilon are either long or short. Greek did not mark the length of these vowels, but in this text a long mark or macron (-) will be placed above these vowels when they are long, as in the chart below. Short vowels and those vowels which are always long (eta, omega) will not be marked.

LONG VOWELS	SHORT	VOWELS
$ar{lpha}$	α
η	ε
$ar{\iota}$	ι
ω	0
$ar{v}$	v

Pronunciation Drill I, page 11, may now be done.

5. DIPHTHONGS

Certain pairs of vowels, called diphthongs, are pronounced together to produce one continuous sound. Words beginning with diphthongs, like words beginning with vowels, require a rough or smooth breathing; this breathing is placed over the second letter of the diphthong, as in the examples below.

All diphthongs are counted as long.

DIPHTHONG PRONOUNCED LIKE	EXAMPLE
THE boldface $LETTER(S)$
aı defy, fine	$al\theta \acute{\eta} \varrho$
$\varepsilon \iota$ wait, bait	εἰοήνη
$o\iota$ boy	olvos
$v\iota$ wit	Eίλεί $ heta v$ ι a av scow, plow	αὖτόνομος
εv $(\varepsilon + v)$	$^{\circ}O\delta v\sigma\sigmaarepsilon \dot{v}arsigma$ ηΰοηκα
ov b oo t	Οὐρανός

Note that the diphthong $\varepsilon\iota$ and the long vowel η are pronounced alike. Likewise, the diphthong ov and the long vowel \bar{v} are pronounced alike.

A Greek word has as many syllables as it has vowels or diphthongs.

αὐ-τό-νο-μος
³Ο-δνσ-σεύς
οἶ-νος Εἰ-λεί-θνι-α φι-λο-σο-φί-ᾶ

6. IOTA SUBSCRIPT AND ADSCRIPT

When the long vowels \bar{a} , η , and ω are combined with short iota, the iota is written beneath the long vowels as an iota subscript and is not pronounced.

 η ω

If the long vowel is capitalized, the iota is written after the long vowel as an iota adscript and is not pronounced. A rough or smooth breathing is written before the long vowel.

 $\dot{\phi}\delta\dot{\eta}$ (iota subscript) $^{2}\Omega\iota\delta\dot{\eta}$ (iota adscript)

Contrast the placement of the breathing over the second vowel of a diphthong. $El\lambda\epsilon \ell\theta v\iota a$

Pronunciation Drill II, page 11, may now be done.

7. GAMMA COMBINED WITH CERTAIN CONSONANTS

The consonant gamma, when combined with a palatal $(\varkappa, \gamma, \chi, \text{ or } \xi; \text{ see Section } 8)$ has the sound of ng in such English words as "baking."

COMBINATION	SOUND	EXAMPLE
γγ	anger	ἄγγελος
үж	banker, anchor	ἄγκ $ar{v}$ $arrho$ a γξ	lary nx , Sphi nx	λάρυγξ, Σφίγξ
γχ	$(ng \text{ in baking} + \chi)$	'Οξύρουγχος
, ,,	lu nkh ead	33

Pronunciation Drill III, page 11, may now be done.

8. CLASSIFICATION OF CONSONANTS

Certain consonants are classified according to the part of the mouth in which they are formed.

Labials	π	β	φ
Dentals	τ	δ	θ
Palatals	26	γ	χ

The lips are used in forming labials, the teeth in forming dentals, the palate in forming palatals.

The consonants ζ (= dz), ξ (= ks), and ψ (= ps) are double consonants.

The combination of any labial with σ produces the double consonant ψ .

The combination of any palatal with σ produces the double consonant ξ .

The consonants φ , θ , and χ were originally aspirated: they indicated a labial, dental, or palatal accompanied by a puff of air. (Cf. English "pea," "tea," "key.") Thus certain unaspirated consonants, when followed by a word beginning with a rough breathing (= h), are written as aspirates.

$$\pi + ' = \varphi$$

 $\tau + ' = \theta$ $\varkappa + ' = \chi$

6 INTRODUCTION

This text adopts the standard pronunciation of unaspirated Greek π , τ , and κ as English p, t, and k (sometimes aspirated, sometimes not: contrast "pin," "spot") and the standard pronunciation of aspirated Greek φ , θ , and χ as the fricatives f (as in "fit"), th (as in "thought") and ch (as in German "lachen").

9. PUNCTUATION AND CAPITALIZATION

Greek employs the same comma and period as does English.

A single mark serves as both colon and semicolon. This is a dot written above the line.

["]Ελληνες · Σοφοκλῆς, Περικλῆς, Δημοσθένης. Greeks: Sophokles, Perikles, Demosthenes.

The question mark is the same as the English semicolon.

Σοφοκλῆς; Περικλῆς; Δημοσθένης; Sophokles? Perikles? Demosthenes?

Proper names are capitalized, as are the first words of paragraphs and of quotations. But the first word of a sentence is not normally capitalized.

Greek did not employ quotation marks, but in some texts quotation marks are occasionally employed.

Pronunciation Drill IV, page 12, may now be done.

10. ACCENT

Most Greek words had one syllable whose musical pitch varied slightly from that of the other syllables of the word. Such a syllable is said to be accented, and this difference of pitch is called the word's accent. In English, accent is shown by an increased stress on the accented syllable (e.g., relative, religious, reconstruct) rather than by a difference in musical pitch.

Unlike written English, written Greek marks accents wherever they occur.

THE ACCENT OF A GREEK WORD MUST BE LEARNED AS AN INTEGRAL PART OF ITS SPELLING.

Greek indicates accent in the following ways:

Acute accent Marked a raising of the musical pitch.

Grave accent Marked a lowering of pitch or substitution of a steady for a raised pitch.

Circumflex accent Marked a raising and lowering of pitch in the same syllable.

7 SECTION 10

Since native speakers of English are used to a stress accent, it is customary to pronounce all accented syllables of Greek words, whichever of the three accents they have, with a slight stress as in English.

The range of possible accentuation of Greek words is strictly limited by the following rules:

General rule for Greek accents: No matter how many syllables a word may have, the accent can appear only over one of the last three syllables.

The final syllable is called the ultima (from the Latin for "last") and is abbreviated "u." The next-to-last syllable is called the penult (from the Latin for "almost last") and is abbreviated "p." The third syllable from the end is called the antepenult (from the Latin for "before the next-to-last") and is abbreviated "a."

Rules for ACUTE accent: appears over the ultima, the penult, and the antepenult.

> appears over short vowels or long vowels or diphthongs.

Restrictions:

CAN appear over the ultima ONLY when a pause follows, i.e., at the end of a sentence or before a comma or semicolon.

CANNOT appear over the penult when it is accented and contains a long vowel or diphthong and the ultima contains a short vowel.

CAN appear over the antepenult ONLY when the ultima contains a short vowel.

Rules for GRAVE accent: appears ONLY over the ultima.

appears over short vowels or long vowels or diphthongs.

Restrictions:

MUST replace an acute accent over the ultima when another word follows directly without a pause. CANNOT appear otherwise.

Rules for CIRCUMFLEX accent: appears ONLY over the ultima and the penult.

> appears ONLY over long vowels or diphthongs.

8 INTRODUCTION

Restrictions:

MUST appear over the penult when the penult is accented and contains a long vowel or diphthong and the ultima contains a short vowel.

CANNOT appear over the penult when the ultima contains a long vowel or diphthong.

Accents are placed directly over vowels, and over the second letter of diphthongs.

Έλένη, Είλείθνια, δρᾶμα, ψεῦδος

When an acute or grave accent and a breathing appear over the same syllable, the breathing is written first.

άνθρωπος, ύμνος, δν

When a circumflex accent and a breathing appear over the same syllable, the breathing is written under the circumflex.

 $\tilde{\eta}\tau \alpha$

Accents, like breathings, are written before capitalized vowels, including vowels followed by iota adscript, but over the second letter of diphthongs whose first letter is capitalized.

"Ομηρος, "Ήτα, Αίρεσις, "Αιδης

Since the circumflex accent is written only over long vowels or diphthongs, the macron is not written over long alpha, iota, or upsilon when these letters have circumflex accents over them. Contrast $\delta\varrho\tilde{a}\mu a$ and $\delta\eta\mu o\kappa\varrho\alpha\tau i\bar{a}$; both the circumflex accent and the macron indicate that the alpha over which they appear is long.

POSSIBILITIES OF ACCENT

- (1) $-a-p-\dot{u} + pause$
- (2) -a-p-ù + word without a pause
- (3) -a-p-u BUT NOT -a-p-ŭ
- (4) -á-p-ŭ
- (5) -a-p-ū
- (6) -a-p̄-ŭ MUST, if -p̄- is accented BUT never -p̄-, if -ū
 - \vee = short vowel
 - = long vowel or diphthong

Not marked = short vowel, long vowel, or diphthong

11. RECESSIVE ACCENT

The accent of a word is said to be recessive when it goes back from the end of the word as far as allowed by the rules for the possibilities of accent. Most verb forms have recessive accent.

Consider the accent on the following forms of the verb which means "stop."

(1) ἔπανσα

The ultima contains a short vowel and thus permits the accent to go back as far as the antepenult.

(2) ἐπαύσω

The ultima contains a long vowel and thus prevents the accent from going beyond the penult. The length of the ultima also prevents the accent on the penult from being a circumflex.

(3) παῦσον

The accent has to be on the penult. It contains a diphthong, and the ultima has a short vowel. The accent must be a circumflex on the penult.

(4) παύση

The accent has to be on the penult. Although the penult contains a diphthong, the ultima contains a long vowel, which prevents the accent from being a circumflex; it must be an acute.

Thus, to accent a word of three or more syllables which has recessive accent, check the ultima. If it contains a short vowel, the word has an acute accent on the antepenult. If the ultima contains a long vowel or a diphthong, the accent will be an acute on the penult. Contrast the verb forms $\pi a i \delta \epsilon v \epsilon$ and $\pi a i \delta \epsilon v \epsilon$.

In a two-syllable word which has recessive accent, the accent must be on the penult and is an acute or a circumflex depending on the length of the vowels in both the penult and the ultima. To accent such a word, check the penult first. If it contains a short vowel, the accent must be an acute, since the circumflex cannot appear over a short vowel: $\mu\acute{e}\nu\epsilon$. If the penult contains a long vowel or a diphthong, check the length of the vowel in the ultima. If the ultima contains a short vowel, the accent is a circumflex; if the ultima contains a long vowel or a diphthong, the accent is an acute: $\mu\epsilon i\nu n \nu$, $\mu\epsilon l\nu n \nu$.

Accent Drill I, page 12, may now be done.

12. PERSISTENT ACCENT

The accent of a word is said to be persistent when it tries to stay the same accent, over the same vowel or diphthong, in all the forms of the word unless forced by the rules for the possibilities of accent to change in nature (e.g., from circumflex to acute) or position (e.g., from antepenult to penult). Persistent accents change in nature, exhausting all possibilities for remaining on the same syllable, before changing in position. The accent on most noun forms is persistent and is learned as part of the vocabulary.

Observe carefully the accents on the following set of words, the original accent of which is given by the first form.

(1) βιβλίον, βιβλίου

The accent is given by the first form. (The rules for the possibilities of accent would have allowed the word also to be pronounced with the accent on the antepenult or the ultima, but we know from the manuscript tradition that the word was accented on the penult.) In $\beta\iota\beta\lambda lov$, even though the ultima now contains a diphthong, no change of accent is necessary; the accent stays the same as in the first form.

(2) ἄνθοωπος, ἀνθοώπου

The accent can appear on the antepenult of $\check{\alpha}v\theta\varrho\omega\pi\sigma\varsigma$ because the ultima contains a short vowel. In $\dot{\alpha}v\theta\varrho\dot{\omega}\pi\sigma\upsilon$ the ultima contains a diphthong, and so the acute accent cannot remain over the α of the antepenult; it is forced to move to the ω of the penult.

(3) νῆσος, νήσου

The accent of $\nu\tilde{\eta}\sigma\sigma\varsigma$ is on the penult, which contains a long vowel, and the ultima has a short vowel; the accent must be a circumflex. In $\nu\tilde{\eta}\sigma\sigma v$ the ultima contains a diphthong, and so the accent cannot remain a circumflex over the η ; it changes to an acute.

(4) δρᾶμα, δράματος, δρᾶμάτων

The accent of $\delta\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\mu\alpha$ would like to stay over the initial α . In $\delta\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\mu\alpha$ the initial α is in the penult, which contains a long vowel while the ultima has a short vowel; the accent must be a circumflex. In $\delta\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\mu\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$ the initial α is now in the antepenult; the accent cannot remain a circumflex but changes to an acute. In $\delta\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\mu\acute{\alpha}\tau\omega\nu$ the ultima now contains a long vowel; the accent cannot remain on the antepenult but moves to the penult.

Accent Drill II, pages 12-13, may now be done.

13. NOUNS: OVERVIEW

Greek nouns have gender, number, and case.

1. GENDER

All Greek nouns are considered to be of masculine, feminine, or neuter gender. Gender in Greek is a grammatical category and is not identical with sex. Usually, however, words that refer to living beings of the male sex are of masculine gender, and those which refer to living beings of the female sex are of feminine gender. Nouns which in English are neuter, i.e., those referring to non-living things without sex, are in Greek of the masculine, feminine, or neuter (grammatical) gender. Thus, $\lambda \delta \gamma o \varsigma$, "word," is of masculine gender; $\tau \epsilon \chi \nu \eta$, "art," is of feminine gender; and $\epsilon \varrho \gamma o \nu$, "work," is of neuter gender. In memorizing the vocabulary, the gender of each word must be learned separately; it cannot be guessed. Gender will be indicated in the vocabulary lists by the appropriate form of the definite article "the": δ for masculine nouns, η for feminine nouns, and $\tau \delta$ for neuter nouns.

2. NUMBER

By number is meant whether a noun is singular (one) or plural (more than one). In addition to the singular and the plural, Greek has another number, the dual, for things thought of as pairs. (The dual is relatively rare; its forms will be found in the Appendix.)

3. CASE

The case of a Greek noun indicates its grammatical relation to the rest of the sentence, e.g., subject, direct object. Each Greek noun can be divided into two parts: a stem, which shows the dictionary meaning of the word, and an ending, which shows the noun's number and case. The various relations a noun can have to the other words of a sentence are shown by changes in the endings. Changing the ending of a word to convey different information is called inflection, and a language which uses this device is said to be inflected. The inflection of a noun is called its declension, and nouns are said to be declined. The inflection of a verb is called its conjugation, and verbs are said to be conjugated.

Modern English shows grammatical relations by word order or by the use of prepositions. For example, the subject usually comes before the verb and the direct object after it; the indirect object can be indicated by word order or by a preposition.

The girl gives the boy the rose. The girl gives the rose to the boy.

In these two sentences, girl is the subject, rose is the direct object, and boy or to the boy is the indirect object.

English has only a few traces of inflection left, e.g., man/man's, where the -'s is used to show possession; he/his/him, where he can only be the subject of a verb, his shows possession, and him can only be the object of a verb or preposition. In English, however, even where inflection is still used, word order is still usually essential to show the relations among the words. In Greek, inflection alone can show the relation among the words of a sentence.

Greek nouns have five cases: nominative, genitive, dative, accusative, and vocative; each case puts the noun in one of a possible number of relations to the rest of the words in the sentence.

4. THE GREEK CASE SYSTEM

In Indo-European, the language from which both Greek and English developed, there were eight cases, each noun having various endings in the singular or plural to show different relations to the rest of the sentence. The Greek noun lost three of the eight original Indo-European cases and redistributed the functions of the three lost cases among the remaining five. Thus, some of the Greek cases have more than one basic function.

The Greek cases and their functions are as follows:

(1) NOMINATIVE CASE: used as the subject of a sentence and as the predicate nominative with linking verbs like "am," and when one wishes to state the name of a thing.

- (2) GENITIVE CASE: (a) used to make one noun limit or depend upon another. The relation between the two nouns can usually be shown by the English preposition of when it is used as it is in the phrases "a man of courage," "a building of glass and steel," or "the father of the boy." (Note that of when it equals about as in "Let us speak of cabbages and kings" is NOT the equivalent of a Greek genitive.)
- (b) also used to indicate motion away from or separation, the idea expressed by such English prepositions as away from or out of.

Thus, the genitive case has two separate basic functions.

- (3) DATIVE CASE: (a) used to show someone or something other than the subject or the direct object of the sentence affected by or interested in an action or a state of being. The relation of this kind of dative to the rest of the sentence can usually be shown by the English prepositions to or for as they are used in the sentences "The boy gives the rose to the girl" or "This is good for the man." (Note that the English preposition to when indicating motion to is NOT the equivalent of a Greek dative.)
- (b) also used to show instrumentality, i.e., the means by which one does something, or accompaniment, the ideas conveyed by the English prepositions by and with when they are used as they are in the phrases "hit by a bat," "written with a pen," or "together with my brother."
- (c) also used to show place where or time when, the idea conveyed by the English prepositions at or in.

Thus, the dative case has three separate basic functions.

- (4) ACCUSATIVE CASE: used as the direct object of verbs, or to convey the idea of motion toward or length of space or of time.
- (5) VOCATIVE CASE: used to show that the noun is being addressed directly, e.g., "John, I like Mary."

SUMMARY OF GREEK CASES

- (1) NOMINATIVE: subject, predicate nominative, naming things
- (2) GENITIVE: of; away from/out of
- (3) DATIVE: to/for; by/with; in/at
- (4) ACCUSATIVE: direct object, motion toward, or length of space or time
- (5) VOCATIVE: shows that a noun is being addressed directly

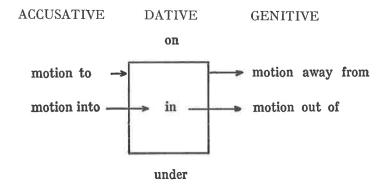

At times, the case alone can express the relation of the noun to the rest of the sentence, e.g., when the dative shows instrumentality (by/with), no preposition is used in Greek. At other times, a preposition is used with the case, e.g., the dative showing place where usually needs the preposition $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$, "in."

The following diagram shows the relation between the nominative, accusative, and dative cases in a simple sentence with a transitive verb:

NOMINATIVE—	verb	→ ACCUSATIVE7	DATIVE
Subject		Direct Object	Interested Party
The girl	gives	the rose	to the boy.
The boy	does	this	for his father.

In both these English sentences, the relation of each of the nouns to the rest of the sentence is shown by word order and prepositions. In Greek all of these relations would be shown by the endings. The same grammatical relations could be expressed by the endings with the words in different order and the different word order would show different emphasis.

The accusative, genitive, and dative cases can indicate movement or lack of movement in space and time. The accusative shows motion toward a place; the genitive, motion away from a place; and the dative, the absence of motion, i.e., location in a place. Since there can be various types of motion away from or toward a place, or of location (e.g., "away from the inside of" in contrast to "away from the outside of"), prepositions are often used to specify the general notions of these cases. The following diagram represents the relations among these cases:

5. DECLENSIONS OF NOUNS

The vocabulary entry for each noun consists of its nominative and genitive forms, an article which indicates the noun's gender, and the English meaning of the word. Thus the vocabulary entry " $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$, $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$... art, skill, craft" consists of the following four items:

- (1) $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta = \text{nominative singular}$
- (2) $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta \varsigma = \text{genitive singular}$
- (3) η = nominative feminine singular of the article, which shows that the gender of the noun is feminine
- (4) the English meaning(s) of the word.

TO DECLINE ANY NOUN, TAKE THE GENITIVE SINGULAR, REMOVE THE GENITIVE SINGULAR ENDING TO GET THE STEM, AND THEN ADD THE PROPER SET OF ENDINGS TO THE STEM.

There are three different patterns of endings for Greek nouns, each of which is called a declension. Each noun belongs to only one declension and can have only the endings that belong to that particular declension. Those nouns most of whose endings use the vowels $-\eta$ - or $-\bar{a}$ - belong to the first declension. Those nouns most of whose endings use the vowel -o- belong to the second declension. The remaining nouns form the third declension.

14. FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS (Nominative in $-\eta$ or $-\bar{a}$)

Most of the nouns of the first declension end in $-\eta$ or $-\bar{a}$ in the nominative singular; $-\bar{a}$ will be found only in nouns whose stems end in ε , ι , or ϱ . All first-declension nouns ending in $-\eta$ or $-\bar{a}$ are feminine. The first-declension $-\eta$ and $-\bar{a}$ endings are:

NOMINATIVE SINGULAR GENITIVE DATIVE ACCUSATIVE VOCATIVE	-ท -ทง -ท -ท	-ā -āら -ā -āv -ā
NOMINATIVE PLURAL GENITIVE	-αι -ῶν	-αι -ῶν
DATIVE	-αις	-αις
ACCUSATIVE	-āç	- āς
VOCATIVE	-αι	-αι

Thus, to decline $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$, $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "art," take the genitive singular $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta \varsigma$, remove the genitive singular ending $-\eta \varsigma$ to get the stem $\tau \epsilon \chi \nu$, and add the appropriate endings to the stem. (A model inflection of a noun or a verb, such as that of $\tau \acute{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$ given below, is called a paradigm.)

NOMINATIVE SINGULAR	τέχν η	(an) art as subject, predicate nominative
GENITIVE	τέχνης	of (an) art; from (an) art (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")
DATIVE	τέχνη	to/for (an) art; by/with (an) art; in (an) art (with the preposition &v, "in")
ACCUSATIVE	τέχνην	(an) art as direct object, object of certain prepositions
VOCATIVE	τέχν η	art being addressed directly
NOMINATIVE PLURAL	τέχναι	arts as subject, predicate nominative
GENITIVE	τεχνῶν	of arts; from arts (with the preposition èx, "from")
DATIVE	τέχναις	to/for arts; by/with arts; in arts (with the preposition &v, "in")
ACCUSATIVE	τέχν ας	arts as direct object, object of certain prepositions
VOCATIVE	$ au \dot{\epsilon} \chi v \alpha$ ι	arts being addressed directly

- Observations: (1) Greek does not have an indefinite article like the English "a, an." Such an indefinite article must occasionally be supplied in an English translation.
 - (2) THE ACCENT OF NOUNS IS AS A RULE PERSISTENT. Thus, the accent of $\tau \acute{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$ is given by the nominative singular and stays on the $-\varepsilon$ of the penult except in the genitive plural, which is an exception to the rule. The Genitive plural of all first-declension nouns is $-\tilde{\omega}\nu$ with a circumflex accent on the ultima. Whenever the accent on an ending violates the rules for persistent or recessive accent, the accent will be indicated on the ending when it is first given (cf. $-\tilde{\omega}\nu$ on page 21).

Compare the declension of $\tau \acute{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$ with that of $\chi \acute{\omega} \varrho \bar{a}$, $\chi \acute{\omega} \varrho \bar{a} \varsigma$, $\mathring{\eta}$, "land." Note the use of abbreviations for the names of the cases and for singular and plural. Note also that when the vocative is the same as the nominative it will be given with the nominative. The vocative is the same as the nominative in the plural of all nouns.

Nom./Voc. S	$ au \acute{arepsilon} \chi u oldsymbol{\eta}$	$χώ \varrho \bar{\mathbf{a}}$

Acc.	τέχνην	χώ وαν
Nom./Voc. P	τέχναι	χῶوαι
Nom./Voc. P Gen.	τέχναι τεχν ῶν	χωρ ων
	• •

Observations: (1) There is no difference in meaning between first-declension nouns ending in $-\eta$ and those in $-\bar{\alpha}$. Originally, all such nouns ended in $-\bar{\alpha}$. In Attic Greek, this $-\bar{\alpha}$ changed to $-\eta$ except after ε , ι , or ϱ .

- (2) Note that the form $\chi \omega \rho \bar{a} \varsigma$ can be either genitive singular or accusative plural. Context usually allows one to distinguish the two cases.
- (3) First-declension nouns differ only in the singular. ALL FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS FOLLOW THE SAME PATTERN IN THE PLURAL.
- (4) The diphthong $-\alpha\iota$ when final (at the end of a word) counts as a SHORT VOWEL for purposes of accentuation. Hence in the nominative plural $\chi \tilde{\omega} \varrho a\iota$ the accent changes from an acute to a circumflex, since the penult is accented and contains a long vowel, and the diphthong of the ultima counts as short for purposes of accentuation.
- (5) Once again, note that, as with all first-declension nouns, the genitive plural ending is $-\tilde{\omega}\nu$ with a circumflex accent on the ultima.

When a first-declension noun has an acute accent on the ultima in the nominative, the accent is changed to a circumflex in the genitive and dative, in both the singular and the plural. Compare the declension of $\psi \bar{\nu} \chi \dot{\eta}$, $\psi \bar{\nu} \chi \ddot{\eta} \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "soul," and $\dot{\alpha} \gamma o \varrho \ddot{\alpha} \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "market place," with those of the words learned thus far.

Acc.	τέχνᾶς	ψῦχάς	χώ ο ̄ας	ἀγοράς

Drill I.1-10, page 34, may now be done.

15. SECOND-DECLENSION NOUNS

Nouns of the second declension have either the nominative singular ending $-o\varsigma$ for masculine and (more rarely) feminine nouns, or $-o\nu$ for the neuter. The endings for the second declension are:

	Masculine/Feminine	Neuter
Nom. S	-05	-ov
Gen.	-ის	-00
Dat.	-φ	-ယု
Acc.	-ov	-ov
Voc.	-€	-07
Nom./Voc. P	-ot	-α
Gen.	-ων	-ων
Dat.	-oig	-015
Acc.	-ის ς	-ar

Thus, to decline $\lambda \delta \gamma o \varsigma$, $\lambda \delta \gamma o v$, δ , "word," take the genitive singular $\lambda \delta \gamma o v$, remove the genitive singular ending -ov to get the stem $\lambda o \gamma$ -, and add the masculine/feminine declension endings to get:

Nom. S	λόγος	(a) word as subject, predicate nominative
Gen.	λόγ ου	of (a) word; from a word (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")
Dat.	λόγφ	to/for (a) word; by/with (a) word; in (a) word (with the preposition $\hat{\epsilon}v$, "in")
Acc.	λόγ ον	(a) word as direct object, object of certain prepositions
Voc.	λόγε	word being addressed directly
Nom./Voc. P	λόγοι	words as subject, predicate nominative, or being addressed directly
Gen.	λόγων	of words; from words (with the preposition êx, "from")
Dat.	λόγοις	to/for words; by/with words; in words (with the preposition $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$, "in")
Acc.	λόγ ους	words as direct object, object of certain prepositions
Observations: (1)	nominat	ative singular has a form different from that of the ive singular. In the plural, as in all nouns, the nomind the vocative are the same.
(2)		at the accent in the genitive plural does NOT shift cumflex on the ultima as in the first declension.

To decline the neuter noun $\ell\varrho\gamma\sigma\nu$, $\ell\varrho\gamma\sigma\nu$, $\ell\varrho\gamma\sigma\nu$, "work," take the genitive singular $\ell\varrho\gamma\sigma\nu$, drop the genitive singular ending $-\sigma\nu$ to get the stem $\ell\varrho\gamma$, and add the neuter declension endings to the stem to get:

Nom./Voc. S	ἔργον	(a) work as subject, predicate nominative, or being addressed directly
Gen.	ἔογου	of (a) work; from (a) work (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")
Dat.	ἔۅγφ	to/for (a) work; by/with (a) work; in (a) work (with the preposition $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$, "in")
Acc.	ἔ  ۅγ ον	(a) work as direct object, object of certain prepositions
Nom./Voc. P	ἔργα	works as subject, predicate nominative, or being addressed directly
Gen.	ἔϩγων	of works; from works (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")
Dat.	ἔϱγοις	to/for works; by/with works; in works (with the preposition èv, "in")
Acc.	ἔργα	works as direct object, object of certain prepositions

- Observations: (1) IN ALL NEUTER NOUNS, THE ACCUSATIVE AND THE VOCATIVE ARE THE SAME AS THE NOMINATIVE, BOTH IN THE SINGULAR AND IN THE PLURAL.
 - (2) THE NOMINATIVE/VOCATIVE AND ACCUSATIVE PLURAL ENDING OF ALL NEUTER NOUNS IS $-\alpha$.

The paradigms of the second-declension nouns given above are uncomplicated by questions of accentuation. To see how inflection can affect accent, compare the declension of $\lambda \delta \gamma o \varsigma$ with that of the following second-declension nouns:

ἄνθρωπος, ἀνθρώπου, δ man ἀδελφός, ἀδελφοῦ, δ brother νῆσος, νήσου, ἡ island δῶρον, δώρου, τό gift

Nom. S	λόγος	ἄνθοωπ ος	$\dot{a}\delta \varepsilon \lambda \varphi$ ός	$ν \tilde{\eta} \sigma$ ος	$\delta ilde{\omega} \varrho$ ov
Gen.	λόγ ου	ἀνθοώπ ου	$d\delta ε \lambda φ$ ο $ ilde{oldsymbol{o}}$	$v\eta\sigma$ ου	$\delta \acute{\omega} \varrho$ ov
Dat.	λόγφ	ἀνθοώπ ω	$\dot{a}\delta \epsilon \lambda \phi$ $m{ ilde{\omega}}$	νήσω	$\delta\omega\varrho\mathbf{\omega}$
Acc.	λόγ ον	ἄνθ οωπ ον	$\dot{a}\delta \varepsilon \lambda \varphi$ όν	νῆσ ον	$\delta ilde{\omega} arrho$ ov
Voc.	λόγ€	ἄνθρωπ€	$\mathring{a}\delta \varepsilon \lambda \varphi \mathbf{\epsilon}$	$v\tilde{\eta}\sigma$ ϵ	$\delta ilde{\omega} arrho$ ov
Nom./Voc. P	λόγοι	ἄνθ οωπ οι	ἀδελφ οί	νῆσοι	$\delta ilde{\omega} arrho oldsymbol{lpha}$
Gen.	λόγων	ἀνθοώπ ων	$\dot{a}\delta \epsilon \lambda \phi$ $\tilde{\omega}$ ν	νήσων	δώρων
Dat.	λόγοις	ἀνθ  οώπ οις	$\dot{a}\delta$ ελ φ οῖς	νήσοις	δώροις
Acc.	λόγους	ἀνθοώπ ους	$\dot{a}\delta arepsilon \lambda \varphi$ ούς	νήσους	$\delta ilde{\omega} arrho oldsymbol{lpha}$

- Observations: (1) The accent of nouns is by rule persistent and is given by the nominative singular. Thus, in $\tilde{\alpha}\nu\theta\varrho\omega\pi\sigma\nu$, the accusative singular of $\tilde{\alpha}\nu\theta\varrho\omega\pi\sigma\varsigma$, the accent is the same as that on the nominative, since the ending $-\sigma\nu$ contains a short vowel which allows the accent to remain on the antepenult. In those endings which contain a long vowel or diphthong, the accent cannot remain on the antepenult but must move to the penult.
 - (2) Just as the diphthong $-\alpha\iota$ when final counts as a short vowel for purposes of accentuation (cf. the first-declension nominative plural $\chi \tilde{\omega} \varrho \alpha\iota$), so too the diphthong $-o\iota$ when final also counts as short for purposes of accentuation. This allows the accent to remain an acute on the antepenult in the nominative plural $\tilde{\alpha}\nu\theta\varrho\omega\pi o\iota$.

- (3) As in the first declension, when a second-declension noun has an acute accent on the ultima in the nominative singular, the accent is changed to a circumflex in the genitive and the dative, both in the singular and in the plural. The change in accent from $\mathring{a}\delta\varepsilon\lambda\varphi\acute{o}\varsigma$ to $\mathring{a}\delta\varepsilon\lambda\varphi\acute{o}\widetilde{v}$ is similar to the change in accent from $\psi\bar{v}\chi\acute{\eta}$ to $\psi\bar{v}\chi\~{\eta}\varsigma$ in the first declension.
- (4) The accent on the vocative singular ἄδελφε is an exception which must be learned separately. Other words, however, of the second declension which accent the ultima of the nominative do keep the accent on the ultima in the vocative (cf. δδέ, the vocative singular of δδός, δδοῦ, ἡ, "road, way").
- (5) The changing accents on νῆσος and δῶρον are governed by the rules for circumflex accent. In the nominative singular of both nouns, the penult is accented and contains a long vowel while the ultima contains a short vowel; the circumflex accent is thus required. Whenever the ending contains a long vowel or a diphthong, the accent cannot remain a circumflex on the penult, but must change to an acute (e.g., νήσον, νήσω, δώροις). Remember that the diphthong -οι when final counts as short for purposes of accentuation; hence the circumflex accent on the nominative/vocative plural νῆσοι.

Drills I.11-25 and II, pages 34-35, may now be done.

16. THE ARTICLE

1. DECLENSION

Greek has an article which is roughly equivalent to the English article "the." The Greek article has different endings for the different genders, numbers, and cases. (In the paradigm which follows note the abbreviations M, F, and N for masculine, feminine, and neuter.)

	M	F	N
Nom. S	δ	ή	$ au \acute{o}$
Gen.	$ au o ilde{v}$	$ au ilde{\eta}arsigma$	$\tau o \tilde{v}$
Dat.	$ au ilde{\phi}$	$ au ilde{\eta}$	$ au ilde{\phi}$
Acc.	τόν	τήν	τό
Nom. P	οί	ai	τά
Gen.	$ au ilde{\omega} u$	$ au ilde{\omega} ilde{v}$	$\tau \tilde{\omega} \nu$
Dat.	$ au o ilde{\iota} arsigma$	$ au a ilde{\iota} arsigma$	$\tau o \tilde{\imath} \varsigma$
Acc.	τούς	$ au oldsymbol{lpha}arsigma$	aulpha

- Observations: (1) The similarity of the endings of the article to those of the nouns of the first and second declensions should be obvious. Note, however, the absence of the final $-\varsigma$ in the masculine singular nominative and the absence of final $-\nu$ in the neuter singular nominative and accusative.
 - (2) The masculine and feminine nominative, both singular and plural, have neither the initial τ which appears in the rest of the forms nor an accent. Such words without accents, which are pronounced closely with the following word, are called proclitics.
 - (3) Note the change in accent from an acute to a circumflex in the genitive and dative, both singular and plural.

2. AGREEMENT OF ARTICLE AND NOUN

The article agrees with the noun it modifies in gender, number, and case. This agreement is grammatical; any external identity of ending is merely coincidental. Thus in the phrase $\tau o \dot{v}_{\varsigma} \, \dot{a} r \theta \varrho \dot{\omega} \pi o v_{\varsigma}$ the article and the noun have the same gender (masculine), number (plural), and case (accusative) and have endings that look identical. Yet in the phrase $\tau \dot{a}_{\varsigma} \, v \dot{\eta} \sigma o v_{\varsigma}$ the article and the noun also agree in gender (feminine), number (plural), and case (accusative), although the endings do not look identical.

Drill III, page 35, may now be done.

3. ATTRIBUTIVE POSITION

Any words which limit or cepend upon a noun (e.g., genitives, prepositional phrases, and adjectives) and which are preceded by an article which agrees in gender, number, and case with that noun are said to be in the attributive position. There are three varieties of attributive position.

- (1) Words in the attributive position can appear between the article and the noun with which it agrees:
 - (a) οί τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ λόγοι

the words of the brother

(b) οί ἐν τῆ χώρᾳ ἀδελφοί

the brothers in the country

- (2) Sometimes the article is repeated after the noun and the words in the attributive position follow the repeated article:
 - (c) οί λόγοι οί τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ

the words of the brother

(d) οἱ ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ἐν τῆ χώρᾳ

the brothers in the country

When the article is repeated and the words in the attributive position follow it, greater emphasis is placed on the noun, and the words in the attributive position seem to come as an afterthought. To translate the last example given above as "the brothers, [I mean] the ones in the country," would be to exaggerate the effect, but it gives some idea of the difference between examples (b) and (d).

- (3) Sometimes even, the article does not appear before the noun, but only after it:
 - (e) λόγοι οἱ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ words, the ones of the brother

(f) ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ἐν τῆ χώρᾳ brothers, the ones in the country

In the last two examples the words in the attributive position are even more of an afterthought.

The genitive showing possession usually appears in the attributive position but may appear outside of it.

4. USE OF THE ARTICLE

(1) The article is used in Greek to point out particular individuals:

δ ἀδελφός

the brother

τοῖς ἀνθρώποις

for the men (particular men)

(2) The article is also used with generic classes:

τοῖς ἀνθρώποις

for men (all men)

Context will usually make clear whether the article is particular or generic.

(3) The article is used with abstract nouns:

ή ἀρετή

(The article with abstract nouns is sometimes omitted in Greek as it always is in English.)

(4) The article can be used with names of persons famous or previously mentioned:

δ "Ομηρος Homer

(5) Where the context makes it clear, the article can be used where English uses the possessive pronoun:

δ "Ομη
ρος παιδεύει τὸν ἀδελφόν.

Homer educates his brother.

δ "Ομηρος δ $\tilde{\omega}$ ρα τ $\tilde{\omega}$ ἀδελφ $\tilde{\omega}$ πέμπει. Homer sends gifts to his brother.

(6) The article is often not used in Greek with words that refer to something unique and well known:

ἐν ἀγορᾳ in the market place (There was only one main market place in Athens.)

Note: in the two sentences given above in (5), there are two verb forms which will be used to make sentences in the Drills and Exercises of this Unit: $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \epsilon \iota$, "educates," and $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi \epsilon \iota$, "sends." These verb forms will be fully explained in Unit 2.

17. WORD ORDER

The basic grammatical relations of subject, verb, and direct object are shown in Greek by the inflection of nouns and verbs. Word order is free to express emphasis, contrast, balance, and variety. Much of this can be seen only in the context of whole paragraphs. Consider, however, the following variations on the idea "Homer educates his brother."

- (a) δ "Ομηρος τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεύει.
- (b) παιδεύει δ "Ομηρος τον άδελφόν.
- (c) τὸν ἀδελφὸν ὁ "Ομηρος παιδεύει.

The first example can be considered neutral word order. The subject more often than not does precede the verb, as does the direct object. The second example puts greater emphasis on the verb; it would be a good answer to the question, "What does Homer do?" "Homer educates his brother." The third example puts emphasis on the direct object; it would be a good answer to the question, "Whom does Homer educate?" "Homer educates his brother." "It is his brother Homer educates."

Drill IV, pages 35-36, may now be done.

VOCABULARY NOTES

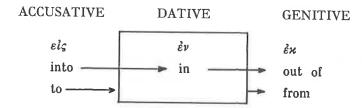

The word $d\gamma o \rho d$, $d\gamma o \rho d c$, η designated a good deal more than just a "market place"; it was a combination of shopping center, civic center, and cultural center.

In $d\delta \varepsilon \lambda \varphi \delta \zeta$, $d\delta \varepsilon \lambda \varphi \delta \tilde{v}$, δ , "brother," note the shift in accent in the vocative singular: $d\delta \varepsilon \lambda \varphi \varepsilon$.

ἄνθρωπος, ἀνθρώπον, δ generally means "man" as opposed to a god or an animal; hence the second meaning given, "human being."

Not all $\delta\tilde{\omega}\varrho\alpha$ (nom./acc./voc. plural of $\delta\tilde{\omega}\varrho\sigma\nu$, $\delta\dot{\omega}\varrho\sigma\nu$, $\tau\delta$, "gift") were, of course, bribes; but in a political or legal context, this is a frequent meaning of the word.

The prepositions $\varepsilon l \zeta$, $\varepsilon \varkappa$, and εv are proclitics, as are the forms δ , η , of and all of the definite article. These three prepositions fit the diagram on page 20 which illustrates the relations among the cases when they indicate movement or lack of movement:

Before words beginning with a consonant, $\dot{\epsilon}\varkappa$ is used; $\dot{\epsilon}\xi$ is used before words beginning with a vowel or diphthong: $\dot{\epsilon}\varkappa$ $\tau\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$ $oi\varkappa l\tilde{a}\varsigma$ but $\dot{\epsilon}\xi$ $\dot{a}\gamma o\varrho\tilde{a}\varsigma$.

When used with $\nu\tilde{\eta}\sigma\sigma\varsigma$, $\nu\dot{\eta}\sigma\sigma\upsilon$, $\dot{\eta}$, "island," $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ means "on": $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\tau\tilde{\eta}$ $\nu\dot{\eta}\sigma\omega$, "on the island."

In addition to indicating motion toward a place, $\varepsilon i \varsigma$ can indicate purpose, "for": "They put on their armor $\varepsilon i \varsigma \mu \acute{a} \chi \eta \nu$ (for battle)."

The word $\theta \varepsilon \delta \zeta$, $\theta \varepsilon \delta \tilde{v}$, δ or $\tilde{\eta}$ can be either masculine or feminine, "god" or "goddess." Assume that the word is masculine unless feminine gender is indicated by a word that agrees with it, e.g., $\tau \tilde{\eta} \zeta \theta \varepsilon \delta \tilde{v}$, "of the goddess."

When $\varkappa a i$ connects two words, phrases, clauses, or sentences, it is a conjunction and means "and": " $O\mu\eta\varrho\sigma\varsigma$ $\varkappa\alpha i$ δ $\delta\delta\epsilon\lambda\varphi\delta\varsigma$, "Homer and his brother." When $\varkappa a i$ is used with only one item, it is an adverb and means "even" or "also": $\varkappa\alpha i$ " $O\mu\eta\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, "even/also Homer." In $\varkappa a i$... $\varkappa a i$, the first $\varkappa a i$ is translated as "both" and the second by "and": $\varkappa\alpha i$ " $O\mu\eta\varrho\sigma\varsigma$ $\varkappa\alpha i$ δ $\delta\delta\epsilon\lambda\varphi\delta\varsigma$, "both Homer and his brother."

Of the many possible English translations of $\lambda \delta \gamma o \varsigma$, $\lambda \delta \gamma o v$, δ , only a few are given here. The word is a verbal noun related to the verb for "say" and can mean "anything one says" from an individual word (actually a fairly rare meaning of the word) to a whole speech or story. Among other additional meanings are "account" (both in the sense of "narrative" and "accounting") and "reason" (both as "explanation or justification" and as "the faculty with which one decides something").

Note the feminine gender of $v\tilde{\eta}\sigma\sigma\varsigma$, $v\dot{\eta}\sigma\sigma\upsilon$, $\dot{\eta}$, "island," and $\delta\delta\dot{\sigma}\varsigma$, $\delta\delta\sigma\tilde{v}$, $\dot{\eta}$, "road"; most second-declension nouns are masculine.

The forms of the article δ , η , of and αl are proclitics; for the use of the article, see Section 16.4, pages 29-30.

The verb $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \epsilon \iota$ is a denominative, i.e., it is formed from a noun stem by the addition of a suffix. The noun in question is the noun for "child," and $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \epsilon \iota$ means doing what one does to a child, "educates, teaches."

τέχνη, τέχνης, ή ranges from the "skill, craft" of a plumber to the "art" of a Michelangelo; it is essentially the "knowing how to do something."

 χ ώ ϱ ā, χ ώ ϱ āς, $\dot{\eta}$ can mean anything from "space" or "spot" to "land, country." As "country," the word has the sense of "country" as nation or "country" as opposed to city.

 $\psi \bar{v} \chi \dot{\eta}$, $\psi \bar{v} \chi \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$ means "soul" as vital principle (= life) or as personality.

The interjection $\tilde{\omega}$ is the normally polite way of attracting the attention of someone addressed in the vocative case; it should not be translated. When it is absent in Greek prose, "o" should be supplied in English.

COGNATES AND DERIVATIVES

English has many words which are related to Greek words. Those words which developed in both languages from a common ancestor (e.g., "father," $\pi\alpha\tau\eta\varrho$) are called cognates. Those words that English borrowed from Greek either directly, or through Latin, or by using Greek roots to make a new English word are called derivatives. Knowing cognates and derivatives can aid one in memorizing Greek vocabulary. Cognates will be listed in italics.

In the list of words which follows, note how the Greek letters have been adapted to English.

άγορά agoraphobia (fear of public places)

 $\delta \tilde{\omega} \varrho o v$ Dorothy, Theodore (gift of a god)

 $\varepsilon i \varsigma$ Istanbul (to the city)

18. VERBS: OVERVIEW

The Greek verb, like the Greek noun, is inflected: just as nouns add endings to a stem in order to produce different case forms, so do verbs add endings to various stems in order to produce the various possible forms. A noun has a declension and is declined; a verb has a conjugation and is conjugated.

Most verb forms have:

- (1) PERSON
- (2) NUMBER
- (3) TENSE (which can show TIME and ASPECT)
- (4) MOOD
- (5) VOICE

1. PERSON

A verb is in the first person if the subject is "I" or "we," the second person if the subject is "you," and the third person if the subject is "he," "she," "it," "they," "the man," "the men," etc.

2. NUMBER

Verbs which have person are either singular, when the subject is a single person or thing ("I," "you," "he," "she," "it," "Homer," etc.), or plural, when the subject is more than one person or thing ("we," "you," "they," "the men," etc.).

Originally Greek verbs, like Greek nouns, had another number, the dual, which indicated a pair of subjects. The dual is rare in Attic Greek; its forms are given in the Appendix.

3. TENSE

Tense ALWAYS conveys information about aspect and SOMETIMES conveys information about aspect and time.

(1) TIME

Time is present, past, or future. Cf. the English sentences "I fall," "I fell," "I shall fall."

(2) ASPECT

Aspect indicates how the occurrence of the action is viewed: whether the action simply occurs, is in progress, is repeated, or is already completed. The following English sentences will illustrate this.

- (1) We fell.
- (2) We were falling.
- (3) We used to fall.
- (4) We had fallen.

These verbal expressions are the same in person (first), number (plural), and time (past). They differ only in aspect.

The verb in sentence (1) presents the action plainly and simply and has simple aspect; the verb in sentence (2) presents the action as being in progress and has progressive aspect; the verb in sentence (3) presents the action as repeated or habitual and has repeated aspect; the verb in sentence (4) presents the action as already completed and has completed aspect.

Greek verbs express both progressive and repeated aspect by a single form. Thus Greek verbs have the following three aspects:

simple aspect progressive/repeated aspect completed aspect

Verb forms having progressive/repeated aspect must be translated, according to context, either as having progressive aspect or as having repeated aspect.

In the indicative mood (the mood of factual statements and questions: see Section 18. 4[1] below) the tense of a Greek verb expresses a certain combination of time and aspect.

Greek has seven tenses in the indicative mood:

- The present tense describes an action in present time with progressive/repeated aspect ("I am falling"; "I fall [habitually]").
- (2) The future tense describes an action in future time and can have either simple aspect ("I shall fall") or progressive/repeated aspect ("I shall be falling"; "I shall fall [habitually]").
- (3) The perfect tense, whose name comes from the Latin word for "completed," describes an action in present time and always has completed aspect ("I have fallen").

(4) The pluperfect tense, whose name comes from the Latin expression for "more than completed," and which is also called the past perfect tense, describes an action in past time and always has completed aspect ("I had fallen").

The difference in time between the perfect tense and the pluperfect tense is emphasized by the adverbs in the following examples: "I have now fallen" (present time).

"I had then fallen" (past time).

- (5) The future perfect tense describes an action in future time and always has completed aspect ("I shall have fallen"). This tense is rare in Greek and is not given in this text.
- (6) The imperfect tense, whose name comes from the Latin word for "uncompleted," describes an action in past time and always has progressive/repeated aspect ("I was falling"; "I used to fall," "I fell [habitually]").
- (7) The aorist tense describes an action in past time and always has simple aspect ("I fell"). It describes an event which happens once and for all.

The chart below shows how these tenses express the possible combinations of time and aspect. The meanings of the tenses are given by the English verb "fall."

	SIMPLE ASPECT	PROGRESSIVE REPEATED ASPECT	COMPLETED ASPECT
PRESENT TIME		PRESENT TENSE I am falling I fall (habitually)	PERFECT TENSE I have fallen
PAST TIME	AORIST TENSE I fell	IMPERFECT TENSE I was falling I used to fall I fell (habitually)	PLUPERFECT TENSE I had fallen
FUTURE TIME	FUTURE TENSE I shall fall	FUTURE TENSE I shall be falling I shall fall (habitually)	FUTURE PER- FECT TENSE I shall have fallen

42 Unit 2

Note that the future tense can express both simple aspect and progressive/repeated aspect. The context will help to determine the appropriate translation.

Note also that in English the translation of Greek verbs with simple aspect and repeated aspect can be the same: "I fell," for example, can mean that I fell on one occasion (simple aspect) or that I fell habitually (repeated aspect). Contrast the sentences "I fell at 2:15 p.m. yesterday" and "I fell every time I walked on the ice": Greek requires an aorist for the verb of the first, an imperfect for the verb of the second. By itself the English "I fell" is ambiguous, but the Greek forms are not. One must take special care when translating such English expressions into Greek.

Those tenses which, in the indicative mood, describe actions in present time or future time are called primary tenses. These are the present, future, perfect, and future perfect tenses (the top and bottom lines of the chart).

Those tenses which, in the indicative mood, describe actions in past time are called secondary tenses. These are the aorist, imperfect, and pluperfect tenses (the middle line of the chart).

In the indicative mood, the secondary tenses of the verb, those which express past time, receive the past indicative augment. This consists of the vowel \dot{e} - prefixed to the appropriate stem where that stem begins with a consonant. The past indicative augment is the sign of a factual statement or question in past time.

Drill I, page 58, may now be done.

4. MOOD

Mood indicates the type of statement which one is making: factual, hypothetical, wishful, commanding, and so forth. The Greek verb has four moods: indicative, subjunctive, optative, and imperative.

(1) THE INDICATIVE MOOD

The indicative mood is the mood of factual statements and factual questions. The verb forms encountered so far are in the indicative mood.

(2) THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD

Unlike verbs in the indicative mood, verbs in the subjunctive mood cannot be translated according to any fixed formula. Their meaning varies considerably with the type of clause or sentence in which they appear.

The following English expressions will give an idea of the range of meanings which Greek verbs in the subjunctive mood can have.

If we see in order that we may see . . . Let us see!

The subjunctive mood will be introduced in Section 31.

SECTION 18 43

(3) THE OPTATIVE MOOD

Like verbs in the subjunctive mood, verbs in the optative mood cannot be translated according to any fixed formula.

The following English expressions will give an idea of the range of meanings which Greek verbs in the optative mood can have.

If we should see . . .

We might see . . .

May we always see the truth!

The optative mood will be introduced in Section 31.

(4) THE IMPERATIVE MOOD

Verbs in the imperative mood give a command.

Look! See!

The imperative mood will be introduced in Section 89.

5. VOICE

Voice defines the way in which the subject of the verb is involved in the action of the verb. The subject can be performing the action (active voice), receiving the action from some outside agency (passive voice), or (in Greek) performing the action with a special personal involvement (middle voice).

(1) THE ACTIVE VOICE

When a verb is in the active voice the subject performs the action indicated.

The man walks down the street.

When no direct object of the action is specified, a verb in the active voice is intransitive.

Homer educates.

When a direct object is specified, a verb in the active voice is transitive.

Homer educates his brother.

(2) THE PASSIVE VOICE

When a verb is in the passive voice the subject receives the action indicated.

Homer is educated by his brother.

The passive voice will be introduced in Section 43.

(3) THE MIDDLE VOICE

Greek also has a middle voice. Like the active voice, the middle voice indicates that the subject performs the action. But the subject has a special interest in the action; the action somehow returns to the subject.

44 UNIT 2

The nuance added by the middle voice varies from verb to verb and cannot be translated by any fixed formula. Greek would employ the middle voice, for example, to indicate that Homer, instead of merely performing the act of educating his brother (active voice), was doing so for an ulterior motive of his own, or that Homer, instead of personally educating his brother, was having someone else educate him.

The middle voice will be introduced in Section 57.

19. PRINCIPAL PARTS

The minimum number of forms which one must know in order to generate all possible forms of a verb are called the principal parts of that verb. In English there are three principal parts: e.g., sing, sang, sung; do, did, done; bake, baked,

The Greek verb has six principal parts. ALL must be learned whenever a new verb is encountered. Although the principal parts of a given verb often resemble each other, no principal part can be derived from any other principal part.

From these six forms, according to rules which will be presented below and in later sections, various tense stems are derived. To these tense stems various sets of endings are added in order to produce all the possible forms of a verb.

Here are the principal parts of one Greek verb:

I. Form:

παιδεύω Translation:

I am educating, I educate Identification: first person singular, present indicative active

Form: II.

παιδεύσω

Translation:

I shall educate, I shall be educating

Identification:

first person singular,

future indicative active

III. Form:

έπαίδευσα

Translation:

I educated

Identification:

first person singular,

aorist indicative active

IV. Form:

πεπαίδευκα

Translation:

I have educated

Identification:

first person singular,

perfect indicative active

V. Form:

πεπαίδευμαι

Translation: Identification:

I have been educated first person singular, perfect indicative passive

VI. Form:

έπαιδεύθην

Translation: Identification:

I was educated first person singular,

aorist indicative passive

All Greek verbs are named by Principal Part I. Thus the forms given above are the principal parts of the verb $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$.

All verb forms are to be identified as in the list above: person, number, tense, mood, voice.

The rules for deriving tense stems from principal parts are the same for most verbs, as are the sets of endings which must be added to these tense stems.

Thus the verb $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ will serve as a paradigm or example of the conjugation of many Greek verbs.

20. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the present indicative active, obtain the present tense stem by dropping the ending $-\omega$ from Principal Part I. To this stem add the following endings, which indicate person and number:

	SINGULAR (S)	PLURAL (P)
FIRST PERSON (1)	-ω	-ομεν
SECOND PERSON (2)) -εις	-ετε
THIRD PERSON (3)) -€ι	-ουσι or -ουσιν

Note: the letter \mathbf{v} , called nu-movable, may be added to certain endings of nouns and verbs when the following word begins with a vowel, or at the end of a sentence. Henceforth in paradigms this letter, which may be added to the third person plural ending above, will be indicated in parentheses thus: $-\mathbf{o}\mathbf{v}\mathbf{\sigma}\mathbf{i}(\mathbf{v})$.

Thus the present tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \omega$ is $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v$, and the forms of the present indicative active are as follows:

	S
1	παιδεύ ω	I am educating I educate
2	παιδεύ εις	you are educating you educate
3	παιδεύ ε ι	he/she/it is educating he/she/it educates
	P
1	παιδεύ ομεν	we are educating we educate
2	παιδεύ ετε	you are educating you educate
3	παιδεύουσι(ν)	they are educating they educate

While most nouns have a persistent accent, which stays over the same vowel unless the rules of the possibilities for accent force it to change its position or its nature, most verb forms have a recessive accent, which falls as far away from the end of the word as the rules of accentuation allow.

The accent on the verb forms above is recessive: $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{v} \varepsilon \iota$, for example, has a long ultima and accents the penult; $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{v} o \mu \varepsilon r$ has a short ultima and accents the antepenult.

Note: Greek, unlike English, has separate forms for the second person singular and plural. It does not use the plural as a polite form of the singular.

21. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the imperfect indicative active, prefix the past indicative augment &- to the present tense stem. To the augmented present tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-ov	-ομεν
2	-€ς	-€τ€
3	-ε (ν)	-ov

Thus the augmented present tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ is $\dot{\epsilon} \pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v$ -, and the forms of the imperfect indicative active are as follows:

έπαίδευον

S 1 έπαίδευον I was educating I used to educate I educated (habitually) 2 you were educating ἐπαίδενες you used to educate you educated (habitually) he/she/it was educating 3 ἐπαίδευ€(ν) he/she/it used to educate he/she/it educated (habitually) P we were educating 1 έπαιδεύομεν we used to educate we educated (habitually) 2 ἐπαιδεύετε you were educating you used to educate you educated (habitually)

Observations: (1) The imperfect tense, which is built upon the present tense stem, is distinguished from the present tense both by the past indicative augment and by its different set of endings. In the first and second persons plural, however, the endings are the same in both tenses.

they were educating they used to educate they educated (habitually)

- (2) The first person singular and third person plural of the imperfect indicative active are identical in form. Context will make the meaning clear.
- (3) The third person singular ending has a nu-movable. Note that the nu of the first person singular and third person plural endings is NOT a nu-movable.
- (4) Many of the endings seen so far consist of two parts: the vowel ε or o, called a thematic vowel (o before μ and ν, ε before other consonants), and a person marker (e.g., -μεν for the first person plural, -τε for the second person plural). When memorizing the sets of endings, memorize the thematic vowel and the person marker together as a unit.

22. FUTURE INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the future indicative active, obtain the future tense stem by dropping the ending $-\omega$ from Principal Part II. To this stem add the same endings as those employed in forming the present indicative active.

Thus, the future tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \omega$ is $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \sigma$ -, and the forms of the future indicative active are as follows:

1	$\pi a \imath \delta arepsilon \acute{v} \sigma \mathbf{\omega}$	I shall educate
		I shall be educating
2	παιδε ύσ εις	you will educate you will be educating
3	παιδεύσ ει	he/she/it will educate he/she/it will be educating
	P
1	παιδεύσ ομεν	we shall educate we shall be educating 2	παιδεύσ ετε	you will educate
		you will be educating
3	παιδεύσουσι(ν)	they will educate they will be educating

Observations: (1) Only the tense stem distinguishes the future indicative active from the present indicative active: cf. παιδεύομεν (first person plural, present indicative active) and παιδεύσομεν (first person plural, future indicative active).

(2) The future tense can have either simple aspect or progressive/ repeated aspect. Thus, for example, παιδεύσομεν can mean either "we shall educate (once)" or "we shall be educating" or "we shall educate (often)."

23. AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist indicative active, drop the ending $-\alpha$ from Principal Part III. There remains the aorist tense stem together with the prefixed past indicative augment. To this augmented aorist tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-α	-αμεν
2	-ας	-ατε
3	-ε(ν)	-αν

Thus the augmented agrist tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$ is $\dot{\epsilon} \pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \sigma$, and the forms of the agrist indicative active are as follows:

	S
1	ἐπαίδε νσ α	I educated
2	ἐπαίδευσ ας	you educated
3	$\dot{\epsilon}\pi a l \delta \epsilon v \sigma \mathbf{\epsilon}(\mathbf{v})$	he/she/it educated
	P
1	Ρ ἐπαιδεύσ αμεν	we educated
1 2	-	we educated you educated

Observations: (1) The agrist tense has simple aspect.

(2) Compare the endings of the aorist indicative active with those of the present and imperfect indicative active. Note that, except for the third person singular, all of the aorist indicative active endings begin with the tense vowel α instead of the thematic vowel ε/o . All of the sets of endings seen so far use the person markers $-\varsigma$ for the second person singular, $-\mu\varepsilon\nu$ for the first person plural, and $-\tau\varepsilon$ for the second person plural.

Drill II, pages 58-59, may now be done.

24. AGREEMENT OF SUBJECT AND VERB

Unlike most English verb forms, each of the Greek verb forms presented above can, without the addition of any noun or pronoun, express a complete subject and predicate: contrast the one Greek word $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} o \mu \epsilon \nu$ with the two English words "we educate."

When a noun or pronoun in the nominative case accompanies the verb in order to specify more clearly or emphatically the subject, that noun or pronoun becomes the only subject and overrides the less definite information conveyed by the verb form itself.

He/She/It is educating. He/She/It educates.

ὁ ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει.
The man is educating.

The man educates.

A SINGULAR NOUN OR PRONOUN REQUIRES A SINGULAR VERB, AND A PLURAL NOUN OR PRONOUN REQUIRES A PLURAL VERB. This is called the agreement of subject and verb.

BUT NEUTER PLURAL NOUNS TAKE SINGULAR VERBS.

οἱ ἄνθρωποι τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς παιδεύουσιν. The men are educating their brothers.

The men educate their brothers.

τὰ τῶν θεῶν ἔργα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους παιδεύει. The deeds of the gods are educating men. The deeds of the gods educate men.

25. QUESTIONS

In Greek, questions are sometimes indicated only by a question mark, and sometimes also by the introductory word $\tilde{a}\rho\alpha$, which is not separately translated.

In the English translation, the auxiliary verb "does" ("did," etc.) must often be employed.

ό ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει; Is the man educating? Does the man educate?

ἄρα δ ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει; Is the man educating? Does the man educate?

26. INFINITIVES AND THEIR USE

Verb forms having person and number are finite: they "limit" the meaning of the verb to a definite person and number. All verb forms introduced so far are finite.

SECTION 26 51

The Greek verb also has non-finite forms which do not specify person or number.

One such form is the infinitive, which usually can be translated by the English infinitive (e.g., "to educate"). The infinitive lacks person, number, and mood, and has only tense and voice. Its function is to name a verbal action.

1. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE

To form the present infinitive active, add to the present tense stem the ending $-\epsilon \iota \nu$.

Thus the present infinitive active of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ is παιδεύεινto be educating to educate (habitually)

This infinitive is in the active voice (cf. the infinitive passive "to be educated") and it is in the present tense. But in the infinitive the present tense does NOT indicate time; it indicates aspect only; its aspect is always progressive/repeated.

2. AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE

To form the agrist infinitive active, obtain the unaugmented agrist tense stem by dropping from Principal Part III both the ending $-\alpha$ and the past indicative augment $\dot{\epsilon}$. To this stem add the ending $-\alpha$.

THE AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE IS ALWAYS ACCENTED ON THE PENULT. The accent on this verbal form is NOT recessive. Note that the final diphthong $-\alpha \iota$, as usual, counts as short for purposes of accentuation.

Thus, the unaugmented agrist tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$ is $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \sigma$ -, and the agrist infinitive active is παιδεῦσαι to educate

In the agrist infinitive active, as in the present infinitive active, tense does NOT indicate time; it indicates aspect only.

The agrist infinitive active has simple aspect: "to educate (once and for all)."

The present infinitive active, by contrast, has progressive/repeated aspect: "to be educating," "to educate (habitually)."

Note that the English infinitive "to educate" can, depending on context, be equivalent either to a Greek present infinitive active or to a Greek agrist infinitive active.

3. USE OF THE INFINITIVE

Greek employs the infinitive just as English does with certain verbs of ordering or commanding. One such Greek verb is $\varkappa \varepsilon \lambda \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$, "order, command."

The Greek infinitive, like the English infinitive, can where appropriate take a direct or indirect object.

τὸν "Ομηφον κελεύετε τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεύειν.

You command Homer to be educating his brother.

You command Homer to educate his brother (habitually).

τον "Ομηφον κελεύετε τον άδελφον παιδεῦσαι.

You command Homer to educate his brother (once and for all).

Other uses of the infinitive will be introduced later.

Drill III, page 59, may now be done.

27. SYNOPSIS

To give a synopsis of a verb, write all six of its principal parts, all of the finite forms of the verb in one person and number, e.g., third person plural, and all the non-finite forms of the verb. Below is given a synopsis of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ in the first person plural. As new verb forms are learned, the synopsis will be expanded. A synopsis is given in each of the self-correcting examinations, the first set of which follows Unit 3.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The preposition $d\pi \delta + \text{gen.}$, "from, away from," since it has an accent, is not a proclitic as are the prepositions e i c, e n, and e n. It differs from the preposition e n in that its primary meaning indicates motion which begins at the boundary of something and moves away, rather than motion which begins within something and moves outside.

The meanings of these two prepositions can, however, overlap.

The particle $\delta\varrho\alpha$ stands first in its clause and shows, along with the question mark (;), that a question is being asked; this particle is not separately translated. One can also ask a question without using $\delta\varrho\alpha$, in which case the question mark alone shows the question. Unlike English, Greek does not change the word order to mark a question (e.g., She is singing./Is she singing?).

The conjunction $\gamma \delta \varrho$, "for," is postpositive (literally, "put after"). It never stands first in its clause but comes after one word or after a whole phrase. It links the entire clause to what preceded. Do not confuse the meaning of $\gamma \delta \varrho$ with the meaning "for" of the dative case.

I like Homer. For Homer is teaching men.

"Ομηρος γὰρ παιδεύει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους. ὁ γὰρ "Ομηρος παιδεύει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους. ὁ "Ομηρος γὰρ παιδεύει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους.

Note that γάρ can come between an article and a noun.

Unlike English, Greek uses such connectives in almost every sentence.

The postpositive conjunction $\delta \acute{e}$, "but," takes the same positions as the postpositive conjunction $\gamma \acute{a}\varrho$. In a series of clauses or sentences, sometimes each is connected with the one before by $\delta \acute{e}$, and this conjunction then has a meaning closer to "and" than "but." For the use of $\delta \acute{e}$ together with the postpositive conjunction $\mu \acute{e}\nu$, see below.

The indeclinable numeral $\xi\xi$, "six," must not be confused with the preposition $\dot{\xi}\varkappa$, $\dot{\xi}\xi$ which is a proclitic and has a smooth breathing. The numeral $\xi\xi$ is not inflected:

oi εξ ανθρωποι the six men των εξ ανθρωπων of the six men

Adverbs such as $\varepsilon \bar{v}$, "well," are not inflected:

"Ομηφος τὸν ἀδελφὸν εὖ παιδεύει. Homer educates his brother well.

When the conjunction $\mathring{\eta}$, "or," is repeated, the first $\mathring{\eta}$ means "either" and the second $\mathring{\eta}$ means "or."

 $^{\prime\prime}O\mu\eta\varrho o\varsigma$ $\mathring{\eta}$ δ $\mathring{a}\delta\varepsilon\lambda\varphi\delta\varsigma$ Homer or his brother $\mathring{\eta}$ $^{\prime\prime}O\mu\eta\varrho o\varsigma$ $\mathring{\eta}$ δ $\mathring{a}\delta\varepsilon\lambda\varphi\delta\varsigma$ either Homer or his brother

Here, for comparison, are the Principal Parts of the four verbs presented in this Unit. Each is discussed in its place below.

I	Π	III	IV	V	VI
κελεύω	κελεύσω	έκέλευσα	κεκέλευκα	κεκέλευσμαι	ἐκελεύσθην
$\lambda ec{v}\omega$	$\lambda \dot{v} \sigma \omega$	$\ddot{e}\lambdaar{v}\sigma a$	λέλυκα	λέλυμαι	έλύθην παιδεύω	παιδεύσω	ἐπαίδευσα	πεπαίδευκα	πεπαίδευμαι	ἐπαιδεύθην
πέμπω	πέμψω	ἔπεμψα	πέπομφα	πέπεμμαι	$ec{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\epsilon}\muarphi\theta\eta u$

Principal Parts II and III often, but not always, have a stem ending in -σ-. Principal Parts IV and V often show reduplication: the initial consonant is doubled, and -ε- is inserted between the two consonants: compare κελεύω with κεκέλευκα. Principal Part VI often has a stem ending in -θ-. Principal Parts III and VI prefix the past indicative augment. REMEMBER THAT ALL PRINCIPAL PARTS OF ALL VERBS MUST BE LEARNED SEPARATELY!

The verb κελεύω, κελεύσω, ἐκέλευσα, κεκέλευκα, κεκέλευσμαι, ἐκελεύσθην, "order, command," takes a direct object, in the accusative case, of the person commanded and an infinitive of the action commanded. Cf. Section 26.

The verb $\lambda \hat{v}\omega$, $\lambda \hat{v}\sigma\omega$, $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda \hat{v}\sigma\alpha$, $\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\lambda v\mu\alpha$, $\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\lambda v\mu\alpha$, $\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\lambda \hat{v}\mu\alpha v$ has the basic meaning "unbind, dissolve" and is cognate with English "loose"; cf. the derivatives "analysis," "dialysis," which involve the mental or physical breaking apart of something. In some contexts $\lambda \hat{v}\omega$ means "destroy (by taking apart)": e.g., to destroy a bridge, to destroy a democracy. Note the change from \bar{v} to v in Principal Parts IV, V, and VI.

The postpositive conjunction $\mu \acute{e}\nu$, "on the one hand," usually indicates the first of a pair of contrasting items, the second of which is picked up in the following clause by $\delta \acute{e}$, which here means "on the other hand."

δ μὲν "Ομηρος παιδεύει, δ δὲ ἀδελφὸς δῶρα πέμπει. Homer, on the one hand, educates; his brother, on the other hand, sends gifts. 56 Unit 2

English would tend to say simply "Homer educates, but his brother sends gifts" or even "Homer educates; his brother sends gifts." But Greek strongly prefers that each clause have its own connective in order to show clearly the structure of the entire statement.

For the Greeks the relationship between guest and host was sacred and carried substantial obligations. Both parties to this relationship were called $\xi \acute{\epsilon} vo\varsigma$. Thus the various meanings of this word.

The adverb $o\vec{v}$, $o\vec{v}\varkappa$, $o\vec{v}\varkappa$, "not," is a proclitic and expresses negation. It normally precedes the word which it negates. The form $o\vec{v}$ appears before words beginning with a consonant; the form $o\vec{v}\varkappa$, before words beginning with a vowel or diphthong with a smooth breathing; and the form $o\vec{v}\varkappa$, before words beginning with a rough breathing (cf. Section 8).

οὐ παιδεύεις. οὐκ ἀδελφός οὐχ "Ομη ϱ ος You do not educate. not a brother not Homer

When it ends a sentence, this adverb has the form ov, taking an acute accent:

παιδεύεις, ἢ οὔ; Do you educate, or not?

In the verb παιδεύω, παιδεύσω, ἐπαίδευσα, πεπαίδευκα, πεπαίδευμαι, ἐπαιδεύθην, "educate, teach," note how Principal Parts I–IV are similar to those of κελεύω, and note the differences in Principal Parts V and VI:

κεκέλευσμαι ἐκελεύσθην πεπαίδευμαι ἐπαιδεύθην

All Principal Parts of all verbs must be learned separately!

The preposition $\pi a \varrho \acute{a}$ refers to relationships involving "the side of . . ." Its basic meanings with the genitive, dative, and accusative cases bring out the force of those cases. This preposition is used most often of people.

παρὰ τοῦ 'Oμήρον from (the side of) Homer παρὰ τῷ 'Oμήρ ϕ by (the side of) Homer; at Homer's house

 $\pi a \rho \dot{a} \tau \dot{o} \nu$ " $O \mu \eta \rho o \nu$ to (the side of) Homer

The genitive shows motion away from; the dative shows place where; the accusative shows motion toward (cf. Section 13.4). In addition, $\pi a \varrho \acute{a}$ with the accusative can show place where or can mean "beyond" or "contrary to" (cf. the English phrase "beyond the law").

In the verb $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi \omega$, $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \psi \omega$, $\ddot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \mu \psi a$, $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \pi o \mu \phi a$, $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \mu \mu a \iota$, $\mathring{\epsilon} \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \phi \theta \eta \nu$, "send," note in Principal Part IV the change in vowel from ϵ to o. This is the same type of vowel change that produced, e.g., English "sing, sang, sung." Such changes tend to form patterns which will become apparent as more verbs are encountered.

Note also that in Principal Parts IV and VI φ replaces π : an aspirated consonant replaces a non-aspirated consonant (cf. Section 8).

In Principal Part V note the absence of a labial before the -μαι of πέπεμμαι. The form was originally *πέπεμπμαι, which was simplified to πέπεμμαι. (An * in front of a form means that it is not attested but has been reconstructed.)

The preposition $\pi \varrho \delta$ + genitive indicates that something is ahead of something else either spatially or in time:

πρὸ τῆς οἰκίᾶς

in front of (before) the house

πρό τοῦ πολέμου

before the war

The noun $\varphi \iota \lambda l \bar{a}$, $\varphi \iota \lambda l \bar{a} \varsigma$, $\hat{\eta}$, "friendship," is formed from the noun $\varphi l \lambda o \varsigma$, $\varphi l \lambda o v$, δ , "friend," and denotes the state of being a $\varphi i \lambda o \varsigma$. Many such abstract nouns have a nominative singular in $-\iota \bar{a}$.

When one vocabulary word is thus derived from another, it will be listed after the word from which it is derived, and the entry will be indented, as in the vocabulary above.

28. PERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the perfect indicative active, obtain the perfect active tense stem by dropping the ending $-\alpha$ from Principal Part IV. To this stem, add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-a	-αμεν
2	-ας	-ατε
3	- ε (ν)	-ᾶσι(ν)

Thus, the perfect active tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ is $\pi \epsilon \pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \varkappa$ -, and the forms of the perfect indicative active are as follows:

	S
1	πεπαίδευκ α	I have educated
2	πεπαίδευκ ας	you have educated
3	πεπαίδευκε(ν)	he/she/it has educated
	P
1	πεπαιδεύκ αμεν	we have educated
2	πεπαιδεύκ ατς	you have educated
3	πεπαιδεύκ ᾶσι(ν)	they have educated

- Observations: (1) The perfect indicative active indicates an action complete from the point of view of present time, e.g., πεπαίδευμα, "I have (now) educated." The time of the tense is present; the aspect, completed. Cf. Section 18.3.
 - (2) The endings of the perfect indicative active are identical with those of the acrist indicative active EXCEPT in the third person plural. Compare the perfect πεπαιδεύκασι(ν) with the acrist ἐπαίδευσαν.

(3) Many perfect tense stems are formed with a reduplication of the initial consonant of the present tense stem with the letter -ε- inserted between the two consonants, e.g., πεπαίδευκα (παιδεύω), λέλυκα (λύω). There are patterns for the formation of the perfect tense stem, but they are not predictable; hence the need for memorizing the perfect indicative as one of the principal parts.

29. PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the pluperfect indicative active, prefix the past indicative augment & to the perfect active tense stem. To the augmented perfect active tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-ກຸ	-εμεν
2	-75	-ετε
3	-ει(ν)	-εσαν

Thus, the augmented perfect active tense stem of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ is $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \varkappa$, and the forms of the pluperfect indicative active are as follows:

	S
1	ἐπεπαιδεύ κ η	I had educated
2	ἐπεπαιδεύ κ ης	you had educated
3	$\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\pi a\imath\delta\epsilon\acute{v}\kappa\mathbf{\epsilon}\mathbf{i}(\mathbf{v})$	he/she/it had educated
1	ἐπεπαιδεύ κ εμεν	we had educated
2	ἐπεπαιδεύ κ ετε	you had educated
3	ἐπεπαιδεύ κ ∈σαν	they had educated

Observations: (1) The pluperfect indicative active indicates an action complete from the point of view of the past: e.g., ἐπεπαιδεύκη, "I had (by then) educated." The time of the tense is past; the aspect, completed. Both the perfect and the pluperfect indicative active have completed aspect; they differ only in time. Like the other past tenses of the indicative, the pluperfect indicative active prefixes the past indicative augment.

(2) With the exception of the $-\varepsilon\iota$ of the third person singular, the tense vowel of the pluperfect indicative active shows an alternation between $-\eta$ - in the singular and $-\varepsilon$ - in the plural.

(3) Note that the third person singular, pluperfect indicative active can take a nu-movable.

30. PERFECT INFINITIVE ACTIVE

To form the perfect infinitive active, add to the perfect active tense stem the ending $-\epsilon \nu \alpha \iota$.

Thus, the perfect infinitive active of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ is πεπαιδευκέναι

to have educated

The perfect infinitive active is always accented on the penult.

Like the other infinitives learned so far, the tense of the perfect infinitive shows aspect only, not time. Compare:

παιδεύειν

to be educating/to educate (progressive/repeated aspect) παιδεῦσαι to educate (simple aspect)

πεπαιδευκέναι

to have educated (completed aspect)

31. SUBJUNCTIVE AND OPTATIVE MOODS PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

The subjunctive and the optative, in contrast to the indicative, show that the speaker views the action as non-factual, i.e., non-indicative. The translation of subjunctives or optatives varies considerably, depending upon the type of clause they appear in. Therefore, no translation of a subjunctive or an optative appears in the paradigms. The first type of clause in which the subjunctive and optative appear is the purpose clause. See Section 36.

The tense of a subjunctive or an optative, like that of an infinitive, does not indicate factual time but only aspect: the present tense shows progressive/repeated aspect; the aorist tense, simple aspect; and the perfect tense, completed aspect. Of these three, the perfect tense is rarely used, and is given only in the Appendix.

To form the present subjunctive active, add the following endings to the present tense stem (the formula for finding the present tense stem is given in Section 20; for a chart of all the tense stems and the tenses built on them, see Section 60, pages 172–73):

	S	P
1	-ω	-ωμεν
2	-ทร	-ητ€
3	-n	-ωσι(ν)

Thus, the forms of the present subjunctive active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύω	παιδεύ ωμεν
2	παιδεύ ης	παιδε ύητ ε
3	παιδεύη	παιδεύωσι(ν)

Observations: (1) Since the translation of a subjunctive varies according to the kind of clause in which it is used, no one translation of a subjunctive is given in the paradigm.

- (2) The endings of the subjunctive active are the same as those of the present indicative active except that, where possible, the thematic vowel of the ending has been lengthened. Compare the subjunctive παιδεύωμεν with the indicative παιδεύομεν. In the second and third person singular endings, when the -ε- of the -ει- is lengthened to -η-, the -ι- becomes an iota subscript. Note that when the -ε- of the second person plural ending -ετε is lengthened to -η-, there is no iota subscript.
- (3) The first person singular of the present subjunctive active has the same form as the first person singular of the present indicative active. Context usually allows one to distinguish between the two.
- (4) The tense of the present subjunctive indicates progressive/repeated aspect; it does not show present time.

32. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

To form the agrist subjunctive active, add to the UNAUGMENTED agrist tense stem the same endings as in the present subjunctive active.

Thus, the forms of the agrist subjunctive active of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύσ ω	παιδεύσ ωμεν
2	παιδεύσ ης	παιδεύσ ητε
3	παιδεύση	παιδεύσωσι(ν)

SECTION 33 65

Observations: (1) The agrist subjunctive active uses the same endings as the present subjunctive active. The two tenses are distinguished by the different tense stems.

- (2) The past indicative augment is not used in the agrist subjunctive.
- (3) The first person singular of the aorist subjunctive active often has the same form as the first person singular of the future indicative active, as in $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \sigma \omega$. Context usually allows one to distinguish the two. Remember that there is NO FUTURE SUBJUNCTIVE.
- (4) Like the agrist infinitive, the agrist subjunctive indicates only simple aspect; it does not indicate past time.

33. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

To form the present optative active, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-orhr	-οιμεν
2	-015	-οιτ€
3	-ot	-olen

Thus, the forms of the present optative active of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύ οιμι	παιδεύ οιμεν
2	παιδεύ οις	παιδεύοιτε
3	παιδεύ οι	παιδεύοιεν

- Observations: (1) Since the translation of an optative varies considerably according to the kind of clause in which it is used, no one translation of the optative is given in the paradigm.
 - (2) Note that all the endings of the present optative active begin with the diphthong $-o\iota$ (thematic vowel -o- and suffix $-\iota$ -). Compare the following first person plural forms:

present indicative active παιδεύομεν present subjunctive active παιδεύωμεν present optative active παιδεύοιμεν

- (3) Unlike the final -oι of the nominative plural of the second-declension masculine and feminine nouns, the final diphthong -oι in the third person singular of the present optative active counts as LONG for purposes of accentuation. Compare νῆσοι (where, since the penult is accented and contains a long vowel while the ultima contains a diphthong that counts as short, the penult has a circumflex accent) with παιδεύοι (where the diphthong in the ultima is counted as long and prevents the accent from going back beyond the penult, which receives the acute).
- (4) Like the present infinitive and the present subjunctive, the present optative indicates only progressive/repeated aspect, not present time.

34. AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE

To form the agrist optative active, add the following endings to the UN-AUGMENTED agrist tense stem:

	S	P
1	-αιμι	-αιμεν
2	-αις/-ειας	-αιτε
3	-αι/-ειε(ν)	-αιεν/-ειαν

Thus, the forms of the agrist optative active of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	2	P
1	παιδεύσαιμι	παιδεύσ αιμεν
2	παιδεύσ αις/ παιδεύσ ειας	παιδεύσ αιτε
3	παιδεύσαι/	παιδεύσαιεν/
	παιδεύσειε(ν)	παιδεύσ ειαν

Observations: (1) The past indicative augment is not used in the aorist optative.

(2) Note that, with the exception of the alternative forms, all the endings of the aorist optative active begin with the diphthong $-\alpha\iota$ - (the aorist tense vowel $-\alpha$ - and the optative suffix $-\iota$ -). Compare the following first person plural forms:

aorist indicative active ἐπαιδεύσαμεν aorist subjunctive active παιδεύσωμεν aorist optative active παιδεύσαιμεν present optative active παιδεύσιμεν

- (3) Like the final -oι of the third person singular of the present optative active, the final diphthong -αι of the third person singular of the adrist optative active counts as LONG for purposes of accentuation. Everywhere else the diphthong -αι when final counts as short for purposes of accentuation. Distinguish the optative παιδεύσαι (in which the diphthong of the ending is long and prevents the accent from going back beyond the penult and from being a circumflex) from the agrist infinitive active παιδεῦσαι (in which the accent is fixed on the penult and the diphthong counts as short for purposes of accentuation).
- (4) In the agrist optative active, the second person singular, the third person singular, and the third person plural all have alternative forms with no distinction of meaning. Since both are used, both must be learned.
- (5) Like the agrist infinitive and the agrist subjunctive, the agrist optative indicates only simple aspect, not past time.

Drill I, page 74, may now be done.

For a synopsis using all moods and tenses presented so far, see pages 78 and 82.

35. SEQUENCE OF MOODS

As seen in Section 18.3, the tenses of the indicative are divided into two categories, primary and secondary. The PRIMARY tenses are those which refer to PRESENT and FUTURE time: the present, future, perfect, and future perfect tenses. The SECONDARY tenses of the indicative are those which refer to PAST time: the imperfect, aorist, and pluperfect tenses. The secondary tenses of the indicative all have the past indicative augment.

Sequence of moods means that in complex sentences certain kinds of dependent clauses will have a verb in either the subjunctive or the optative mood, depending on whether the main verb of the sentence is either a primary or a secondary tense of the indicative. A primary tense of the indicative governs a subjunctive in the dependent clause; this is called primary sequence. A secondary tense of the indicative governs an optative in the dependent clause; this is called secondary sequence.

Both the present subjunctive and the aorist subjunctive are governed by primary tenses of the indicative. As in the infinitive, TENSE IN THE SUBJUNCTIVE INDICATES ASPECT, NOT TIME: the present subjunctive shows progressive/repeated aspect; the aorist subjunctive shows simple aspect.

Both the present optative and the agrist optative are governed by secondary tenses of the indicative. TENSE IN THE OPTATIVE ALSO INDICATES ASPECT, NOT TIME: the present optative shows progressive/repeated aspect; the agrist optative shows simple aspect.

The following chart summarizes the sequence of moods:

MAIN VERB

DEPENDENT VERB

PRIMARY SEQUENCE

Present Indicative Future Indicative Perfect Indicative

Subjunctive Mood (Tense shows aspect.)

SECONDARY SEQUENCE

Imperfect Indicative Aorist Indicative Pluperfect Indicative

36. PURPOSE CLAUSES

The idea of purpose can be expressed in English in many ways, e.g., by an infinitive: "I am coming to see my friend"; by a clause: "I am coming in order that I may see my friend." To express purpose, Greek does not normally use an infinitive but rather a clause introduced by the conjunctions ἵνα, ὡς, or ὅπως, all of which mean "in order that." A negative purpose clause is introduced by ίνα μή, ὡς μή, or ὅπως μή, which mean "in order that . . . not, lest."

A purpose clause has a verb in the subjunctive or the optative according to the rules for the sequence of moods: a primary main verb calls for the subjunctive; a secondary, for the optative. The tense of the subjunctive or the optative shows aspect.

$$\pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi o \mu \epsilon \nu \delta \widetilde{\omega} \varrho \alpha \begin{cases} \emph{l} \nu \alpha \\ \acute{\omega} \varsigma \\ \emph{o} \pi \omega \varsigma \end{cases} \lambda \acute{\nu} \eta \tau \epsilon \tau o \vartheta \varsigma \, \emph{d} \delta \epsilon \lambda \varphi o \vartheta \varsigma .$$

$$We \begin{cases} \text{are sending} \\ \text{send} \end{cases} \text{ gifts in order that you } \begin{cases} \text{may be releasing} \\ \text{may release} \end{cases} \text{ the may release} .$$

Observation: The main verb is in the present tense, which is a primary tense. The verb in the purpose clause must therefore be in the subjunctive mood (primary sequence). The tense of the subjunctive is present, which indicates either progressive aspect ("that you may be releasing") or repeated aspect ("that you may [habitually] release").

 gifts in order that you may release the brothers.

Observation: The agrist tense of the subjunctive (still primary sequence after a main verb in the present indicative) indicates simple aspect, "that you may release (once and for all)."

- Observations: (1) The main verb is in the imperfect tense, which is a secondary tense. The verb in the purpose clause in secondary sequence is an optative. The present tense of the optative indicates progressive aspect ("that you might be releasing") or repeated aspect ("that you might [habitually] release").
 - (2) IN TRANSLATING PURPOSE CLAUSES INTO ENGLISH, "MAY" SHOULD ALWAYS BE USED WHEN TRANSLATING PRIMARY SEQUENCE AND "MIGHT" WHEN TRANSLATING SECONDARY SEQUENCE.

Observation: The agrist tense of the optative (still secondary sequence after an imperfect main verb) indicates simple aspect: "that you might release the brothers (once and for all)."

(5) τὸν "Ομηρον εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπέμψαμεν
$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \emph{lva μὴ} \\ \emph{ως μὴ} \\ \emph{δπως μὴ} \end{array} \right\} \, \emph{παιδεύσειε τὸν} \, .$$

We sent Homer to the island in order that he might not educate his brother.

To give the syntax of a verb one must identify both the mood and the tense and account for both mood and tense. For example, the syntax of $\lambda \acute{v}o\iota\tau \varepsilon$ in sentence (3) is present optative: optative in a purpose clause in secondary sequence after the imperfect main verb $\acute{\epsilon}\pi\acute{\epsilon}\mu\pi o\mu\varepsilon\nu$; present tense to show progressive/repeated aspect.

To give the syntax of a noun, one must identify the case and give the reason for it. For example, the syntax of " $O\mu\eta\varrho\sigma\nu$ in sentence (5) is accusative: direct object of the verb $\epsilon \pi \epsilon \mu \psi a\mu\epsilon\nu$.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The conjunction $d\lambda\lambda d$, "but," stands at the beginning of its clause and introduces a stronger contrast than the conjunction $\delta \ell$, "but."

The noun $d\varrho\varepsilon\tau\dot{\eta}$, $d\varrho\varepsilon\tau\ddot{\eta}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "excellence, virtue," originally referred to "excellence" in general, whether of warriors in battle, animals such as horses, or things such as land. Later its meaning was sometimes narrowed to "moral excellence" or "virtue,"

The noun $\beta ov \lambda \hat{\eta}$, $\beta ov \lambda \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$, $\hat{\eta}$ means either "will" (the faculty of the soul) or "council" (in the Athenian democracy a deliberative body of 500 citizens).

The verb $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\varphi\omega$, $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\psi\omega$, $\ensuremath{\check{e}}\gamma\varrho a\psi\alpha$, $\gamma\acute{e}\gamma\varrho a\psi\alpha$, $\gamma\acute{e}\gamma\varrho a\mu\mu\alpha\iota$, $\ensuremath{\check{e}}\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\varphi\eta\nu$, "write, draw," originally meant "scratch" or "graze" (as with a pointed object). Then the verb came to refer to the making of marks of various sorts. Note that Principal Part VI, $\ensuremath{\check{e}}\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\varphi\eta\nu$, lacks the $-\theta$ - seen in the verbs presented thus far.

The particle $\delta \dot{\eta}$ can be translated as "in fact" or "of course"; it indicates that what is said is really true.

In the Athenian democracy, all citizens (adult males) had a right to take part in the $\ell n n n d\bar{a}$, $\ell n n d\bar{a}$, $\ell n n d\bar{a}$, $\ell n n d\bar{a}$, "assembly," literally a "calling out" of the people.

The conjunctions $\hat{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon \ell$ and $\hat{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\delta\dot{\eta}$ mean "after, when, since," and both introduce temporal and causal clauses. $\hat{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\delta\dot{\eta}$ consists of the conjunction $\hat{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\ell$ + the particle $\delta\dot{\eta}$; but there is no great distinction in meaning between the two conjunctions, although $\hat{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\delta\dot{\eta}$ is used more frequently in temporal clauses than in causal clauses. Both conjunctions govern a past tense of the indicative when referring to a definite event in the past:

ἐπειδή τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἔλῦσαν, δῶρα ἔπεμψα. After/since they freed my brother, I sent gifts.

The noun $\theta v\sigma l\bar{\alpha}$, $\theta v\sigma l\bar{\alpha}\varsigma$, $\hat{\eta}$ is a verbal noun related to $\theta \hat{v}\omega$, $\theta \hat{v}\sigma \omega$, $\tilde{\epsilon}\theta \bar{v}\sigma \alpha$, $\tau \hat{\epsilon}\theta v - \kappa \alpha$, $\tau \hat{\epsilon}\theta v \mu \alpha \iota$, $\hat{\epsilon}\tau \hat{v}\theta \eta v$, "sacrifice." Note the long vowel in the first three principal parts and the short vowel in the last three (as in $\lambda \hat{v}\omega$); the vowel of the stem of the noun is also short.

Note that the reduplication in Principal Parts IV and V of $\theta \dot{v}\omega$ shows τ - and not θ -. The forms had originally been * $\theta \dot{\epsilon}\theta v \varkappa a$ and * $\theta \dot{\epsilon}\theta v \mu a\iota$. When Greek had two syllables each beginning with an aspirate (see Section 8), the first of the aspirates usually lost its aspiration; this is called the dissimilation of aspirates. Principal Part VI was originally * $\dot{\epsilon}\theta \dot{v}\theta \eta v$, which became $\dot{\epsilon}\tau \dot{v}\theta \eta v$.

The conjunctions lva, ω_{ς} , and $\delta\pi\omega_{\varsigma}$ all introduce purpose clauses with no difference in meaning.

The adverb $\mu\dot{\eta}$, "not," is NOT interchangeable with $o\dot{v}$, $o\dot{v}\varkappa$, $o\dot{v}\chi$, "not." $\mu\dot{\eta}$ must be used to negate purpose clauses; $o\dot{v}$, $o\dot{v}\varkappa$, $o\dot{v}\chi$ must be used to negate factual statements and questions with verbs in the indicative mood. Note that, unlike $o\dot{v}$, $\mu\dot{\eta}$ is not a proclitic.

The preposition $\pi\varepsilon\varrho\ell$ basically indicates the idea of "around"; cf. perimeter. The dative is used of wearing clothes, weapons, etc. "around" the body: In "They wear golden necklaces around their necks" the preposition $\pi\varepsilon\varrho\ell+$ the dative would be used. The accusative is used with verbs of motion: In "They send ships around the island" the preposition $\pi\varepsilon\varrho\ell+$ the accusative would be used. $\pi\varepsilon\varrho\ell$ with both the genitive and the accusative means "concerning." The genitive is used with words of speaking or thinking: "I speak about..." would be $\pi\varepsilon\varrho\ell+$ genitive. "We fight about..." would be $\pi\varepsilon\varrho\ell+$ accusative. This distinction, however, is not always maintained.

In Principal Part IV of $\varphi v \lambda \acute{a} \tau \tau \omega$, $\varphi v \lambda \acute{a} \xi \omega$, $\dot{\epsilon} \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \xi a$, $\pi \epsilon \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \chi a$, $\pi \epsilon \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \chi a$, $\pi \epsilon \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \chi a$, $\pi \epsilon \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \chi a$, "guard," the stem ends in an aspirated consonant, $-\chi$ -; cf. $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \pi o \mu \varphi a$ from $\pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi \omega$. Such perfects are called aspirated perfects. Note also the dissimilation of aspirates in $\pi \epsilon \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \chi a$ and $\pi \epsilon \varphi \acute{v} \lambda a \chi \mu a \iota$.

ANSWER KEY FOR SELF-CORRECTING EXAMINATION 1A

- I. 1. $\chi\omega\varrho\tilde{\omega}\nu$: the accent on all first-declension nouns in the genitive plural is a circumflex on the ultima.
 - 2. $\delta \tilde{\omega} \varrho \alpha$: the word is a noun with a persistent accent on the first syllable. Thus, the penult is accented and contains a long vowel, and the ultima has a short vowel. The accent must be a circumflex.
 - 3. κελεῦσαι (infinitive): the accent on the aorist infinitive active is always on the penult. Since the penult contains a diphthong, and final -αι counts as short for purposes of accentuation, the accent must be a circumflex.
 - 4. φυλάττετε: verb form, recessive accent, short ultima.
 - 5. $\theta \epsilon o i \varsigma$: second-declension nouns with an acute on the ultima in the nominative take a circumflex on the ultima in the dative.

37. FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS: CONCLUDED

1. FEMININE NOUNS WITH NOMINATIVE SINGULAR IN SHORT - α

In addition to first-declension nouns whose nominative singular ends in $-\eta$ or $-\bar{\alpha}$, there are others, also feminine, whose nominative singular ends in short $-\alpha$. Their declension is different only in having short $-\alpha$ in the nominative/vocative and accusative singular. In the genitive and dative singular and in all of the cases of the plural, the endings are identical with those of the first-declension nouns already learned. Their endings are:

	5	3	P
Nominative/Vocative	-ox	-α	-αι
Genitive	$-\eta_{\mathcal{S}}$	$-ar{a}arsigma$	$-\tilde{\omega}\nu$
Dative	- _? η	$-ar{q}$	-αις
Accusative	-αν	-αν	$-\bar{a}\varsigma$

The following nouns will serve as examples:

θάλαττα, θαλάττης, ή sea μοῦσα, μούσης, ή muse γέφῦρα, γεφῦρᾶς, ή bridge μοῖρα, μοίρᾶς, ή fate

Nom./Voc. S	$ heta \acute{a} \lambda a au au$	$μο\~vσ$ α	γ έ \phiar{v} $arrho$ α	μοῖοα
Gen.	θαλάττης	μούσης	γεφΰοας	μοίοδς
Dat.	θαλάττη	μούση	$\gamma arepsilon arphi ar{arphi} ar{arrho} ar{ar{q}}$	μοίοᾳ
Acc.	θάλαττ αν	μοῦσαν	γέφῦραν	μοῖοαν

Nom./Voc. P	θάλατται	μοῦσαι	$\gamma \acute{\epsilon} \phi \bar{v} \varrho a \imath$	μοῖφαι
Gen.	$ heta a \lambda a au au ilde{\omega} u$	μουσῶν	$\gamma \varepsilon \varphi \bar{v} \varrho \tilde{\omega} v$	μοιوῶν
Dat.	θαλάτταις	μούσαις	γεφύραις	μοίραις
Acc.	θαλάττāς	μούσāς	γεφύρᾶς	μοίοδες

Observations: (1) In nouns whose stem ends in ε , ι , or ϱ , the endings of the genitive and dative singular have \bar{a} instead of η .

(2) The accent, as in all nouns, is persistent. Note, however, the changes in accent necessitated by the rules for the possibilities of accent as the length of the ultima changes. As in all first-declension nouns, the genitive plural receives a circumflex on the ultima.

2. MASCULINE NOUNS WITH NOMINATIVE SINGULAR IN - η_{ς} OR - \bar{a}_{ς}

Some first-declension nouns are masculine and have a nominative singular ending in $-\eta_{\varsigma}$ or, when the stem of the noun ends in ε , ι , or ϱ , a nominative singular ending in $-\bar{\alpha}_{\varsigma}$. The endings of these nouns differ from those of feminine first-declension nouns only in the nominative, genitive, and (sometimes) vocative singular. In the dative and accusative singular, and in all forms of the plural, these masculine nouns have the same endings as feminine first-declension nouns. Their endings are:

Nom.	-ης	-ας	-αι
Gen.	-იυ	-ის	$-\tilde{\omega} \nu$
Dat.	- _? η	-ā	- αις
Acc.	$-\eta \nu$	-āν	$-ar{a}\varsigma$
Voc.	-α, -η	-ā	-α ι

The following nouns will serve as examples:

πολίτης, πολίτου, δ citizen ποιητής, ποιητοῦ, δ poet νεāνίāς, νεāνίου, δ young man

Nom. S	πολίτης	ποιητ ής	νε āνί ας
Gen.	πολίτου	ποιητ οῦ	$v \varepsilon \bar{a} v l$ ov
Dat.	πολίτη	π οιητ $ ilde{\eta}$	$\nu \epsilon ar{a} u i ar{a}$
Acc.	πολίτην	ποιητήν	$\nu \varepsilon \bar{a} \nu i \bar{a} \nu$
Voc.	πολῖτα	ποιητ ά	$\nu \varepsilon ar{a} \nu l ar{a}$

Nom./Voc. P	πολῖται	ποιηταί	$v \epsilon \bar{a} v \ell a \iota$
Gen.	$\pi o \lambda ar\iota ilde \omega u$	πo i $\eta au ilde{\omega} au$	νεāνιῶν
Dat.	πολίταις	ποιηταῖς	νεāνίαις
Acc.	πολίτāς	ποιητάς	$ u \varepsilon ar{a} u \ell ar{a} aggregation aggregation$

Observations:

- (1) The $-\varsigma$ of the nominative singular ending was borrowed from the nominative singular ending of masculine second-declension nouns (e.g., $\mathring{a}v\theta\varrho\omega\pi o\varsigma$).
- (2) The genitive singular ending is the same as that of masculine second-declension nouns (cf. ἀνθρώπου, πολίτου).
- (3) Accent is persistent, but as in ALL first-declension nouns, the genitive plural receives a circumflex on the ultima.
- (4) As in all other nouns of the first and second declensions, masculine first-declension nouns accented on the ultima receive a circumflex rather than an acute accent in the genitive and dative, singular and plural (e.g., ποιητής, ποιητοῦ).
- (5) In nouns whose stem ends in ε , ι , or ϱ , the endings of the nominative, dative, and accusative singular have \bar{a} instead of η . In the vocative singular of these nouns long \bar{a} appears instead of short a ($v\varepsilon\bar{a}v\dot{t}a$). Note that the accusative plural of these nouns is identical with the nominative singular; context will determine meaning.
- (6) Some nouns with nominatives in $-\eta_{\varsigma}$ employ the vocative singular ending $-\eta$ (instead of $-\alpha$). These nouns will be noted as they occur.

Drill I, page 105, may now be done.

38. ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS

Just as all forms of the article and the noun have gender, number, and case, so do all forms of the adjective. Like the article, the adjective must agree in gender, number, and case with the noun which it modifies. This grammatical agreement does not require that the endings of adjective and noun always be identical in form: compare the examples which follow the paradigms below.

The adjectives presented in this Section have endings either of the first and second declensions or of the second declension alone. They fall into two groups: three-ending adjectives with separate sets of endings for each of the three genders, and two-ending adjectives with one set of endings for both masculine and feminine and another set of endings for the neuter.

Adjectives will be listed as vocabulary items by giving all possible forms of the nominative singular, as in the examples below.

1. THREE-ENDING ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS

ἀγαθός, ἀγαθή, ἀγαθόν, good

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἀγαθ ός	$\dot{a}\gamma a \theta \dot{\eta}$	ἀγαθ όν
Gen.	$\dot{a}\gamma a heta$ o $ ilde{oldsymbol{v}}$	$ec{a}\gamma a heta$ ῆ၄	dy a θοῦ
Dat.	ἀγα θ $m{ ilde{\omega}}$	$d\gamma a heta oldsymbol{ ilde{\eta}}$	$\dot{a}\gamma a \theta$ $m{ ilde{\omega}}$
Acc.	ἀγαθ όν	$d\gamma a \theta$ ήν	ἀγαθ όν
Voc.	$\dot{a}\gamma a \theta \dot{m{\epsilon}}$	$d\gamma a \theta \dot{m{\eta}}$	$d\gamma a \theta$ ϕv
Nom./Voc. P	ἀγαθ οί	$\dot{a}\gamma a \theta$ αί	ἀγαθ ά
Gen.	ἀγαθ ῶν	$\dot{a}\gamma a \theta \tilde{\omega} v$	ἀγαθ ῶν
Dat.	ἀγαθοῖς	ἀγαθαῖς	ἀγαθοῖς
Acc.	ἀγαθ ούς	ἀγαθ ἁς	$\dot{a}\gamma a \theta \acute{a}$

- Observations: (1) Except for the accent of the vocative singular, the masculine endings are the same as those of $\mathring{a}\delta\varepsilon\lambda\varphi\delta\varsigma$ (Section 15); the feminine endings are the same as those of $\psi\bar{\nu}\chi\dot{\gamma}$ (Section 14); the neuter endings are the same as those of $\mathring{e}\varrho\gamma\sigma\nu$ (Section 15), although the accent of $\mathring{a}\gamma\alpha\theta\delta\nu$ falls on the ultima.
 - (2) Like that of nouns, the accent of adjectives is persistent and is given by the neuter nominative singular. Adjectives of the first and second declensions, when accented on the ultima, take a circumflex in the genitive and dative, singular and plural.

 $\tilde{a}\xi \iota o \varsigma, \, \tilde{a}\xi \ell \bar{a}, \, \tilde{a}\xi \iota o \nu, \text{ worthy}$

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἄξι ος	ἀξί α	ἄξι ον

Dat.	ἀξί οις	$d\xi$ ί α ις	$d\xi lois$
Acc.	$\dot{a}\xi lous$	ἀξί ας	ἄξια

Observations: (1) When the stem of a first- and second-declension adjective ends in ε , ι , or ϱ , the feminine singular endings have \bar{a} instead of η .

- (2) Final $-o\iota$ and $-a\iota$ in the masculine and feminine nominative/vocative plural (as everywhere except in the third person singular optative active endings) count as short for purposes of accentuation: thus $\mathring{a}\xi\iota o\iota$, $\mathring{a}\xi\iota a\iota$.
- (3) THE ACCENT IN THE FEMININE GENITIVE PLURAL, UNLIKE THAT OF FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS, DOES NOT SHIFT TO THE ULTIMA. Instead, it follows the regular rules of accent.

2. TWO-ENDING ADJECTIVES OF THE SECOND DECLENSION

Some adjectives have only two sets of endings, one for both masculine and feminine, the other for the neuter.

Acc.	ἀδίκους	ἄδικ α

Observation: Accent is persistent.

39. AGREEMENT OF ADJECTIVE AND NOUN

Just as the definite article agrees in gender, number, and case with the noun which it modifies, but does not necessarily have an identical ending, so too adjectives agree in gender, number and case with the nouns which they modify regardless of any external difference in the form of the endings.

Each of the following phrases shows agreement.

τοῖς ἀνθρώποις (masculine dative plural) to the men

ταῖς νήσοις (feminine dative plural)

to the islands

 $\dot{a}\gamma a\theta\dot{\gamma} \psi\bar{\nu}\chi\dot{\gamma}$ (feminine nominative singular)

a good soul

 $\dot{a}\xi i\bar{a} \psi \bar{v}\chi \dot{\eta}$ (feminine nominative singular)

a worthy soul

ἄδικος ψῦχή (feminine nominative singular)

an unjust soul

40. POSITION OF THE ADJECTIVE

1. ATTRIBUTIVE POSITION

An adjective which modifies a noun and is preceded by an article agreeing with the noun is in the attributive position. The three varieties of attributive position are presented in Section 16.3.

An adjective in the attributive position, together with the noun which it modifies, forms a phrase but NOT a complete sentence.

 $\delta dya\theta \delta \zeta dy \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma \zeta$ the good man δ $\mbox{\it d} \nu \theta \varrho \omega \pi o \varsigma$ δ $\mbox{\it d} \gamma \alpha \theta \delta \varsigma$ $\,$ the good man (the man, the good one)

 $dv\theta\rho\omega\pi\sigma_{\varsigma}\delta dv\alpha\theta\delta_{\varsigma}$ the good man (a man, the good one)

The phrases above differ not in meaning but in emphasis only; the translations in parentheses exaggerate the emphasis of the Greek.

SECTION 41 93

2. PREDICATE POSITION

An adjective which agrees with a noun accompanied by the article, but which itself is not preceded by the article, is in the predicate position.

The phrase consisting of noun and article becomes the subject, and the adjective the predicate adjective, of a complete sentence.

In order to translate such a sentence into English the linking verb "is" or "are" must be supplied, but such sentences, called nominal sentences, are complete as they stand in Greek. The article, noun, and adjective, standing in the nominative case, provide all the necessary information.

δ $\mathring{a}v\theta ρωπος \mathring{a}γαθός$. The man is good.

άγαθός δ άνθοωπος.

The man is good.

The man is good.

οί ἄνθρωποι ἀγαθοί.

The men are good. (specific use of the article)

Men are good. (generic

(generic use of the article)

Carefully distinguish these nominal sentences, where the adjective is not preceded by the article, from the phrases where the adjective is preceded by the article.

A nominal sentence can also consist of two nouns, one used as a subject, the other as a predicate noun. The subject usually has the article, but the predicate noun does not.

 $\tau \delta \beta \iota \beta \lambda lov \delta \tilde{\omega} \varrho ov.$ The book is a gift.

δῶρον τὸ βιβλίον.

The book is a gift.

The book is a gift.

Drills II and III, pages 105-106, may now be done.

41. CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

A conditional sentence consists of two statements. One makes an assumption ("If A..."); the other states a conclusion which follows from that assumption ("... then B"). The assumption is called the protasis; the conclusion, the apodosis. The negative of the protasis is $\mu\dot{\eta}$, that of the apodosis $o\dot{v}$. The protasis can be stated either before or after the apodosis.

If it rains (protasis), they will stay home (apodosis). They will stay home (apodosis) if it rains (protasis).

Six types of conditional sentence are presented below. For each, a formula for the protasis, a formula for the apodosis, and a translation formula will be given. In the translation formula the English verb "do" will stand for any English verb.

NO VERB IN A CONDITIONAL SENTENCE CAN BE TRANSLATED UNTIL THE TYPE OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCE IS IDENTIFIED.

These six conditional sentences are summarized at the end of this Section.

1. FUTURE MORE VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\alpha}\nu$ ("if") + subjunctive

Apodosis: future indicative Translation formula: does/will do

έἀν ἄγγελον
$$\left\{ \begin{matrix} \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi \eta \\ \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \psi \eta \end{matrix} \right\}, \ τ γν \ \mu \acute{\alpha} \chi \eta \nu \ \pi α \acute{\nu} \sigma o v \sigma \iota \nu.$$

If he sends a messenger, they will stop the battle.

The protasis of the future more vivid conditional sentence makes an assumption about the future; the apodosis draws a conclusion based on that assumption.

In the protasis the choice between present subjunctive and agrist subjunctive depends on the aspect which one wishes to express: progressive/repeated aspect (present subjunctive) or simple aspect (agrist subjunctive).

2. FUTURE LESS VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: εi ("if") + optative Apodosis: optative + $\mathring{a}\nu$

Translation formula: should do/would do

$$\begin{array}{c} \varepsilon \mathring{a} \mathring{a} \gamma \gamma \varepsilon \lambda o v \left\{ \begin{array}{c} \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi o i \\ \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \psi \alpha i / \\ \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \psi \varepsilon i \varepsilon v \end{array} \right\}, \ \tau \mathring{\eta} v \ \mu \acute{a} \chi \eta v \left\{ \begin{array}{c} \pi a \acute{v} o i \varepsilon v \\ \pi a \acute{v} \sigma a i \varepsilon v / \\ \pi a \acute{v} \sigma \varepsilon i a v \end{array} \right\} \mathring{a} v. \end{array}$$

If he should send a messenger, they would stop the battle.

SECTION 41 95

The protasis of a future less vivid conditional sentence, like that of a future more vivid conditional sentence, makes an assumption about the future, but the assumption is viewed as less likely to come true; the apodosis draws a conclusion based on this less likely assumption.

In both protasis and apodosis the choice between present optative and aorist optative depends on the aspect which one wishes to express.

The particle dv is necessary to complete the meaning of the apodosis, but it is NOT separately translated. Its position is flexible, but it cannot begin a clause or sentence. The apodosis of the sentence above could be written:

There is no difference in meaning.

The introductory particles $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{a}\nu$ and $\epsilon\dot{i}$ both mean "if," but they are NOT interchangeable: each belongs ONLY to certain types of conditional sentence.

3. PRESENT GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: $\hat{\epsilon}\hat{a}\nu$ + subjunctive Apodosis: present indicative Translation formula: does/does

$$\left\{ egin{array}{l} \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \pi \eta \\ \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \psi \eta \end{array} ight\}$$
, τὴν μ άχην παύουσιν.

If he sends a messenger, they stop the battle.

If he (ever) sends a messenger, they (always) stop the battle.

The protasis of a present general conditional sentence makes an assumption in present time; the apodosis states a conclusion which follows as a general rule. The adverbs "ever" and "always" in the second translation above emphasize this.

The protasis of a present general conditional sentence is the same as the protasis of a future more vivid conditional sentence, but its meaning is substantially different. One cannot translate the verbs in either part of any conditional sentence without first identifying both protasis and apodosis.

In the protasis, the choice between present subjunctive and agrist subjunctive depends on the aspect which one wishes to express.

4. PAST GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: εi + optative

Apodosis: imperfect indicative Translation formula: did/did

εἰ ἄγγελον
$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi \epsilon \mu \pi o \imath \\ \pi \epsilon \mu \psi \alpha \imath / \\ \pi \epsilon \mu \psi \epsilon \imath \epsilon \nu \end{array} \right\}, \ \tau \dot{\eta} \nu \ \mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \eta \nu \ \ \dot{\epsilon} \pi \alpha \nu o \nu.$$

If he sent a messenger, they stopped the battle.

If he (ever) sent a messenger, they (always) stopped the battle.

The protasis of a past general conditional sentence makes an assumption in past time; the apodosis states a conclusion which follows as a general rule in past time. The adverbs "ever" and "always" in the second translation above emphasize this.

The protasis of a past general conditional sentence is the same as the protasis of a future less vivid conditional sentence, but its meaning is substantially different.

Identify both protasis and apodosis of all conditional sentences before translating.

In the protasis, the choice between present optative and agrist optative depends on the aspect which one wishes to express.

5. PRESENT CONTRAFACTUAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: ϵi + imperfect indicative

Apodosis: imperfect indicative + $\H{a}\nu$

Translation formula: were doing/would be doing εί ἄγγελον ἔπεμπεν, τὴν μάχην ἔπαυον ἄν.

If he were sending a messenger, they would be stopping the battle.

If he were sending a messenger (but he is not), they would be stopping the battle (but they are not).

The present contrafactual conditional sentence assumes in its protasis something which the speaker knows is untrue at the present time. (Compare the English protasis "If I had a million dollars now ") The apodosis draws a conclusion based on this unreal assumption.

In this type of conditional sentence the indicative mood describes an unreal action or state of being. The particle αv in the apodosis, not separately translated, distinguishes the apodosis of a present contrafactual conditional sentence from that of a past general conditional sentence. Identify both protasis and apodosis of all conditional sentences before translating.

6. PAST CONTRAFACTUAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: $\epsilon i + \text{aorist indicative}$ Apodosis: aorist indicative $+ \alpha v$

Translation formula: had done/would have done εί άγγελον ἔπεμψεν, τὴν μάχην ἔπαυσαν ἄν.

If he had sent a messenger, they would have stopped the battle.

If he had sent a messenger (but he did not), they would have stopped the battle (but they did not).

The past contrafactual conditional sentence assumes in its protasis something which the speaker knows was untrue in the past. (Compare the English protasis "If I had had a million dollars yesterday...") The apodosis draws a conclusion based on this unreal assumption.

Note the difference between the imperfect indicative of the present contrafactual conditional sentence and the agrist indicative of the past contrafactual conditional sentence.

7. SUMMARY OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

NAME	PROTASIS	APODOSIS
FUTURE MORE VIVID	ểấν + subjunctive does	future indicative will do
FUTURE LESS VIVID	$arepsilon i+$ optative $should\ do$	optative + ἄν would do
PRESENT GENERAL	$\dot{\epsilon}lpha v + ext{subjunctive} \ does$	present indicative does
PAST GENERAL	arepsilon i+ optative did	imperfect indicative did
PRESENT CONTRA- FACTUAL	arepsilon i+ imperf. indic. were doing	imperfect indicative $+ lpha v$ would be doing
PAST CONTRA- FACTUAL	$arepsilon i + ext{aorist indic.}$ had done	aorist indicative $+$ $\alpha\nu$ would have done

8. FURTHER NOTE ON CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

Attic Greek has other types of conditional sentences which need not be learned now; these are explained in the Appendix.

Sometimes the protasis of one type of conditional sentence is combined with the apodosis of another type. Such mixed conditional sentences will be introduced in the Exercises of later Units. Examples are given in the Appendix.

Drills IV and V, page 106, may now be done.

42. ELISION

When a word ends with a short vowel and the following word begins with a vowel or a diphthong, the vowel at the end of the first word is sometimes dropped or elided. This is called elision. An apostrophe (') marks the missing vowel.

Here are some examples of elision. Elision is never mandatory in writing Greek.

πέμπετε ἀγγέλους.	(unelided)
πέμπετ' ἀγγέλους.	(elided)
ἔπεμψα ἀγγέλους.	(unelided)
ἔπεμψ' ἀγγέλους.	(elided)
οί δὲ ἄνθοωποι	(unelided)
οί δ' ἄνθοωποι	(elided)
έπαιδεύσατε "Ομη οον ;	(unelided)
έπαιδεύσαθ' "Ομη ο ον ;	(elided)

In the last example above, note the change from the unaspirated consonant τ to the aspirated consonant θ because of the rough breathing (= h) which follows immediately in elision. Cf. Section 8.

The addition of a nu-movable, where possible, avoids elision:

ἔπεμψεν ἀγγέλους.

In the English-to-Greek sentences all words are to be written out in full.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The particle dv is employed in the apodoses of future less vivid, present contrafactual, and past contrafactual conditional sentences. It is NOT translated separately but is essential in identifying these conditional sentences: it cannot be omitted. It is placed most frequently after a verb, or after the negative adverb ov, ov, ov, but its position is flexible. It cannot, however, stand first in its clause.

The adjective $d\xi los$, $d\xi l\bar{a}$, $d\xi los$, "worthy, worth," is often accompanied by a noun in the genitive case to indicate that of which someone or something is worthy. This usage is called the genitive of value.

ἄνθοωπος ἄθλου ἄξιος a man worthy of a prize

The adjective $\mathring{a}\xi log$ can also be accompanied by an infinitive to indicate an activity that someone or something is worthy of performing or receiving. This is called an epexegetical infinitive or "explaining" infinitive.

ἄνθρωπος παιδεύειν ἄξιος a man worthy to educate (i.e., to educate others) = a man who deserves to educate

Also, the adjective $\mathring{a}\xi\iota\sigma\varsigma$ can be accompanied by a noun in the dative case to indicate the person(s) from whose point of view someone or something is worthy (dative of reference).

ἄνθρωπος τοῖς πολίταις ἄθλου ἄξιος a man to the citizens worthy of a prize = a man, in the citizens' eyes, worthy of a prize

The adjective $\partial v \partial \xi \iota o \varsigma$, $\partial v \partial \xi \iota o v$, "unworthy," takes the same constructions as the adjective $\partial \xi \iota o \varsigma$. It is a compound adjective consisting of the adjective $\partial \xi \iota o \varsigma$ + the prefix ∂v , which expresses negation. This negative prefix has two forms: ∂v when followed by a vowel or diphthong, and ∂v when followed by a consonant. The alpha of this prefix is called alpha privative. Both forms derive from a prefix consisting of the consonant ν alone; they are cognate with the English negative prefixes "in-" and "un-."

All compound adjectives such as $dvd\xi \iota o\varsigma$, $dvd\xi \iota ov$ have only two sets of endings (masculine/feminine and neuter) rather than three.

The noun $\partial_{\varrho}\chi\dot{\eta}$, $\partial_{\varrho}\chi\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "beginning; rule, empire," conveys the notion of being first, in the sense either of a beginning or of rule and authority over others.

The verb $\delta\iota\delta\acute{a}\sigma\varkappa\omega$, $\delta\iota\delta\acute{a}\xi\omega$, $\dot{\epsilon}\delta\acute{l}\delta\alpha\xi\alpha$, $\delta\epsilon\delta\acute{l}\delta\alpha\chi\alpha$, $\delta\epsilon\delta\acute{l}\delta\alpha\gamma\mu\alpha$, $\dot{\epsilon}\delta\iota\delta\acute{a}\chi\theta\eta\nu$, "teach," has a narrower meaning than $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\acute{\nu}\omega$, "educate, teach," and takes the same constructions.

The noun $\delta l \varkappa \eta$, $\delta l \varkappa \eta \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "justice; lawsuit," has a wide range of meanings. It can refer to traditional custom or practice, to judgments based on traditional usage, to lawsuits or trials or penalties exacted, or to the principle of justice.

The adjective $\mathring{a}\delta\iota\varkappa o\varsigma$, $\mathring{a}\delta\iota\varkappa ov$, "unjust," consists of the stem of the noun $\delta\iota\varkappa\eta$ + alpha privative. As a compound adjective, it has only two sets of endings.

The verb $\partial \theta \lambda \omega$, $\partial \theta \lambda \eta \sigma \omega$, $\eta \theta \delta \lambda \eta \sigma \alpha$, $\eta \theta \delta \lambda \eta \kappa$, . —, "be willing, wish," lacks Principal Parts V and VI. The absence of one or more Principal Parts will be indicated by dashes, as above. Note that the $\dot{\epsilon}$ - of Principal Parts I and II belongs to the stem and is NOT the past indicative augment. Note also that Principal Part III begins with $\dot{\eta}$ - rather than with the past indicative augment $\dot{\epsilon}$ -. The unaugmented agrist tense stem of this verb is $\dot{\epsilon}\theta \epsilon \lambda \eta \sigma$ -. In verbs where the stem begins with a vowel, the past indicative augment is shown not by the prefix $\dot{\epsilon}$ - but by a lengthening of the initial vowel of the stem.

The various initial vowels and diphthongs are usually augmented as in the chart below. Exceptions will be pointed out in the Vocabulary Notes. Note that short α is lengthened to η , NOT to $\bar{\alpha}$.

UNAUGMENTED	AUGMENTED
α	η
ε	η
ι	$ar{t}$
0	ω
v	$ar{v}$
$a\iota$	η
av	ηv
$\epsilon\iota$	η
arepsilon v	ηv
$o\iota$	ω

102 UNIT 4

Initial ov is not augmented. Also, the diphthongs listed above are sometimes left unaugmented. Initial long vowels remain the same, except that \bar{a} changes to η .

The rules above are to be learned as new vowels are encountered.

Thus, the imperfect indicative active of $\dot{\epsilon}\theta\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\omega$ is conjugated $\dot{\eta}\theta\epsilon\lambda\sigma$, $\dot{\eta}\theta\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\varsigma$, etc. Note also that in Principal Part IV of $\dot{\epsilon}\theta\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\omega$ initial $\dot{\eta}$ - is part of the tense stem; in the pluperfect it remains unchanged.

The verb $\hat{\epsilon}\theta\hat{\epsilon}\lambda\omega$ takes an infinitive to indicate the action which one wishes to perform. This infinitive, like the infinitive with $\varkappa\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\dot{\nu}\omega$, is called an object infinitive because it serves as the direct object of the main verb. The infinitive, in turn, can take a direct and/or indirect object of its own.

ἐθέλω τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεῦσαι. I wish to educate my brother.

The negative $o\vec{v}\varkappa\ \vec{\epsilon}\theta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega$ can often be translated "refuse."

The particles εl and $\dot{\varepsilon} dv$ both mean "if"; each introduces the protasis of certain types of conditional sentence (cf. Section 41). The particle εl is proclitic; the particle $\dot{\varepsilon} dv$ consists of $\varepsilon l + dv$. They are NOT interchangeable.

The accent of the particle $\kappa \alpha i \tau o \iota$, "and further, and yet," is an exception to the rules for the possibilities of accent.

The adjective $\varkappa a\lambda \delta \varsigma$, $\varkappa a\lambda \acute{\eta}$, $\varkappa a\lambda \acute{\sigma} v$, "beautiful, noble, good," combines the idea of physical beauty with that of moral goodness. The adjective $\mathring{a}\gamma a\theta \delta \varsigma$, $\mathring{a}\gamma a\theta \acute{\eta} v$, "good," combines the ideas of moral goodness and serviceability.

The preposition $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$ can take either the genitive or the accusative case. With the genitive it expresses accompaniment and means "with" as in the English sentence "He went with me to the store." Distinguish this use from the instrumental meaning "with" of the dative case (e.g., "He persuaded me with words"). When it takes the accusative case, $\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}$ means "after" either in space or in time.

μετὰ τῶν φ ίλων with the friends μετὰ τὴν μάχην after the battle μετὰ τὸν "Ομη φ ον after Homer

The noun $\mu o i \varrho a$, $\mu o l \varrho \bar{a} \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "fate," has the basic meaning "portion" or "allotment." What is allotted to man constitutes his destiny.

The noun $\mu o \tilde{v} \sigma a$, $\mu o \tilde{v} \sigma \eta \varsigma$, $\tilde{\eta}$, "muse," denotes the goddesses invoked by poets such as Homer.

The noun $\nu \epsilon \bar{a} \nu i \bar{a} \zeta$, $\nu \epsilon \bar{a} \nu i o v$, δ , "young man," contains the root $\nu \epsilon$ -, which is cognate with English new.

The noun $\delta \pi \lambda i \tau \eta \varsigma$, $\delta \pi \lambda i \tau o v$, δ , "hoplite, heavy-armed foot-soldier," is formed from the stem of the noun $\delta \pi \lambda o v$, $\delta \pi \lambda o v$, $\tau \delta$, "tool; (pl.) weapons" + the suffix $-\bar{\iota}\tau\eta\varsigma$. Many nouns denoting those who perform a certain function have this suffix. The noun $\delta \pi \lambda o v$, in a specialized usage, designated the large shield which hoplites carried. Cf. the noun $\pi o \lambda i \tau \eta \varsigma$, $\pi o \lambda i \tau o v$, δ , which denotes a "citizen" of a city and is formed from the noun for "city." Cf. also the nouns $\pi o \iota \eta \tau \eta \varsigma$, $\pi o \iota \eta \tau o \bar{v}$, δ , "poet," and $\sigma \tau \varrho \alpha \tau \iota \omega \tau \eta \varsigma$, $\sigma \tau \varrho \alpha \tau \iota \omega \tau o v$, δ , "soldier," which have a similar suffix, $-\tau \eta \varsigma$. The noun $\pi o \iota \eta \tau \eta \varsigma$ means literally "he who makes"; the noun $\sigma \tau \varrho \alpha \tau \iota \omega \tau \eta \varsigma$ comes from the word for "army" and means literally "army man."

The adverb $\pi \acute{a} \lambda a\iota$, "long ago," can be used in the attributive position with nouns, as can the adverb $v\~vv$, "now."

oi πάλαι ἄνθρωποι men long ago = men of old oi νῦν ἄνθρωποι men now
= men of the present day

The preposition $\sigma \acute{v}v + \text{dat.}$, "with," indicates accompaniment or manner. To indicate that one person accompanies another, the preposition $\mu \epsilon \tau \acute{a} + \text{gen.}$ is usually employed in Attic prose, but $\sigma \acute{v}v$ appears in certain traditional phrases, and also where the notion of joint effort is important.

σύν θεοῖς (accompaniment) with (the help of the) gods σύν ὅπλοις (accompaniment) with weapons
σύν δίκη (manner)
with justice

The prepositional phrase $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu \ \ddot{\sigma} \pi \lambda o \iota \varsigma$ means that people have weapons with them, but the dative $\ddot{\sigma} \pi \lambda o \iota \varsigma$ standing alone shows instrumentality: e.g., "The soldiers are standing at attention with $(\sigma \dot{\nu})$ their weapons"; "the soldiers killed the enemy with their weapons" (dative case without a preposition).

The adjective $\varphi l \lambda o \varsigma$, $\varphi l \lambda \eta$, $\varphi l \lambda o v$, "dear, beloved, one's own," is identical in the masculine with the noun $\varphi l \lambda o \varsigma$, $\varphi l \lambda o v$, δ , "friend." Compare $\delta \varphi l \lambda o \varsigma$, "the friend," with $\delta \varphi l \lambda o \varsigma \pi o \iota \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \varsigma$, "the beloved poet."

 $\sigma \acute{v} v + \tau \acute{a} \tau \tau \omega$

43. PASSIVE VOICE

All verb forms seen thus far have been in the active voice, in which the subject performs the action: John loves Mary. In the passive voice, the subject of the verb receives the action of the verb: John is loved by Mary.

Drills I and II, p. 133, may now be done.

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the present indicative passive, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-ομαι	-ομεθα
2	-ν/-ει	-εσθε
3	-εται	-ονται

Thus, the forms of the present indicative passive of $\pi a \imath \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ are as follows:

	S
1	παιδεύ ομαι	I am being educated I am educated (habitually)
2	παιδεύη/παιδεύ ει	you are being educated you are educated (habitually)
3	παιδεύ εται	he/she/it is being educated he/she/it is educated (habitually)

1 παιδενόμεθα we are being educated we are educated (habitually)

2 παιδεύεσθε you are being educated you are educated (habitually)

3 παιδεύονται they are being educated they are educated (habitually)

Observations: (1) The endings of the present indicative passive consist of the thematic vowel -ε/o- and the primary passive person markers -μαι, -σαι, -ται, -μεθα, -σθε, -νται. In the second person singular, the original form of the ending was *-εσαι. The intervocalic -σ- (one occurring between two vowels) dropped out, and the remaining vowel and diphthong combined to give the alternative endings -η and -ει, with no difference in meaning.

- (2) The alternative ending -ει of the second person singular, present indicative passive is the same as that of the third person singular, present indicative active. Thus, without any context, there are two possible sets of translations for the form παιδεύει: "you are being educated/are educated (habitually)" and "he/she/it is educating/educates (habitually)." Context usually allows one to identify the person and voice of the form.
- (3) The alternative ending -η of the second person singular, present indicative passive is the same as that of the third person singular, present subjunctive active. Context usually allows one to distinguish between the indicative παιδεύη ("you are being educated/are educated [habitually]") and the subjunctive (e.g., in a purpose clause, "in order that he/she/it may be educating/may educate [habitually]").

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the imperfect indicative passive, prefix the past indicative augment to the present tense stem. To the augmented present tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-ομην	-ομεθα
2	-00	-εσθε
3	-ετο	-070

Thus, the forms of the imperfect indicative passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S
1	ἐπαιδευ όμην	I was being educated I used to be educated
2	ἐπαιδεύ ου	you were being educated you used to be educated
3	ἐπαιδεύ ∈το	he/she/it was being educated he/she/it used to be educated
	P
1	ἐπαιδευ όμεθα	we were being educated we used to be educated
2	ἐπαιδεύ εσθε	you were being educated you used to be educated
3	ἐπαιδεύ οντο	they were being educated they used to be educated

Observation: The endings of the imperfect indicative passive consist of the thematic vowel $-\varepsilon/o$ - and the secondary passive person markers $-\mu\eta\nu$, $-\sigma o$, $-\tau o$, $-\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$, $-\sigma\theta\varepsilon$, $-\nu\tau o$. In the second person singular, the original form of the ending was *- $\varepsilon\sigma o$. The intervocalic $-\sigma$ - dropped out, and the two vowels combined to give the ending $-o\nu$.

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE PASSIVE

To form the present subjunctive passive, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-ωμαι	-ωμεθα
2	-XJ	-ησθε
3	-ηται	-ωνται

Thus, the forms of the present subjunctive passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύωμαι	παιδεν ώμεθα
2	παιδεύη	παιδεύησθε
3	παιδεύηται	παιδεύωνται

114 UNIT 5

Observations: (1) No translation of any subjunctive is ever given in the paradigms. A present subjunctive passive differs from a present subjunctive active in voice alone and will be used in the same kinds of clauses as the present subjunctive active.

(2) As do the endings of the subjunctive active, the endings of the subjunctive passive show a lengthening of the thematic vowel of the ending. Compare, e.g., the first person plurals of the present indicative active παιδεύσμεν present subjunctive active παιδεύωμεν present indicative passive παιδευόμεθα present subjunctive passive παιδευώμεθα.

- (3) Note that the present subjunctive passive uses the primary person markers $-\mu\alpha\iota$, $-\sigma\alpha\iota$, $-\tau\alpha\iota$, $-\mu\epsilon\theta\alpha$, $-\sigma\theta\epsilon$, $-\nu\tau\alpha\iota$.
- (4) The original form of the second person singular, present subjunctive passive was *- $\eta\sigma\alpha\iota$. The intervocalic - σ dropped out, and the remaining vowel and diphthong combined to give the ending - η . Since this ending has two other uses, the form $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\delta\eta$ can be one of three different things:

third person singular, present subjunctive active second person singular, present indicative passive second person singular, present subjunctive passive. Context usually allows one to determine the meaning.

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE PASSIVE

To form the present optative passive, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-οιμην	-οιμεθα
2	-oto	-οισθε
3	-оіто	-01770

Thus, the forms of the present optative passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεν οίμην	παιδενοίμεθα
2	παιδεύοιο	$\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{v}$ οι $\sigma \theta \epsilon$
3	παιδεύοιτο	παιδεύοιντο

SECTION 43 115

Observations: (1) No translation of any optative is ever given in the paradigms.

A present optative passive differs from a present optative active in voice alone and is used in the same kinds of clauses as the present optative active.

(2) As in the endings of the present optative active, all the endings of the present optative passive begin with the initial diphthong $-o\iota$ - (thematic vowel -o- and optative suffix $-\iota$ -). Compare, e.g., the first person plural forms of the present indicative active $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon v$ present subjunctive active $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon v$ present optative active $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon v$ present indicative passive $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon \theta a$ present subjunctive passive $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon \theta a$ present optative passive $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon \theta a$ $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \delta \mu \epsilon \theta a$

- (3) Note that the present optative passive uses the secondary passive person markers $-\mu\eta\nu$, $-\sigma o$, $-\tau o$, $-\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$, $-\sigma\theta\varepsilon$, $-\nu\tau o$.
- (4) The ending of the second person singular, present optative passive was *- $o\iota\sigma o$. The intervocalic - σ dropped out to give the ending - $o\iota o$.

5. PRESENT INFINITIVE PASSIVE

To form the present infinitive passive, add to the present tense stem the ending -εσθαι.

Thus, the present infinitive passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\upsilon} \omega$ is παιδεύεσθαιto be being educated to be educated

As in the present infinitive active, tense in the present infinitive passive shows progressive/repeated aspect, not time.

6. AORIST INDICATIVE PASSIVE

Unlike the present passive, which is formed from the same tense stem as the present active and which shows its passive voice by the use of passive endings, the aorist passive uses a different tense stem derived from Principal Part VI. The aorist passive endings use active person markers; voice is shown by the tense stem itself.

116 UNIT 5

To form the aorist indicative passive, drop the ending $-\eta\nu$ from Principal Part VI. There remain the past indicative augment $\dot{\epsilon}$ - and the aorist passive tense stem. To the augmented aorist passive tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	- η ν	-ημεν
2	-75	-ητε
3	-n	-ησαν

Thus, the augmented agrist passive tense stem of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$ is $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \theta$ -, and the forms of the agrist indicative passive are as follows:

	S
1	ἐπαιδεύθην	I was educated
2	ἐπαιδεύθης	you were educated
3	$\dot{\epsilon}$ παιδεύ $ heta$ η	he/she/it was educated
	Р
	Г
1	τ ἐπαιδεύθημ εν	we were educated
1 2	•	we were educated you were educated

Observation: The aorist passive endings consist of the tense vowel $-\eta$ - and a set of active person markers: $-\nu$, $-\varsigma$, -, $-\mu \nu \nu$, $-\tau \varepsilon$, $-\sigma \alpha \nu$ (cf., e.g., the imperfect $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi al\delta \varepsilon v \sigma v$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi al\delta \varepsilon v \varepsilon \varsigma$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi al\delta \varepsilon v \varepsilon -$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi al\delta \varepsilon v \sigma \iota v$ [where, of course, the $-\sigma$ - is part of the tense stem]). Thus, in the aorist indicative passive, voice is shown not by the person marker but by the aorist passive tense stem alone.

7. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE PASSIVE

To form the agrist subjunctive passive, add the subjunctive active endings to the unaugmented agrist passive tense stem, which is obtained by dropping the past indicative augment and the ending $-\eta v$ from Principal Part VI.

Thus, the unaugmented agrist passive tense stem of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \omega$ is $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta$ -, and the forms of the agrist subjunctive passive of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	$\pi a \iota \delta arepsilon v heta oldsymbol{ ilde{\omega}}$	παιδευθ ῶμεν
2	π αιδευ θ $ ilde{m{\eta}}$ ς	π αιδεν θ ῆτε
3	π αιδεν θ $\tilde{\mathbf{\eta}}$	$\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ $\tilde{\omega}$ σι(ν)

- Observations: (1) As in the aorist indicative passive, voice in the aorist subjunctive passive is shown by the tense stem alone, and not by the person markers of the endings.
 - (2) The accent on the aorist subjunctive passive in all its forms is a circumflex on the initial vowel of the ending. The original form was $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta \dot{\epsilon} \omega$, with $-\epsilon$ -, a short-vowel grade of the tense vowel $-\eta$ of the indicative, and the usual subjunctive active endings. The two vowels contracted to give $-\tilde{\omega}$, etc.

8. AORIST OPTATIVE PASSIVE

To form the aorist optative passive, add the following endings to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem:

	S	P
1	-ειην	-εῖμεν/-ειημεν
2	-ειης	-εῖτε/-ειητε
3	-€lη	-εῖεν/-ειησαν

Thus, the forms of the agrist optative passive of $\pi \alpha \imath \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδευθείην	$\pi a \imath \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ εῖμεν $/\pi a \imath \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ είημεν
2	παιδευθείης	$\pi a \imath \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ εῖτε $/\pi a \imath \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ είητε
3	$\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon v \theta \epsilon i \eta$	$\pi a \imath \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ εῖεν $/\pi a \imath \delta \varepsilon v \theta$ είησαν

Observations: (1) The optative passive ending $-\epsilon\iota\eta\nu$ can be analyzed as consisting of the tense vowel $-\epsilon$ - (short-vowel grade of the $-\eta$ - of $\ell\pi a\iota\delta\epsilon v\theta\eta\nu$; cf. $\pi a\iota\delta\epsilon v\theta\tilde{\omega} < *\pi a\iota\delta\epsilon v\theta\epsilon\omega) + -\iota\eta$ - (optative suffix) $+ -\nu$ (first person singular person marker; cf. the imperfect indicative active $\ell\pi a\iota\delta\epsilon v\nu$ and the aorist indicative passive $\ell\pi a\iota\delta\epsilon v\theta\eta\nu$). In the plural, the optative suffix was either $-\bar{\iota}$ - or $-\iota\eta$ -, both of which combined with the tense vowel $-\epsilon$ - to form the diphthong $-\epsilon\iota$ -.

Note that in the third person plural the ending with the optative suffix $-\bar{\iota}$ - uses the person marker $-\varepsilon \nu$; the alternative ending with the optative suffix $-\iota\eta$ - uses the person marker $-\sigma\alpha\nu$. There is no difference in meaning between the alternative forms.

- (2) As in the agrist indicative and subjunctive passive, voice is shown by the tense stem alone, not by the person markers of the endings.
- (3) NOTE THAT THE ACCENT IN THE AORIST OPTATIVE PASSIVE NEVER GOES BACK BEYOND THE -t- OF THE ENDING. It is acute or circumflex as the rules for the possibilities of accent dictate.

9. AORIST INFINITIVE PASSIVE

To form the agrist infinitive passive, add to the unaugmented agrist passive tense stem the ending $-\tilde{\eta}\nu\alpha\iota$.

Thus, the agrist infinitive passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ is παιδενθηναι to be educated

Like all the other infinitives, the agrist infinitive passive shows aspect only. Compare:

present infinitive passive $\pi \alpha \imath \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \epsilon \sigma \theta \alpha \imath$ to be being educated to be educated (habitually) aorist infinitive passive $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta \tilde{\eta} \nu \alpha \iota$ to be educated (once and for all)

Observation: In an infinitive, the syllable preceding the ending - $\nu\alpha\iota$ is always accented.

10. FUTURE INDICATIVE PASSIVE

The future indicative passive is formed on a stem different from that of the future indicative active. In this respect, it is similar to the agrist indicative passive, which is also formed on a stem different from that of the agrist indicative active.

To form the future indicative passive, to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem add the suffix $-\eta\sigma$ - to form the future passive tense stem. To the future passive tense stem add the same endings as those used in the present indicative passive.

Thus, the unaugmented agrist passive tense stem of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$ is $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \theta$ -, and the future passive tense stem is $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \theta \eta \sigma$ -. The forms of the future indicative passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$ are as follows:

	S
1	παιδενθήσ ομαι	I shall be educated I shall be being educated
2	παιδευθήσ ει / παιδευθήσ η	you will be educated you will be being educated
3	παιδενθήσ εται	he/she/it will be educated he/she/it will be being educated
1	παιδενθησ όμεθα	we shall be educated we shall be being educated
2	παιδευθήσ εσθε	you will be educated you will be being educated
3	παιδευθήσ ονται	they will be educated they will be being educated

Observations: (1) The passive voice is shown in the future indicative passive by the future passive tense stem and by the passive endings.

- (2) The $-\sigma$ of the future passive tense stem is similar to the $-\sigma$ -which appears so frequently in the future indicative active. Cf. $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \psi \sigma \omega$.
- (3) Like the future indicative active, the future indicative passive can express either simple or progressive/repeated aspect.

11. PERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the perfect indicative passive, obtain the perfect passive tense stem by dropping the ending $-\mu\alpha\iota$ from Principal Part V. To the perfect passive tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-μαι	-μεθα
2	-σαι	-σθε
3	-ται	-νται

Thus, the perfect passive tense stem of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ is $\pi \varepsilon \pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon v$ -, and the forms of the perfect indicative passive are as follows:

	S
1	πεπαίδευμαι	I have been educated
2	πεπαίδεν $σαι$	you have been educated
3	πεπαίδευ ται	he/she/it has been educated
	P
1	πεπαιδεύμ εθα	we have been educated
2	πεπαίδευ σθε	you have been educated
3	πεπαίδευνται	they have been educated

Observations: (1) The endings of the perfect indicative passive are simply the person markers of the primary passive endings without the thematic vowel. Compare the first person singular, perfect indicative passive πεπαίδευμαι with the first person singular, present indicative passive παιδεύομαι.

- (2) Note that the second person singular, perfect indicative passive ending retains the -σ- that had dropped out of the other second person singular forms; cf., e.g., παιδεύρ <*παιδεύεσαι.
- (3) Like the perfect indicative active, the perfect indicative passive shows completed aspect in present time.

12. PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the pluperfect indicative passive, prefix the past indicative augment to the perfect passive tense stem. To the augmented perfect passive tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-μην	-μεθα
2	-σο	-σθ€
3	-το	-٧το

Thus, the augmented perfect passive tense stem of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$ is $\epsilon \pi \epsilon \pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu$, and the forms of the pluperfect indicative passive are as follows:

	S
1	ἐπεπαιδεύ μην	I had been educated
2	ἐπεπαίδευ σο	you had been educated
3	ἐπεπαίδευ το	he/she/it had been educated

P

1	ἐπεπαιδεύ μ∈θα	we had been educated
2	$\dot{\epsilon}\pi arepsilon \pi al\delta arepsilon v$ $\sigma heta \epsilon$	you had been educated
3	έπεπαίδευ ντο	they had been educated

Observations: (1) The endings of the pluperfect indicative passive are simply the person markers of the secondary passive endings without the thematic vowel. Compare the first person singular, pluperfect indicative passive ἐπεπαιδεύμην with the first person singular, imperfect indicative passive ἐπαιδευόμην.

- (2) Note that the second person singular of the pluperfect indicative passive retains the -σ- that had dropped out of other second person singular forms; cf., e.g., ἐπαιδεύου > *ἐπαιδεύοσο.
- (3) Like the pluperfect indicative active, the pluperfect indicative passive indicates action complete from the point of view of past time.

13. PERFECT INFINITIVE PASSIVE

To form the perfect infinitive passive, add to the perfect passive tense stem the ending $-\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$.

Thus, the perfect infinitive passive of $\pi \alpha \imath \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ is πεπαιδεῦσθαι to have been educated

The perfect infinitive passive shows completed aspect only.

- Observations: (1) The ending of the perfect infinitive passive is the same as that of the present infinitive passive except that it lacks the thematic vowel. Compare the present infinitive passive παιδεύεσθαι with the perfect infinitive passive πεπαιδεῦσθαι.
 - (2) THE PERFECT INFINITIVE PASSIVE DOES NOT HAVE RECESSIVE ACCENT; IT IS ALWAYS ACCENTED ON THE PENULT. Final -at, as usual, counts as short for purposes of accentuation.

Drill III.1-15, page 133, may now be done.

14. CONSONANT STEMS

When the perfect passive tense stem ends in a vowel or a diphthong, as in $\lambda \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \nu \mu a \iota$ or $\pi \epsilon \pi a \dot{\iota} \delta \epsilon \nu \mu a \iota$, adding the endings of the perfect passive or the pluperfect passive presents no problem. But when the perfect passive tense stem ends in a consonant, adding the endings produced awkward clusters of consonants at the juncture between stem and ending. Greek altered many such consonant clusters in order to make them easier to pronounce, and Principal Part V often has the final consonant of the stem in an altered form. For example, in the verb $\gamma \epsilon \dot{\alpha} \phi \omega$, the original first person singular, perfect indicative passive had been * $\gamma \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \alpha \phi \mu a \iota$, but the final - φ - of the stem was changed to - μ - before the - μ - of the ending - $\mu a \iota$. Thus, one cannot simply drop the ending - $\mu a \iota$ from Principal Part V and use $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \alpha \mu$ - as a tense stem. Instead, one must add the endings to the original consonant of the tense stem and make any changes necessary.

Whatever the original final consonant of the stem may have been, in the verbs learned thus far the various combinations of final consonant and $-\mu\alpha\iota$ give only three possible results in Principal Part V:

-μμαι (where the original consonant was a labial [\pi, \beta, \varphi]):
e.g., γέγραμμαι, πέθαμμαι, πέπεμμαι
```

-γμαι (where the original consonant was a palatal [κ, γ, χ]): e.g., δεδίδαγμαι, πεφύλαγμαι, τέταγμαι

-σμαι (where the original consonant usually was a dental [τ, δ, θ] or σ): e.g., κεκέλευσμαι

Changes must be made in the final consonants of the stems of these verbs in accordance with the patterns given below. The perfect passive of verbs not following these patterns will be given in the vocabulary notes as these verbs are introduced.

1. PERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE OF CONSONANT STEMS

$-\mu\mu\alpha\iota$

    S 1 γέγραμμαι (*γέγραφμαι) πέπεμμαι (*πέπεμπμαι)
    2 γέγραψαι (*γέγραφσαι) πέπεμψαι (*πέπεμπσαι)
    3 γέγραπται (*γέγραφται) πέπεμπται (πέπεμπται)
```

    P 1 γεγράμμεθα (*γεγράφμεθα) πεπέμμεθα (*πεπέμπμεθα)
    2 γέγραφθε (*γέγραφσθε) πέπεμφθε (*πέπεμπσθε)
    3  (*γεγράφνται)  (*πεπέμπνται)

- Observations: (1) Most verbs with a Principal Part V ending in $-\mu\mu\alpha\iota$ will be conjugated like $\gamma \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \varrho \alpha \mu \mu \alpha\iota$; those that are not will be pointed out in the vocabulary notes. Note that any labial (π, β, φ) gives ψ in the second person singular, π in the third person singular, and μ in the first person plural. In the second person plural, the σ of $-\sigma\theta\epsilon$ is dropped and the final labial of the stem becomes the aspirate φ . In the third person plural, the original form $*\gamma\epsilon\gamma\varrho\dot{\alpha}\varphi\tau\tau\alpha\iota$ was replaced by a compound form which is given in the Appendix.
 - (2) In πέπεμμαι the stem is πεπεμπ-, to which -μαι was added. The resulting form *πέπεμπμαι was simplified to πέπεμμαι; the same simplification also appears in the first person plural πεπέμμεθα. Elsewhere, both the nasal and the labial of the tense stem πεπεμπ- appear, with the labial the same as that in γέγραμμαι: πέπεμψαι, πέπεμπται, πέπεμφθε.

		-γμαι		-σμαι
S	1	πεφύλαγμαι	(*πεφύλακμαι)	κεκέλευσμαι
	2	πεφύλαξαι	(*πεφύλακσαι)	κεκέλευσαι
	3	πεφύλακται	(πεφύλακται)	κεκέλευσται
P	1	πεφυλάγμεθα	(*πεφυλάκμεθα)	κεκελεύ σμεθα
	2	πεφύλα χθε	(*πεφύλακσθε)	κεκέλευ σ θε
	3		(*πεφυλάκνται)	***

- Observations: (1) In verbs with a Principal Part V ending in $-\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$, the palatal $(\varkappa, \gamma, \chi)$ appears as a γ before the μ of the first person singular and plural $\pi\epsilon\varphi\dot{\nu}\lambda\alpha\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$ and $\pi\epsilon\varphi\nu\lambda\dot{\alpha}\gamma\mu\epsilon\theta\alpha$, as a ξ in the second person singular $\pi\epsilon\varphi\dot{\nu}\lambda\alpha\xi\alpha\iota$, and as a \varkappa in the third person singular. In the second person plural, the σ of the ending drops, and the final consonant of the stem becomes the aspirate χ : $\pi\epsilon\varphi\dot{\nu}\lambda\alpha\varkappa\sigma\theta\epsilon > \pi\epsilon\varphi\dot{\nu}\lambda\alpha\chi\theta\epsilon$. The third person plural form is a compound which is given in the Appendix.
 - (2) Most verbs with a Principal Part V ending in -σμαι are conjugated like κεκέλευσμαι; those that are not are pointed out in the vocabulary notes. The ending is simply added to the stem with no changes except in the second person singular and plural, where the combination $-\sigma\sigma$ - is simplified to a single $-\sigma$ -: * $\kappa\epsilon\kappa\ell\lambda\epsilon\nu\sigma\sigma\alpha\iota$ > $\kappa\epsilon\kappa\ell\lambda\epsilon\nu\sigma\sigma\epsilon$ > $\kappa\epsilon\kappa\ell\lambda\epsilon\nu\sigma\theta\epsilon$.

2. PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE OF CONSONANT STEMS

Exactly the same changes occur in the pluperfect indicative passive of consonant stems as in the perfect indicative passive.

-μμαι 1 έγεγράμμην ἐπεπέμμην 2 έγέγραψο *ἐπέπεμ*ψο 3 έγέγραπτο ἐπέπεμπτο έγεγράμμεθα ἐπεπέμμεθα έγέγραφθε ἐπέπεμφθε  -γμαι -σμαι 1 ἐπεφυλάγμην έκεκελεύσμην 2 ἐπεφύλαξο έκεκέλευσο 3 ἐπεφύλακτο ἐκεκέλευστο *ἐπεφυλά*γμεθα ἐκεκελεύσμεθα έπεφύλαχθε ἐκεκέλευσθε

3. PERFECT INFINITIVE PASSIVE OF CONSONANT STEMS

γεγράφθαι πεπέμφθαι πεφυλάχθαι κεκελεῦσθαι

Observation: In the perfect infinitive passive, the combination of the consonants of the stem and the ending $-\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$ produces the same result as in the second person plural of the perfect indicative passive: the σ of the ending is dropped and a final labial or palatal of the stem is aspirated. Note also that the accent is fixed on the penult, and that the $-\alpha\iota$ of the endings counts, as usual, as short for purposes of accentuation.

Drill III.16-30, pages 133-34, may now be done.

SECTION 45 125

44. GENITIVE OF PERSONAL AGENT

DATIVE OF PERSONAL AGENT WITH THE PERFECT AND PLUPERFECT PASSIVE

DATIVE OF MEANS

With most passive verbs, the personal agent, i.e., the person by whom the action of the verb is performed, is expressed by the preposition ind + the genitive. This is called the genitive of personal agent.

δ λόγος ὑπὸ τοῦ 'Ομήρου γράφεται. The speech is being written by Homer.

 δ πόλεμος ύπο τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἐπαύθη. The war was stopped by the soldiers.

With the perfect and the pluperfect tenses, the personal agent is expressed by the dative case without any preposition. This is called the dative of personal agent.

δ λόγος 'Ομήρω γέγραπται. The speech has been written by Homer.

δ πόλεμος τοῖς στρατιώταις ἐπέπαυτο.
The war had been stopped by the soldiers.

A thing with which something is done is put in the dative (the dative of means or instrument) without a preposition.

ύπὸ τοῦ Oμήρου ἐπαύθησαν οἱ στρατιῶται λόγω. The soldiers were stopped by Homer by (means of) a speech.

Drill IV, page 134, may now be done.

45. SUBSTANTIVE USE OF THE ADJECTIVE

Since both the article and the adjective, as well as the noun, have gender, number, and case, phrases such as $\delta \, \dot{a}\gamma a\theta \dot{o}\varsigma \, \ddot{a}\nu\theta\varrho\omega\pi\sigma\varsigma$, "the good man," were considered redundant. Where the noun had a general meaning of "man," "woman," or "thing," Greek often left the noun out and let the adjective stand as a noun. Compare the English sentence, "The good die young," where the adjective "good" takes on the meaning "good people." This is called the substantive use of the adjective, and adjectives so used are called substantives. Substantives can stand in any gender, number, or case, and can perform all the functions of nouns in any sentence.

126 UNIT 5

46. SUBSTANTIVE USE OF THE ARTICLE

Since the definite article has gender, number, and case, it can, accompanied by an adverb, prepositional phrase, or other modifier, be used as a substantive: its gender and number indicate the person(s) or thing(s) named, and its case shows its relationship to the rest of the sentence.

oi ἐν τῆ νήσφ
the men on the island τὰς νῦν
the women now women now (generic use of the article) women of the present time τὰ τοῦ πολέμου
the things of war
(= the affairs of war)
```

When two articles used as substantives are contrasted by $\mu \acute{\epsilon} \nu$ and $\delta \acute{\epsilon}$, they can be translated by "the one..., the other," "some..., others."

ὁ μὲν διδάσκει, ὁ δὲ διδάσκεται.
The one teaches, the other is taught.
τοὺς μὲν πέμπομεν, τοὺς δὲ φυλάττομεν.
Some we send, but others we guard.
We send some men (one group), but we guard others (another group).

SECTION 47 127

With a substantive use of an adjective or the article the negative $o\vec{v}$ is used for specific substantives, $\mu \acute{\eta}$ for generic substantives; cf. Section 16.4, page 29.

of odn ev $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ $\eta \eta \sigma \phi$ those specific men not on the island of $\mu \dot{\eta}$ ev $\tau \tilde{\eta}$ $\eta \dot{\eta} \sigma \phi$ those not on the island whoever are not on the island

47. THE ARTICULAR INFINITIVE

The infinitive is a verbal noun. Like other verb forms, the infinitive has tense and voice. Like the noun, the infinitive can appear in various cases which indicate its function in the sentence.

When used with the verb $\varkappa \varepsilon \lambda \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$, "command," the infinitive is an object infinitive, i.e., stands as the direct object of the verb, along with the person commanded (cf. page 102).

τὸν ἀδελφὸν δῶρα πέμψαι κελεύομεν. We order the brother to send gifts.

In this example, the person commanded, $\tau \partial \nu \ \delta \delta \epsilon \lambda \varphi \delta \nu$, is in the accusative case and is a direct object of $\kappa \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \psi \delta \mu \epsilon \nu$. The infinitive $\pi \epsilon \mu \psi \alpha \iota$ is also a direct object of $\kappa \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \psi \delta \mu \epsilon \nu$ and can be considered to stand in the accusative case. But infinitives are indeclinable verbal nouns, so that context, not case endings, shows the relation of this infinitive to the rest of the sentence.

Attic Greek also developed a way of employing the infinitive more freely in various cases by having it accompanied by a neuter singular form of the definite article to indicate the infinitive's case. Such an infinitive accompanied by the article is called the articular infinitive.

The articular infinitive is often best translated by the English gerund ("writing") rather than by the English infinitive ("to write"). Do not confuse the English gerund, a verbal noun ("Writing a book is good"), with the English participle, a verbal adjective ("the man writing with a red pen").

The tense of the articular infinitive, like that of the subjunctive, the optative, and other infinitives, indicates aspect, not time: progressive/repeated aspect in the present tense, simple aspect in the acrist tense, and completed aspect in the perfect tense. The articular infinitive can occur in any voice.

Nom. S	τὸ γράφειν	to be writing, to write (habitually), writing
Gen.	τοῦ γράφειν	of writing (progressive/repeated aspect)
Dat.	τῷ γράφειν	by writing (progressive/repeated aspect)
Acc.	τὸ γράφειν	writing (progressive/repeated aspect)
Nom. S	τὸ γράψαι	to write (once and for all), writing
Gen.	τοῦ γράψαι	of writing (once and for all)
Dat.	τῷ γράψαι	by writing (once and for all)
Acc.	τὸ γράψαι	writing (once and for all)
Nom. S	τὸ γεγραφέναι	to have written, having written
Gen.	τοῦ γεγραφέναι	of having written
Dat.	τῷ γεγραφέναι	by having written
Acc.	τὸ γεγραφέναι	having written

An articular infinitive is used like any other noun.

καλὸν τὸ γράφειν.
To write is good.
Writing is good.
πρὸ τοῦ γράψαι before writing τῷ γράφειν
by means of writing διὰ τὸ γεγραφέναι on account of having written

The negative of the articular infinitive is $\mu \dot{\eta}$.

κακὸν τὸ μὴ γράφειν Not to write is bad. Not writing is bad.

Compare:

οὐ κακὸν τὸ γράφειν.

To write is not bad. Writing is not bad.

In the second example, the $o\dot{v}$ negates the predicate adjective $\varkappa a\varkappa \delta v$.

Drill V, page 134, may now be done.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The noun $d\varrho\gamma\delta\varrho\iota o\nu$, $d\varrho\gamma\nu\varrho lov$, $\tau\delta$, "small coin; money," consists of the stem of the word $d\varrho\gamma\nu\varrho o\varsigma$, $d\varrho\gamma\delta\varrho ov$, δ , "silver," and the diminutive suffix -lov. A diminutive suffix indicates a small quantity or size of the noun to which it is added, or affection or contempt. The suffix also appears in the noun $\beta\iota\beta\lambda lov$, $\beta\iota\beta\lambda lov$, $\tau\delta$, "book," which is a diminutive of the word for papyrus.

In $\[delta \rho_{\chi} \omega$, $\[delta \rho_{\xi} \omega$, $\[delta$

In $\beta\lambda\dot{\alpha}\pi\tau\omega$, $\beta\lambda\dot{\alpha}\psi\omega$, $\xi\beta\lambda\alpha\psi\alpha$, $\xi\xi\beta\lambda\alpha\phi\alpha$, $\xi\xi\beta\lambda\alpha\phi\alpha$, $\xi\xi\beta\lambda\alpha\beta\eta\nu$ or $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\phi\eta\nu$, "hurt, harm," the basic root is $\beta\lambda\alpha\beta$ -. The present is formed with the suffix $-\iota\omega=[yo]$: * $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\iota\omega$ > $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\iota\omega$. In the future and in the aorist, the final vowel of the root $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\iota\omega$ > $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\iota\omega$. In the future and in the aspirated perfect active (cf. $\eta\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\mu\alpha$, $\eta\xi\eta\dot{\alpha}\alpha$). The perfect passive comes from * $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\mu\alpha$. In the aorist passive there are alternative forms with no difference in meaning: $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\eta\nu$, which is formed with the suffix $-\theta$ -, and $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\eta\nu$ with no suffix; both must be learned. The future passive is formed from $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\eta\nu$: thus $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\beta\eta\nu$. Note the similarities and differences between $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\eta\nu$ and $\xi\xi\lambda\dot{\alpha}\eta\nu$.

Note the circumflex accent on $\gamma\tilde{\eta}$, $\gamma\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, $\tilde{\eta}$, "earth, land." The accent remains a circumflex throughout the declension, e.g., $\tau\tilde{\eta}\nu$ $\gamma\tilde{\eta}\nu$. The word means "earth" as opposed to sky or sea, as well as the "earth" the farmer works. It can also be synonymous with $\chi\omega\varrho\bar{a}$, $\chi\omega\varrho\bar{a}\varsigma$, $\tilde{\eta}$ as meaning "country" as opposed to city. $\Gamma\tilde{\eta}$ is also the mother of the gods in Greek mythology.

διδάσκαλος, διδασκάλον, δ, "teacher," is an agent noun formed from the present stem of the verb δ ιδάσκω, "teach."

VOCABULARY NOTES 131

The primary meaning of $\delta\delta\xi\alpha$, $\delta\delta\xi\eta\varsigma$, η is "expectation, belief, opinion." The opinion that people have of a person is that person's "reputation," and a positive reputation is that person's "glory." Often, but not always, $\delta\delta\xi\alpha$ as "belief" is contrasted with "knowledge."

In $d\theta d\nu a\tau o \varsigma$, $d\theta d\nu a\tau o \nu$ note the alpha privative and the fact that the compound adjective has only two endings; cf. $d\delta \iota \kappa o \varsigma$, $d\delta \iota \kappa o \varsigma$.

With the adjective $i\epsilon\varrho\delta\varsigma$, $i\epsilon\varrho\delta$, $i\epsilon\varrho\delta$, $i\epsilon\varrho\delta\nu$, "holy, sacred to (+ gen.)," Greek idiom uses the genitive case to express the deity to whom someone or something is sacred. $i\epsilon\varrho\delta\nu$, $i\epsilon\varrho\delta\nu$, $i\epsilon\varrho\delta\nu$, "shrine," is a neuter singular substantive use of the adjective.

The adjective $\ell \varkappa a \nu \acute{o}_{\varsigma}$, $\ell \varkappa a \nu \acute{\eta}$, $\ell \varkappa a \nu \acute{o}_{\nu}$ means "sufficient" when used of things, "capable" when used of people. Like $\check{a}\xi \iota o_{\varsigma}$, $\grave{a}\xi \ell \bar{a}$, $\check{a}\xi \iota o_{\nu}$, "worthy," of Unit 4, $\ell \varkappa a \nu \acute{o}_{\varsigma}$, $\ell \varkappa a \nu \acute{\eta}$, $\ell \varkappa a \nu \acute{o}_{\nu}$ can be followed by an epexegetical ("explaining") infinitive: $\delta \ell \varkappa a \nu \grave{o}_{\varsigma} \tau o \grave{v}_{\varsigma} \tau o \lambda \ell \tau \bar{a}_{\varsigma} \tau e \ell \bar{o} a \iota$, "the man capable to persuade the citizens, the man capable of persuading the citizens."

Note that $\ln \pi o \varsigma$, $\ln \pi o v$, δ or η is either masculine, "stallion," or feminine, "mare." The gender will be indicated by an article or adjective; cf. δ $\theta \epsilon \delta \varsigma$, "god"; η $\theta \epsilon \delta \varsigma$, "goddess."

The root of $\pi \epsilon \ell \theta \omega$, $\pi \epsilon \ell \sigma \omega$, $\ell \pi \epsilon \ell \sigma \omega$, $\ell \pi \epsilon \ell \omega \omega$, $\ell \pi \epsilon \ell \sigma \theta \eta \nu$, "persuade," is $\pi \epsilon \ell \theta$. The final - θ - of the root disappears in the future, the aorist, and the perfect active. In the perfect passive and the aorist passive, it has been replaced by - σ -: $\pi \ell \pi \epsilon \ell \sigma \omega$, $\ell \pi \epsilon \ell \sigma \theta \eta \nu$. A - σ - also appears in Principal Parts V and VI of $\ell \kappa \epsilon \ell \epsilon \nu \omega$: $\ell \kappa \epsilon \ell \epsilon \nu \omega \omega$, $\ell \kappa \epsilon \ell \epsilon \nu \omega \omega$ can also be followed by an object infinitive: $\ell \kappa \epsilon \ell \omega \omega$ someone (in the accusative) to do (in the infinitive) something.

πολέμιος, πολεμία, πολέμιον, "hostile," is derived from the noun πόλεμος, πολέμον, δ, "war." The person toward whom one feels hostile is put in the dative case: οἱ ἀδελφοὶ οἱ τοῖς ἐν τῆ νήσω πολέμιοι, "the brothers hostile to the men on the island." As a substantive, the word means "enemy," not as a personal enemy but as someone against whom one fights in war.

The root of πράττω, πράξω, ἔπραξα, πέπραχα (trans.) or πέπραγα (intrans.), πέπραγμαι, ἐπράχθην, "do; fare," is πρακ-, with a long alpha. Principal Part I is formed with the suffix ιω: *πράκιω > πράττω. The principal parts have a pattern similar to that of φνλάττω and τάττω. πράττω can be either transitive or intransitive: κακὸν ἔργον πράττω, "I am doing an evil deed"; εῦ πράττω, "I do/fare well." The aspirated perfect is only transitive: κακὸν ἔργον πέπραχα, "I have done an evil deed"; πέπραγα is only intransitive: εῦ πέπραγα, "I have done/fared well."

Note that in Greek the expression "to do something to someone" can take a double accusative: $\kappa \alpha \kappa \partial \nu \pi \rho \dot{\alpha} \tau \tau \omega \tau \partial \nu \sigma \tau \rho \alpha \tau \iota \dot{\omega} \tau \bar{\alpha} \zeta$, "I do evil to the soldiers." Cf. $\kappa \alpha \iota \dot{\sigma} \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\nu} \omega \tau \dot{\sigma} \dot{\nu} \zeta \sigma \tau \rho \alpha \tau \iota \dot{\omega} \tau \bar{\alpha} \zeta \tau \dot{\gamma} \nu \tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta \nu$, "I teach the soldiers the art."

Adjectives of time and place, such as $\pi\varrho\tilde{\omega}\tau o\varsigma$, $\pi\varrho\tilde{\omega}\tau\eta$, $\pi\varrho\tilde{\omega}\tau o\nu$, "first," in the predicate position are the equivalent of English adverbs.

οί $v \epsilon \bar{a} v i a \iota \tau \dot{\gamma} v \epsilon i \varrho \dot{\gamma} v \eta v \pi \varrho \tilde{\omega} \tau o \iota \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \bar{v} \sigma a v$. The young men destroyed the peace first.

When used of spatial relations, the preposition $\delta\pi\delta$ follows the pattern of $\pi\alpha\varrho\delta$ with the dative, "to be under," and with the accusative, "to go under." With the genitive, $\delta\pi\delta$ can mean motion "away from under" or even in certain phrases "being under," e.g., $\tau\lambda$ $\delta\pi\delta$ $\gamma\eta\xi$, "the things under the earth." With the genitive of personal agent, $\delta\pi\delta$ means "by."

The adjective $\varphi \circ \beta \varepsilon \varrho \delta \varsigma$, $\varphi \circ \beta \varepsilon \varrho \delta \varepsilon$, $\varphi \circ \beta \varepsilon \varrho \delta v$, "fearful," is derived from the noun $\varphi \delta \beta \circ \varsigma$, $\varphi \delta \beta \circ v$, δ , "fear." The adjective can be used of the person or thing feeling the fear or causing the fear.

48. THIRD-DECLENSION NOUNS: CONSONANT STEMS

Third-declension nouns can be masculine, feminine, or neuter. They employ the endings listed below. As with first- and second-declension nouns, the stem to which the endings are added is obtained by dropping the ending of the genitive singular.

	M or F	N
Nom. S	1	-
Gen.	-ος	-05
Dat.	-L	-L
Acc.	-a, -v
Voc.	3
Nom./Voc. P	-€ς	-α
Gen.	-ων	-ων
Dat.	-σι(ν)	-σι(ν)
Acc.	-ας	-a

The declensions of five representative third-declension nouns with consonant stems (stems ending in a consonant) are presented below. The rules for declining these and other third-declension nouns are given after the paradigms.

φύλαξ, φύλακος, δ, "guard"	(stem: φυλακ-) αἴξ, αἰγός, ὁ or ἡ, "goat"	(stem: alγ -) έλπίς, έλπίδος, ή, "hope"	(stem: ἐλπιδ-)
χάρις, χάριτος, ή, "grace"	(stem: χαριτ-)
σῶμα, σώματος, τό, "body"	(stem: σωματ-)

Nom. S	φύλαξ	$a\ddot{i}\xi$	ἐλπίς	χάοις	$\sigma \tilde{\omega} \mu a$
Gen.	φύλακ ος	αἰγ ός	έλπίδος	χά οι τ ος	σώματ ος

Acc.	φύλακ α	$\alpha l_{\gamma'} \alpha$	έλπίδ α	χάοιν	$\sigma \tilde{\omega} \mu a$
Voc.	φύλαξ	$ai\xi$	$ec{\epsilon}\lambda\pi\ell$	χάοι	$\sigma \tilde{\omega} \mu \alpha$

Acc.	φύλακας	αίγας	ἐλπίδ ας	χά οι τ ας	σώματ α

Rule for the accentuation of consonant-stem third-declension nouns:

Accent is persistent. But third-declension nouns with monosyllabic stems accent the ultima in the genitive and dative, singular and plural; the genitive plural takes a circumflex. Thus $\varphi \delta \lambda \alpha \varkappa - o \varsigma$, but $\alpha i \gamma - \delta \varsigma$.

Observations on case forms:

Nominative singular: This form will simply be learned from the standard vocabulary listing of each noun.

 $\label{lem:accusative singular} Accusative \ singular, \ almost \ all \ masculine \ and$ feminine nouns with consonant stems employ the ending $-\alpha$.

But nouns whose stems end in $-\iota\tau$, $-\iota\delta$, or $-\bar{\iota}\theta$, and which do not accent this iota, drop the final consonant from the stem and employ the ending $-\nu$. Thus έλπίδα, but χάριν.

Remember that in neuter nouns of all declensions the accusative singular is identical in form with the nominative singular.

Vocative singular: In the box below are the rules for forming the vocative singular of ALL third-declension nouns, including those presented later. These rules should be learned as new third-declension nouns are encountered.

In masculine and feminine nouns the vocative singular is identical in form with the nominative singular

- (1) when the nominative singular ends in $-\xi$ or $-\psi$ (e.g., $\alpha \ddot{i}\xi$)
- (2) when the nominative singular ends in -ν or - ρ and accents the ultima (e.g., $\lambda \iota \mu \dot{\eta} \nu$).

Otherwise, the vocative singular consists of the stem alone, with any final dental dropped (e.g., $\chi \acute{a}\varrho \iota$).

In all neuter nouns the vocative singular is identical in form with the nominative singular.

The vocative singular of nouns which do not follow these rules will be given in the vocabulary.

plural:

Nominative/Vocative Remember that in all nouns of all declensions the nominative and vocative plural are identical in form.

> All neuter nouns employ the ending $-\alpha$ in the nominative/vocative and accusative plural.

Dative plural:

In the following box are rules for combining the dative plural ending $-\sigma \iota$ with third-declension stems ending in consonants, including stems to be presented later. These rules should be learned as new third-declension nouns are encountered.

The combination of the final consonant of the stem with the dative plural ending -ou causes the following phonetic or spelling changes:

$$\pi, \beta, \varphi + -\sigma\iota = -\psi\iota \\
\pi, \gamma, \chi + -\sigma\iota = -\xi\iota \\
\tau, \delta, \theta + -\sigma\iota = -\sigma\iota \\
\nu + -\sigma\iota = -\sigma\iota \\ \sigma + -\sigma\iota = -\sigma\iota \\
-\alpha\nu\tau - + -\sigma\iota = -\bar{\alpha}\sigma\iota \\
-\varepsilon\nu\tau - + -\sigma\iota = -\varepsilon\iota\sigma\iota \\
-\sigma\nu\tau - + -\sigma\iota = -\varepsilon\iota\sigma\iota \\
-\sigma\nu\tau - + -\sigma\iota = -\varepsilon\nu\sigma\iota \\
\lambda + -\sigma\iota = -\lambda\sigma\iota \text{ with no change} \\
\varrho + -\sigma\iota = -\varrho\sigma\iota \text{ with no change}$$

142 Unit 6

Note that when $-a\nu\tau$ -, $-\epsilon\nu\tau$ -, or $-o\nu\tau$ - are combined with the ending, $\nu\tau$ is lost and a long vowel or diphthong appears by a process called compensatory lengthening. A diphthong which results from compensatory lengthening is called a spurious diphthong.

Accusative plural: Contrast the ending $-\alpha_{\zeta}$ of the third declension with the ending $-\tilde{\alpha}_{\zeta}$ of the first declension.

Drills I and II, page 156, may now be done.

49. THE RELATIVE PRONOUN

A noun or pronoun can be modified by an adjective (δ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος, the good man), by another noun in the genitive case ($\tau \delta$ 'Oμήρου βιβλίον, Homer's book), by a prepositional phrase (δ ἐν τῆ χώρᾳ πολῖται, the citizens in the land), or by an adverb (δ νῦν πολῖται, present-day citizens).

A noun or pronoun can also be modified by a dependent clause called a relative clause, introduced by the relative pronoun. Here are some examples in English.

The poet who wrote the book is good.

The poet whose book (= of whom the book) we sent to the island is good.

The poet to whom we sent the book is good.

The poet whom we educated is good.

None of these relative clauses is a complete sentence. Each is a dependent clause within a complex sentence which also contains a main or independent clause. The relative clauses simply modify the noun "poet" and specify a particular poet.

In Greek as in English the relative pronoun performs two functions:

- (1) It refers back to the noun in the independent clause which is its ante-cedent ("poet" in the examples above).
- (2) It has its own grammatical function within the relative clause. In the first example "who" is the subject of the verb "wrote"; in the second, "whose" modifies "book" and shows possession; in the third, the phrase "to whom" is the indirect object of the verb "sent"; in the fourth, "whom" is the direct object of the verb "educated."

SECTION 49 143

In Greek the relative pronoun, like all nouns, pronouns, and adjectives, has gender, number, and case.

THE RELATIVE PRONOUN REFERS TO AN ANTECEDENT IN THE INDEPENDENT CLAUSE AND ALWAYS HAS THE SAME GENDER AND THE SAME NUMBER AS THAT ANTECEDENT.

BUT THE CASE OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN DEPENDS ENTIRELY ON ITS GRAM-MATICAL FUNCTION WITHIN THE DEPENDENT CLAUSE.

Thus in the examples above all four relative pronouns would in Greek be masculine and singular because all refer back to the masculine singular antecedent, "poet." But the relative pronoun would appear in a different case in each example: nominative in the first, genitive in the second, dative in the third, and accusative in the fourth.

Drill III, pages 156-57, may now be done.

The relative pronoun belongs to the first and second declensions. It is declined as follows:

	\mathbf{M}	F	N
Nom. S	őς	ή	ő
Gen.	$o \tilde{v}$	$ ilde{\eta}_{\mathcal{S}}$	$o\vec{v}$
Dat.	$ ilde{\phi} $	$ ilde{n}$	$ ilde{\psi}$
Acc.	δu	$\eta \nu$	ő
Nom. P	οĭ	al	ű
Gen.	δv	δv	δv
Dat.	ols	$aar{l}arsigma$	$o\bar{l}\varsigma$
Acc.	$o\~v\varsigma$	äς	ű

Observations: (1) Compare the declension of the article (Section 16); the relative pronoun differs from the article in that all its forms have a rough breathing and take an accent. Also, its masculine nominative singular ends in -5.

(2) The relative pronoun has no vocative case.

The examples above can now be rendered in Greek:

 $d\gamma a\theta d\varsigma \delta \pi oi\eta r \dot{\eta} \varsigma \delta \varsigma \tau \delta \beta i \beta \lambda i ov \ddot{\epsilon} \gamma \rho \alpha \psi \epsilon v$. The poet who wrote the book is good.

 $d\gamma a\theta \delta \zeta \delta \pi o i\eta \tau \dot{\eta} \zeta$ où tò biblion eig thu vhoon émémuamen. The poet whose book we sent to the island is good.

When translating relative clauses within complete sentences one must carefully distinguish the independent clause, with its subject, verb, and (possible) objects, from the dependent relative clause, with its own separate subject, verb, and (possible) objects. Remember that the relative pronoun takes from its antecedent gender and number only; its case is determined by its function within the relative clause.

παιδεύσομεν τοὺς ποιητὰς οι βιβλία γράψουσιν. We shall educate the poets who will write books.

Antecedent of relative pronoun: ποιητάς: masculine plural

Function in dependent clause: subject of γράψουσιν: nominative

Form of relative pronoun:
masculine plural nominative ἀγαθὴ ἡ ψῦχὴ ἡν παιδεύεις, ὧ "Ομηρε. Good is the soul which you educate, Homer.

Antecedent of relative pronoun: $\psi \bar{\nu} \chi \dot{\eta}$: feminine singular

Function in dependent clause: direct object of παιδεύεις: accusative

Form of relative pronoun: feminine singular accusative τὰ ὅπλα ἐπέμψατε οἶς ἔβλαψαν τὰ ζῷα. You sent the weapons with which they harmed the animals.

Antecedent of relative pronoun: ὅπλα: neuter plural

Function in dependent clause: instrumental dative

Form of relative pronoun: neuter plural dative

SECTION 50 145

50. THE INDEPENDENT SUBJUNCTIVE

In addition to its use in purpose clauses after a primary tense of the indicative, and in the protases of future more vivid and present general conditional sentences, the subjunctive mood is employed in three types of independent clause.

1. HORTATORY SUBJUNCTIVE

The first person of the present or a rist subjunctive can express emphatically the will of the speaker. The plural is more common. This usage is called the hortatory subjunctive. Its negative is $\mu \dot{\eta}$. Tense shows aspect only.

Translation formula: let us (let me)

παύωμεν τὴν μάχην.
Let us be stopping the battle.
Let us stop the battle.
παύσωμεν τὴν μάχην.
Let us stop the battle.
μὴ παύωμεν τὴν μάχην.
Let us not be stopping the battle.
Let us not stop the battle.

Contrast the indicative:

οὐ παύομεν τὴν μάχην. We are not stopping the battle.

2. DELIBERATIVE SUBJUNCTIVE

The first person of the present or a orist subjunctive can express, in a question, the speaker's uncertainty about what he or she is to do. This usage is called the deliberative subjunctive. Its negative is $\mu\dot{\eta}$. Tense shows aspect only.

Translation formula: am I to/are we to παύωμεν τὴν μάχην;

Are we to be stopping the battle?
Are we to stop the battle?
παύσωμεν τὴν μάχην;
Are we to stop the battle?

ἄγγελον μὴ πέμπω; Am I not to be sending a messenger?

Contrast the indicative:

ἄγγελον οὐ πέμπω; Am I not sending a messenger?

3. PROHIBITIVE SUBJUNCTIVE

With the negative $\mu\dot{\eta}$ the second person of the aorist subjunctive (but NOT the present subjunctive) expresses a prohibition. This usage is called the prohibitive subjunctive. Tense shows aspect only. Positive commands are expressed in the imperative mood, which is presented in Section 89.

Translation formula: do not μὴ παύσητε τὴν μάχην. Do not stop the battle. μὴ πέμψης τὸν ἄγγελον.

Do not send the messenger.

Any independent subjunctive can be used instead of a future indicative in the apodosis of a future more vivid conditional sentence.

ἐὰν εὖ πράξωμεν, μὴ πέμψης τὸν ἄγγελον. If we fare well, do not send the messenger. ἐὰν εὖ πράξωμεν, πέμψωμεν τὸν ἄγγελον. If we fare well, let us send the messenger.

Drill V, page 157, may now be done.

51. PARTITIVE GENITIVE (GENITIVE OF THE DIVIDED WHOLE)

The genitive case can be employed to indicate the larger group or entity to which particular persons or things belong. This is called the partitive genitive or genitive of the divided whole.

 $\xi \xi$ τῶν ὁπλῖτῶν $\xi \pi \xi \mu \varphi \theta \eta \sigma \alpha v$. Six of the hoplites were sent.

τούς ἀδίκους τῶν πολῖτῶν εἰς τὰς νήσους πέμψετε. You will send the unjust ones of the citizens to the islands. τῶν γεφῦρῶν πέντε ἐλύθησαν.

Of the bridges five were destroyed.

Although both the partitive genitive and the genitive which shows possession can be translated by the English preposition "of," their meanings are distinct, as the following examples show.

oi ἄδικοι τῶν ὁπλῖτῶν (partitive genitive) the unjust ones of the hoplites ή τῶν ὁπλῖτῶν οἰκί \bar{a} (genitive showing possession) the house of the hoplites

The partitive genitive stands either before or after the noun or pronoun which it modifies. Unlike the genitive which shows possession, the partitive genitive cannot stand in the attributive position.

52. GENITIVE OF TIME WITHIN WHICH

The genitive case without a preposition can also indicate the span of time within which an event occurred, occurs, or will occur. This is called the genitive of time within which.

τῆς ἡμέρᾶς τοὺς νεᾶνίᾶς ἐδιδάξαμεν.

During the day we taught the young men.

τῆς πρώτης ἡμέρας ὁπλίτας ἐν τῆ ἀγορᾶ τάξομεν.

During the first day we shall station hoplites in the market place.

ξξ ἡμερῶν διδάξει τοὺς $ve\bar{a}vl\bar{a}$ ς δ $O\mu\eta\varrho o\varsigma$. Within six days Homer will teach the young men.

53. DATIVE OF TIME AT WHICH

The dative case is employed, without a preposition, to indicate the point in time at which an event occurred, occurs, or will occur. This is called the dative of time at which or when.

τῆ πρώτη ἡμέρ $\bar{\alpha}$ ὁπλίτ $\bar{\alpha}$ ς ἐν τῆ ἀγορ $\bar{\alpha}$ τάξομεν. On the first day we shall station hoplites in the market place.

54. ACCUSATIVE OF EXTENT OF TIME

The accusative case is employed, without a preposition, to indicate the length in time of an event in the past, present, or future. This is called the accusative of extent of time.

πέντε ἡμέρας τοὺς νεᾶνίας διδάξομεν.
For five days we shall teach the young men.
ἔξ ἡμέρας τοὺς νεᾶνίας ἐδιδάσκομεν.
For six days we were teaching the young men.

55. EXPRESSIONS OF TIME COMPARED

The genitive of time within which answers the question, "during what span of time?" It places the event at some unspecified point during that span of time without pinpointing it further. The phrase $\tau\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$ $\hat{\eta}\mu\acute{e}\bar{\varrho}\bar{\varsigma}\varsigma$ could be translated "at some time during the day." The genitive of time within which is akin to the partitive genitive, which places an individual person or thing within a larger group or entity.

The dative of time at which simply answers the question "when?" It places the event in time as plainly as possible. It treats the unit of time involved (e.g., hour, day, month) as if it were a single point, and places the event there.

The accusative of extent of time answers the question "for how long a time?" These three expressions of time can be diagrammed as follows:

GENITIVE DATIVE ACCUSATIVE

The genitive places the event within the circle, the dative at a single point, and the accusative describes the length of time which the event takes from beginning to end.

56. ACCUSATIVE OF EXTENT OF SPACE

The accusative case is employed, without a preposition, to indicate distance traveled. This usage is called the accusative of extent of space.

τὸν ἄγγελον πέντε σταδίους πέμψετε. You will send the messenger for five stades. You will send the messenger five stades.

δ ἄγγελος εξ σταδίους πεμφθήσεται. The messenger will be sent for six stades. The messenger will be sent six stades.

The accusative of extent of space functions as an adverb; it is independent of any other case forms in a sentence.

The accusative of extent of space, like the accusative of extent of time, can be diagrammed with an arrow (cf. the preceding Section).

Drill VI, page 158, may now be done.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The noun $al\xi$, $aly\delta\varsigma$, δ or η , "goat," can be either masculine or feminine. The article indicates gender. Cf. $lnno\varsigma$, $\theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$.

The particles $\gamma \varepsilon$ and $\tau o \iota$ and the connective $\tau \varepsilon$ are monosyllabic enclitics, words which are closely attached in pronunciation to the preceding word and which can affect the accent of the preceding word. A monosyllabic enclitic, which usually has no accent itself, causes the following changes in the accent of the preceding word:

(1) IF THE PRECEDING WORD HAS AN ACUTE ON THE ULTIMA, THE ACCENT REMAINS AN ACUTE AND IS NOT CHANGED TO A GRAVE.

$$-a-p-\dot{u}+e$$
 $\dot{a}\gamma a\theta ol\ \gamma \varepsilon$

(2) IF THE PRECEDING WORD HAS A CIRCUMFLEX ON THE PENULT, AN ADDITIONAL ACUTE ACCENT IS PLACED ON THE ULTIMA.

$$\tilde{p}$$
- u + e $\delta \tilde{\eta} \mu \delta \varsigma \gamma \varepsilon$

(3) IF THE PRECEDING WORD HAS AN ACUTE ON THE ANTEPENULT, AN ADDITIONAL ACUTE ACCENT IS PLACED ON THE ULTIMA.

Thus whenever the accent of the preceding word is as far from the ultima as the rules for the possibilities of accent allow, an additional acute accent is added to the ultima.

(4) IF THE PRECEDING WORD IS A PROCLITIC, THE PROCLITIC RECEIVES AN ACUTE ACCENT.

 $\varepsilon i \gamma \varepsilon$ $\eta \gamma \varepsilon \gamma \epsilon \varphi \bar{v} \varrho \alpha$

In every other instance, e.g., a circumflex on the ultima or an acute on the penult, the preceding word is not affected, and there is no accent on the enclitic. Complete rules for enclitics, including those for disyllabic enclitics, will be given in Unit 15.

The enclitic particle $\gamma \varepsilon$ is postpositive and has two distinct uses: it either emphasizes or limits the preceding word. When joined with a phrase consisting of article + noun, $\gamma \varepsilon$ usually follows the article.

τούς γε ἵππους ἐβλάψατε. You harmed the horses. (emphatic) You harmed the horses, at any rate. (limiting) τῷ γ' ἀδελφῷ δῶρον ἔπεμψας. You sent a gift to your brother. (emphatic) You sent a gift to your brother, at any rate. (limiting)

In prepositional phrases, $\gamma \varepsilon$ usually follows the preposition.

μετά γε τὴν μάχην after the battle

A relative pronoun accompanied by $\gamma \varepsilon$ often has a causal force.

ἀγαθὸς ὁ "Ομηρος ὅς γε ἀγαθὰ βιβλία γέγραφεν. Homer is good, who has written good books. Homer is good because he has written good books.

Context will determine the best translation of this particle, whose force is often conveyed in English by tone of voice alone.

The adjective $\delta \varepsilon \iota \nu \delta \zeta$, $\delta \varepsilon \iota \nu \delta \gamma$, $\delta \varepsilon \iota \nu \delta \nu$, "fearsome, marvelous, clever," is used in both a negative and a positive sense: of someone (or something) frightening, and of someone who shows remarkable rhetorical or intellectual flair. In the latter sense $\delta \varepsilon \iota \nu \delta \zeta$ can take an epexegetical infinitive to describe the area of expertise.

δεινός διδάσκειν τους $νε\bar{a}νl\bar{a}ς$ clever at teaching the young men

The noun $\delta ov \lambda \epsilon l\bar{\alpha}_{\varsigma}$, $\delta ov \lambda \epsilon l\bar{\alpha}_{\varsigma}$, $\hat{\eta}$, "slavery," is an abstract noun formed from the noun $\delta o\tilde{v}\lambda o_{\varsigma}$, $\delta ov \lambda ov$, δ , "slave." Note that the noun $\phi \iota \lambda l\bar{\alpha}$, from $\phi \iota \lambda o_{\varsigma}$, employs a slightly different suffix. Compare also the abstract nouns $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda \epsilon v\theta \epsilon \varrho l\bar{\alpha}$, $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda \epsilon v\theta \epsilon \varrho l\bar{\alpha}_{\varsigma}$, $\hat{\eta}$ "freedom," from the adjective $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda \epsilon v\theta \epsilon \varrho o_{\varsigma}$, $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda \epsilon v\theta \epsilon \varrho o_{\varsigma}$,

"free," and $\sigma o \varphi i \bar{\alpha}$, $\sigma o \varphi i \bar{\alpha} \zeta$, $\dot{\eta}$, "wisdom, skill," from the adjective $\sigma o \varphi \dot{\alpha} \zeta$, $\sigma o \varphi \dot{\eta}$, $\sigma o \varphi \dot{\alpha} \dot{\nu}$, "wise, skilled."

The verb δουλεύω, δουλεύσω, ἐδούλευσα, δεδούλευκα, —, , —, "be a slave," is a denominative verb, one formed from a noun (δοῦλος). Like it are the verbs πολῖτεύω, πολῖτεύσω, ἐπολῖτευσα, πεπολίτευκα, πεπολίτευμαι, ἐπολῖτεύθην, "be a citizen," from the noun πολίτης, πολίτου, δ, "citizen," and χορεύω, χορεύσω, ἐχόρευσα, κεχόρευκα, κεχόρευμαι, ἐχορεύθην, "dance, take part in a chorus," from the noun χορός, χοροῦ, δ, "chorus." Note that δουλεύω takes a dative of the person or thing to which one is a slave:

έδουλεύομεν τοῖς πολίταις. We were slaves to the citizens.

The noun " $E\lambda\lambda\eta\nu$, " $E\lambda\lambda\eta\nu\sigma\varsigma$, δ , denotes "a Greek," a man. It is not usually used as an adjective (as in the phrase "a Greek city").

The original meaning of the preposition $\kappa a \tau a$ is "down," but it is not usually employed in this sense in Attic; the more common meanings are the ones given in the vocabulary: "(+ gen.) against; under; (+ acc.) according to."

The verb κωλύω, κωλύσω, ἐκώλῦσα, ἐκώλῦνα, κεκώλῦμα, ἐκωλύθην, "hinder, prevent," has $-\bar{v}$ - in all six Principal Parts. Contrast λύω, θύω. The verb κωλύω can take an accusative of the person prevented from doing something and an infinitive of the action prevented:

ἐκωλύσαμεν τοὺς κακοὺς τῆ θεῷ θῦσαι. We prevented the evil men from sacrificing to the goddess.

The dative plural of $v \dot{v} \xi$, $v v \kappa \tau \dot{v} \zeta$, $\dot{\eta}$, "night," is $*v v \kappa \tau - \sigma l(v) > *v v \kappa - \sigma l(v) = v v \xi l(v)$.

The adjective $\pi a \lambda a i \delta \zeta$, $\pi a \lambda a i \delta \lambda$, "old, aged, ancient," is formed from the adverb $\pi a \lambda a i$, "long ago."

The noun $\pi\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\gamma\mu\alpha$, $\pi\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\gamma\mu\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $\tau\delta$, "deed, affair, thing," means literally a "thing done." It has the same root as $\pi\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\tau\tau\omega$ ($\pi\varrho\tilde{\alpha}\varkappa$ -). In the plural it often means "affairs" as in the phrases "affairs of mankind" or "affairs of state."

The adjective $\sigma o \varphi \delta \varsigma$, $\sigma o \varphi \delta \gamma$, "wise, skilled," and the noun $\sigma o \varphi \delta a$, $\sigma o \varphi \delta a$, "wisdom, skill," can indicate either practical or intellectual wisdom. Cf. $\tau \acute{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$.

The noun $\sigma\tau\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\sigma v$, $\sigma\tau\alpha\delta\iota\sigma v$, $\tau\delta$, "stade," can be either masculine or neuter in the plural with no difference in meaning: $\sigma\iota\sigma\tau\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\sigma v$ or $\tau\dot{\alpha}\sigma\tau\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\sigma$. This word denotes a distance of about 600 feet; this was the length of the racecourse at Olympia, and the word $\sigma\tau\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\sigma v$ can also mean "racecourse."

The enclitic conjunction $\tau \varepsilon$ is usually employed together with $\kappa a i$ to link two items. The usual order is A $\tau \varepsilon \kappa a i$ B:

"Ομηφός τε καὶ ὁ ἀδελφός Homer and his brother αἶγές τε καὶ ἵπποι goats and horses

Sometimes $\tau \varepsilon$ and $\kappa \alpha l$ are separated by intervening words.

οί στρατιῶται φυλάττουσί τε τοὺς ἀδίκους καὶ πέμπουσιν ἀγγέλους. The soldiers are guarding the unjust men and sending messengers.

In these examples $\tau \varepsilon$ is not given a separate translation. It is a signpost that tells the reader there is a $\kappa a i$ coming up.

In poetry and (rarely) in prose, $\tau \varepsilon$ can be used alone to connect two items. It then follows the second of the two items: A B $\tau \varepsilon$. Like $\varkappa \alpha i \ldots \varkappa \alpha i$, $\tau \varepsilon \ldots \tau \varepsilon$ means "both . . . and." The order is A $\tau \varepsilon$ B $\tau \varepsilon$.

alγες lπποι τε goats and horses alγές τε lπποι τε both goats and horses.

The enclitic particle $\tau o \iota$, "let me tell you, you know," is employed when a speaker expects the hearer to assent to the truth of what is being said. By contrast, the particle $\delta \dot{\eta}$, "in fact, of course," draws attention to an external reality.

ἀγαθή τοι ή δημοκρατίᾶ.
Democracy, you know, is good.
ἀγαθή δή ή δημοκρατίᾶ.
In fact, democracy is good.

When τοι follows οὐ, they are usually written as one word: οὔτοι.

The noun $\varphi \acute{a}\lambda \alpha \gamma \xi$, $\varphi \acute{a}\lambda \alpha \gamma \gamma o \varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, can designate any order of battle, but came to signify a particular formation of hoplites, many lines deep, protected by overlapping shields and with long spears as offensive weapons.

The noun $\varphi \dot{v} \lambda a \xi$, $\varphi \dot{v} \lambda a \varkappa o \zeta$, \dot{o} , "guard," has the stem $\varphi v \lambda a \varkappa$ -. Cf. the verb $\varphi v \lambda a \dot{\tau} \tau w < * \varphi v \lambda a \varkappa \iota w$, whose root is $\varphi v \lambda a \varkappa$ -.

The preposition $\chi \acute{a}\varrho \iota \nu + \text{gen.}$, "for the sake of," is postpositive: it follows the word which it governs. It is derived from the accusative singular of the noun $\chi \acute{a}\varrho \iota \varsigma$, $\chi \acute{a}\varrho \iota \iota \iota \varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, "grace, favor, gratitude." Sentences of the type πέμπω δῶρον, τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ χάριν I send a gift, a favor of (= for) my brother, where $\chi \acute{a}\varrho \iota \nu$ is a noun in apposition with the direct object $\delta \widetilde{\omega} \varrho o \nu$, came to be understood thus:

I send a gift for the sake of my brother.

Here, as normally, $\chi \acute{a}\varrho \iota \nu$ is a preposition governing the genitive case.

Note the relationship between the noun $\chi o \varrho \delta \varsigma$, the denominative verb $\chi o \varrho \varepsilon v \omega$, and the verbal noun $\chi o \varrho \varepsilon v \tau \eta \varsigma$, $\chi o \varrho \varepsilon v \tau o \tilde{v}$, δ , "dancer." The suffix $-\tau \eta \varsigma$ of the latter noun often indicates the agent of an action.

57. MIDDLE VOICE

A verb in the middle voice shows that the subject of the verb does the action, but that the action somehow returns to the subject, that the subject has a special interest in the action of the verb. Verbs in the middle voice can be transitive and thus take direct objects; they can also be intransitive. Compare the following diagrams of sentences with verbs in the active, passive, and middle voice.

Active Voice: Nominative Active Verb Accusative $\delta\pi\delta$ + gen., or dat. of Passive Voice: Nominative Passive Verb personal agent Middle Voice: Nominative Middle Verb Accusative (transitive) Middle Voice: Nominative Middle Verb (intransitive)

The force of the middle voice varies from verb to verb. The most common meaning the middle voice gives to a verb is "to do something for oneself." Other possible meanings of the middle voice are a part of the vocabulary of some verbs and are given in the vocabularies. Special middle meanings of words learned thus far are given in Section 58.

The middle voice and the passive voice have identical forms in all the moods in the present, imperfect, perfect, and pluperfect tenses, and in the present and perfect infinitives. The middle voice has forms different from those of the passive in the future indicative and in all the moods and in the infinitive of the aorist tense. The following chart indicates which forms are identical and which are not.

Forms and endings which can be middle or passive will henceforth be called middle/passive. Thus, without any context, a form like $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} o \mu a \iota$ is first person singular, present indicative middle/passive. The context usually makes clear which of the two voices the verb is in. For example, the passive will often be accompanied by a genitive of personal agent; the middle voice can take a direct object, but the passive voice cannot do so.

Only the morphology of those middle forms which are different from passive forms must be presented. Those middle forms which are different from passive forms all put middle endings on the same stem as the corresponding tense of the active voice. From this point on, then, what was called the future tense stem will now be called the future active and middle tense stem (Principal Part II without the ending $-\omega$). What was called the aorist tense stem will now be called the aorist active and middle tense stem (Principal Part III without the past indicative augment and the ending $-\alpha$). A chart of principal parts and tense stems is given in Section 60.

The moods and tenses of the middle voice have exactly the same uses as the moods and tenses of the active and passive voices. For example, an aorist subjunctive middle in a purpose clause in primary sequence differs from an aorist subjunctive active or passive in such a clause in voice alone.

1. FUTURE INDICATIVE MIDDLE

To form the future indicative middle, to the future active and middle tense stem add the same endings as in the present indicative middle/passive (cf. Section 43, page 111).

Thus the forms of the future indicative middle of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

S

1 2	παιδεύσ ομαι παιδεύση/ παιδεύσ ∈ι	I shall educate for myself / have (someone) educated you will educate for yourself / have (someone) educated
3	παιδεύσ εται	he/she/it will educate for himself/herself/itself; he/she/it will have (someone) educated
1	παιδευσ όμεθα	we shall educate for ourselves/have (someone) educated
2	παιδεύσ εσθε	you will educate for yourselves/have (someone) educated
3	παιδεύσ ονται	they will educate for themselves/have (someone) educated

Observations: (1) The person markers $-\mu\alpha\iota$, $-\sigma\alpha\iota$, $-\tau\alpha\iota$, $-\mu\epsilon\theta\alpha$, $-\sigma\theta\epsilon$, $-\nu\tau\alpha\iota$ will henceforth be called the primary middle/passive person markers.

- (2) The alternative form of the second person singular, future indicative middle παιδεύση is often the same as the third person singular, aorist subjunctive active. Context allows one to distinguish the two forms. Likewise, παιδεύσει can be either third person singular, future indicative active or second person singular, future indicative middle.
- (3) Remember that the future indicative passive uses the suffix $-\eta \sigma$ on the aorist passive tense stem: $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta \dot{\eta} \sigma \sigma \mu a \iota$, etc.

2. AORIST INDICATIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist indicative middle, to the augmented agrist active and middle tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-αμην	-αμεθα
2	-ω	-ασθε
3	-ατο	-αντο

Thus the forms of the agrist indicative middle of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

*ἐπαιδεύσασθε

*ἐπαιδεύσαντο

1 2 3	ἐπαιδευσ άμην ἐπαιδεύσ ω ἐπαιδεύσ ατο	I educated for myself/had (someone) educated you educated for yourself/had (someone) educated he/she/it educated for himself/herself/itself; he/she/it had (someone) educated
1	έπαιδενσ άμεθα	we educated for ourselves/had (someone) educated

Observations: (1) The endings of the agrist indicative middle consist of the tense vowel $-\alpha$ - and what will henceforth be called the secondary middle/passive person markers: $-\mu\eta\nu$, $-\sigma\sigma$, $-\tau\sigma$, $-\mu\varepsilon\theta\sigma$, $-\sigma\sigma$.

(2) The original ending of the second person singular, agrist indicative middle was *- $\alpha\sigma\sigma$. The intervocalic - σ - dropped out, and the remaining vowels contracted to give the ending - ω .

you educated for yourselves/had (someone) educated they educated for themselves/had (someone) educated

(3) Compare the first person plural forms: aorist indicative active ἐπαύσαμεν aorist optative active παύσαιμεν aorist indicative middle ἐπανσάμεθα

3. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist subjunctive middle, add the endings of the present subjunctive middle/passive to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem.

Thus the forms of the agrist subjunctive middle of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύσ ωμαι	παιδευσώμεθα
2	παιδεύση	π αιδεύσ η σ θ ϵ
3	παιδεύσ ηται	παιδεύσωνται

Observations: (1) The second person singular, a rist subjunctive middle $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \sigma \eta$ is always the same as the third person singular, a orist subjunctive active and sometimes the same as the alter-

- native form of the second person singular, future indicative middle. Context usually allows one to distinguish among these forms.
- (2) The agrist subjunctive middle differs from the present subjunctive middle/passive only in the tense stem. Note the use of the primary middle/passive person markers in both the present subjunctive middle/passive and the agrist subjunctive middle.

4. AORIST OPTATIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist optative middle, add the following endings to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem:

	S	P
1	-αιμην	-αιμεθα
2	-αιο	-αισθε
3	-αιτο	-αιντο

Thus the forms of the agrist optative middle of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδευσ αίμην	παιδευσ αίμεθα
2	παιδεύσ αιο	παιδεύσ αισθε
3	παιδεύσ αιτο	παιδεύσαιντο

- Observations: (1) The endings of the aorist optative middle consist of the tense vowel -a- + the optative suffix -t- + the secondary middle/passive person markers. Note that both the present optative middle/passive and the aorist optative middle use the secondary middle/passive person markers.
 - (2) The original form of the second person singular, a orist optative middle was *- $\alpha\iota\sigma\sigma$. The intervocalic - σ dropped out to give the ending - $\alpha\iota\sigma$; the diphthong and vowel do not contract.

5. AORIST INFINITIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist infinitive middle, to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem add the ending $-\alpha\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$.

168 UNIT 7

Thus the agrist infinitive middle of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ is παιδεύσασθαι

to educate for oneself

Observations: (1) Like the agrist infinitives active and passive, the agrist infinitive middle shows simple aspect, NOT past time.

- (2) The ending of the agrist infinitive middle consists of the tense vowel -a- + the infinitive suffix -σθαι, seen already in παιδεύεσθαι and πεπαιδεύσθαι.
- (3) The agrist infinitive middle and the present infinitive middle/passive are the only infinitives seen thus far which are accented on the antepenult. All other infinitives seen thus far are accented on the penult.

58. MIDDLE VOICE OF VERBS SEEN THUS FAR

In general the middle voice indicates that the subject has a special interest in the action of the verb; it can often be translated as "to do something for oneself." In addition to this general notion, some of the verbs learned thus far have special meanings in the middle which must be learned now.

ACTIVE VOICE	MIDDLE VOICE
ἄρχω + genitive rule γ ράφω write	ἄρχομαι + genitive begin $\gamma \rho$ άφομαι note down, cause to be written;

διδάσκω teach	διδάσκομαι cause (someone) to be taught
$ heta\dot{v}\omega$ sacrifice	$ heta \dot{v}o\mu a\iota$ cause a sacrifice to be made, consult the gods
λ vω unbind, free	$\lambda \dot{v}o\mu a\iota$ unbind (one's own or for oneself), cause someone to be freed, ransom παιδεύω educate, teach	παιδεύομαι cause someone to be educated or taught
παύω make stop, stop	παύομαι stop (oneself), cease

$\pi ε i \theta ω$ persuade	$\pi ε l \theta ο \mu α \iota + dative$ persuade oneself, obey
$ aulpha au au\omega$ draw up in order	τάττομαι fall into order of battle φυλάττω guard	φυλάττομαι guard someone for one's own protection, be on guard against

SECTION 59 169

Henceforth, when the meaning of the middle differs significantly from the active, it will be given in the vocabulary. The middle meanings given above will all be found in the Greek-English Vocabulary.

Drills I and II, pages 183-84, may now be done.

59. SECOND AORIST ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

In the verbs studied so far Principal Part III has the ending $-\alpha$ (e.g., $\epsilon \pi a l \delta \epsilon v \sigma a$). Such verbs are said to have first aorists active and middle and use the tense vowel $-\alpha$ - in many of their forms. Any verb with a Principal Part III NOT ending in $-\alpha$ (or, in certain verbs, $-\alpha \mu \eta \nu$) is said to have a second aorist. There is no difference in meaning between first aorists and second aorists.

In Principal Part III, some verbs have second agrists ending in $-o\nu$ (or, in certain verbs, $-o\mu\eta\nu$). These verbs use the thematic vowel $-\varepsilon/o$ - as part of their endings.

The verb $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$ will serve as an example:

 $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$, $\lambda \epsilon l \psi \omega$, $\xi \lambda \iota \pi \sigma \nu$, $\lambda \epsilon \lambda \sigma \iota \pi \alpha$, $\lambda \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \iota \mu \mu \alpha \iota$, $\epsilon \lambda \epsilon l \phi \theta \eta \nu$, "leave, leave behind"

Only in the aorist active and middle does this verb employ endings different from those of the aorist of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$. The aorist passive of all verbs is formed in the same way from Principal Part VI.

In the indicative mood, second arists like $\ell \lambda \iota \pi \sigma \nu$ employ the same endings as the IMPERFECT indicative of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$; in the other moods, and in the infinitive, they employ the same endings as PRESENT tense forms of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$, e.g., $-\sigma \iota \mu \iota$, $-\sigma \iota \iota \varsigma$, $-\sigma \iota$, etc. in the second arist optative active.

1. SECOND AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second agrist indicative active and middle, drop the ending -ov from Principal Part III. There remains the past indicative augment plus the agrist active and middle tense stem. To the augmented agrist active and middle tense stem add the endings employed to form the imperfect indicative active and middle of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$.

Thus the augmented agrist active and middle tense stem of $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$ is $\dot{\epsilon} \lambda \iota \pi$ -, and the forms of the second agrist indicative active and middle are as follows:

		ACTIVE	MIDDLE
S	1	ἔλιπον	έλιπόμην
	2	ἔλιπ€ς	έλίπου
	3	$ec{\epsilon}\lambda\iota\pi\epsilon(u)$	ἐλίπ ετο
P	1	έλίπομεν	ἐλιπ όμ εθ α
	2	ἐλίπ ετε	$\dot{\varepsilon}\lambda i\pi$ ϵ σ θ ϵ
	3	ἔλιπον	ἐλίπ οντο

Observation: In verbs with second acrists active and middle, imperfect and acrist forms are distinguished by their different tense stems only. Compare $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda l\pi o\mu\epsilon\nu$ (first person plural, acrist indicative active) with $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon l\pi o\mu\epsilon\nu$ (first person plural, imperfect indicative active).

2. SECOND AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second agrist subjunctive active and middle, add to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem the endings employed to form the present subjunctive active and middle/passive of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$.

Thus the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem of $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$ is $\lambda \iota \pi$ -, and the forms of the second agrist subjunctive active and middle are as follows:

		ACTIVE	MIDDLE
S	1	$\lambda l \pi \omega$	$\lambda i\pi$ ωμαι
	2	λίπης	λίπη
	3	λίπη	λίπηται
P	1	λίπωμεν	λιπώμεθα
	2	λίπητε	$\lambda i\pi\eta\sigma\theta\epsilon$
	3	$\lambda \ell \pi$ ωσι(ν)	λίπωνται

Observation: As in verbs with first aorists, only the different tense stem distinguishes present subjunctives from aorist subjunctives. Compare $\lambda l \pi \omega \mu \epsilon \nu$ (first person plural, aorist subjunctive active) with $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega \mu \epsilon \nu$ (first person plural, present subjunctive active).

3. SECOND AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second agrist optative active and middle, add to the unaugment-ed agrist active and middle tense stem the endings employed to form the present optative active and middle of $\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$.

Thus the forms of the second agrist optative active and middle of $\lambda \varepsilon l \pi \omega$ are as follows:

		ACTIVE	MIDDLE
S	1	$\lambda \ell \pi$ οιμι	λιποίμην
	2	λίποις	$\lambda i\pi$ 010
	3	λ $l\pi$ οι	λίποιτο
P	1	λίποιμεν	λιποίμεθα
	2	λίποιτε	$\lambda i\pi$ οισ θ ϵ
	3	λίποιεν	$\lambda l\pi$ οιντο

Observation: Only the different tense stem distinguishes present optatives from second agrist optatives. Compare $\lambda l \pi o \iota \mu \varepsilon v$ (first person plural, agrist optative active) with $\lambda \varepsilon l \pi o \iota \mu \varepsilon v$ (first person plural, present optative active).

4. SECOND AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second agrist infinitive active and middle, add to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem the endings $-\epsilon i \nu$ and $-\epsilon \sigma \theta \alpha i$. Note the persistent accent, different from that of the present infinitive active and middle.

Thus the second agrist infinitives active and middle of $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$ are:

λιπεῖν	λιπέσθαι
ACTIVE	MIDDLE

Observation: Compare the second agrist infinitives λιπεῖν and λιπέσθαι with the present infinitives λείπειν and λείπεσθαι.

Drill III, pages 184-85, may now be done.

61. THE INDEPENDENT OPTATIVE

Just as a verb in the subjunctive may be used independently as the main verb of a sentence, so too a verb in the optative can be used as the main verb of a sentence in two different types of clauses.

1. OPTATIVE OF WISH

An independent optative, without any introductory word or introduced by $\epsilon i \gamma \acute{\alpha} \rho$ or $\epsilon i' \theta \epsilon$, expresses the speaker's wish, hope, or prayer for the future. This is called the optative of wish. The negative is $\mu \acute{\eta}$; tense shows aspect only. Such wishes can be expressed in English by a subjunctive ("Long live the queen!"), by the auxiliary verb may ("May the best man win!"), or be introduced by if only or I wish that ("If only/I wish that it would not rain tonight!").

May we be stopping/stop the battle. If only we may be stopping/stop the battle. I wish that we may be stopping/stop the battle.

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{ll} ---\mu\dot{\eta} \\[0.2cm] \epsilon \ddot{\ell}\theta\epsilon\;\mu\dot{\eta} \\[0.2cm] \epsilon \dot{\ell}\;\gamma\dot{\alpha}\varrho\;\mu\dot{\eta} \end{array} \right\}\;\lambda\dot{v}\sigma\epsilon\iota\alpha v\;\tau o\dot{v}\varsigma\;\kappa\alpha\kappa o\dot{v}\varsigma.$$

May they not free the wicked men.

If only they may not free the wicked men.

I wish that they would not free the wicked men.

2. POTENTIAL OPTATIVE

An independent optative without any introductory word but with the particle $\mathring{a}\nu$ indicates that an action might possibly occur. This is called the potential optative. The position of the particle $\mathring{a}\nu$ within the sentence is flexible. The negative with a potential optative is $o\mathring{v}$; tense shows aspect only. The idea of the potential optative can be expressed in English by may, might, could, would.

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi \alpha \acute{v} o \iota \mu \epsilon \nu \\ \pi \alpha \acute{v} \sigma \alpha \iota \mu \epsilon \nu \end{array} \right\} \ \, \mathring{a} \nu \ \, \tau \mathring{\eta} \nu \ \, \mu \acute{a} \chi \eta \nu.$$
$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} m a y / m i g h t / could / would \ \, be \ \, stopping \\ m a y / m i g h t / could / would \ \, stop \end{array} \right\} \ \, the \ \, battle.$$

The easiest way of distinguishing the optative of wish from the potential optative is the presence or absence of the particle $\Breve{a}v$. The potential optative will ALWAYS have $\Breve{a}v$; the optative of wish will NEVER have it. In the negative, the distinction will be reinforced by the negative $\Breve{o}v$ with the potential optative, $\Breve{\mu}\eta$ with the optative of wish. Of course, $\Breve{e}leve{o}v$ and $\Breve{e}leve{e}leve{o}v$ are used only with the optative of wish.

Drill IV, page 185, may now be done.

62. DEMONSTRATIVE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN ἐκεῖνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκεῖνο, "that"

Demonstratives point out nouns in space, time, or importance. The demonstrative adjective/pronoun $\ell n \epsilon \ell \nu \sigma c$, $\ell n \epsilon \ell \nu \sigma$ indicates something relatively far away and is the equivalent of the English demonstrative that (plural those).

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἐκεῖνος	ἐκείνη	เ ๋ห ะ เัv o
Gen.	έκείνου	ἐκείνης	έκείνου
Dat.	$\dot{\epsilon}$ κε $\dot{\epsilon}$ ν ϕ	ἐκείνη	έκείνω
Acc.	ἐκεῖνον	เ ้นธ(ขηข	ἐκεῖν ο
Nom. P	ἐκεῖνοι	έκεῖναι	ἐκεῖνα
Gen.	ἐκείνων	ἐκείνων	ἐκείνων
Dat.	ἐκείνοις	έκείναις	ἐκείνοις
Acc.	ἐκείνους	$\dot{\epsilon}$ κ ϵ ίν $ar{a}$ ς	έκεῖνα

Observation: $\ell \kappa \epsilon \tilde{l} \nu \sigma \zeta$, $\ell \kappa \epsilon \tilde{l} \nu \eta$, $\ell \kappa \epsilon \tilde{l} \nu \sigma$ declines like any other adjective in $-\sigma \zeta$, $-\eta$, $-\sigma \nu$ except for the absence of the final $-\nu$ in the neuter singular nominative and accusative. In this absence of $-\nu$, the neuter singular $\ell \kappa \epsilon \tilde{l} \nu \sigma$ is similar to the neuter singular of the article $\tau \delta$ and the neuter singular of the relative pronoun δ .

A NOUN MODIFIED BY ἐκεῖνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκεῖνο MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY THE ARTICLE. The demonstrative usually precedes the article; it may (rarely) follow the noun.

ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἀδελφὸς βιβλία ἔγραψεν.
That brother wrote books.
ἐκείνης τῆς ψῦχῆς of that soul
ἐκείνω τῷ ἔργω τῷ ἔργω ἐκείνω (rare)
by that deed

The demonstrative can also be used as a pronoun:

ἐκείνους φυλάττομεν. We are guarding those men. ἐκείνᾶς παύομεν. We are stopping those women.

63. CONDITIONAL SENTENCES WITH RELATIVE PROTASES

Instead of being introduced by the particles εi or $\dot{\varepsilon} \dot{\alpha} \nu$ (= εi + $\ddot{\alpha} \nu$), the protasis of a conditional sentence can be introduced by a form of the relative pronoun. This happens when the antecedent of the pronoun is general and the relative pronoun can then be translated as whoever, whatever, or when the action of the clause is future, past or present general, or contrafactual. A conditional relative clause or relative protasis follows the same rules and formulas as protases introduced by εi or $\dot{\varepsilon} \dot{\alpha} \nu$; cf. Section 41, page 97. Tense in a subjunctive or optative in such a clause shows aspect only.

Even when the relative pronoun has a demonstrative antecedent like $\ell n \epsilon \bar{\iota} v o \varsigma$, the structure of the clause shows that the speaker does not have anyone specific in mind.

1. FUTURE MORE VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

If any women are sent to the island, they will be educated.

Observation: Note that, as usual, the relative pronoun takes its case from how it is used in its own clause.

2. FUTURE LESS VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS

$$\delta \varphi, \ \eta, \ \delta + \text{optative}$$

optative $+ \ \delta v$

If we $\left\{ \begin{array}{c} \text{should be sending} \\ \text{should send} \end{array} \right\}$ anyone to the island,

he $\left\{ \begin{array}{c} \text{would be being educated.} \\ \text{would be educated.} \end{array} \right\}$

Observation: The antecedent of the indefinite relative is often omitted in Greek (as in English) rather than being expressed by the demonstrative pronoun.

3. PRESENT GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

Whomever we send to the island is educated. If we send anyone to the island, he is educated.

4. PAST GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

Whomever we sent to the island was educated.

If we had sent anyone to the island, he would have been educated.

Drill V, page 185, may now be done.

64. ADVERBS

Most adjectives form adverbs by adding the ending $-\omega \varsigma$ to the stem found by dropping the ending of the masculine genitive singular. Adverbs which do not follow this rule are given separately in the vocabulary.

άξιος, ἀξί \bar{a} , ἄξιον, "worthy"

 $\dot{a}\xi lως$, "worthily" κακός, κακή, κακόν, "bad"

κακῶς, "badly"

Observation: Adverbs in $-\omega\varsigma$ accented on the ultima always have a circumflex.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The adjective $al\sigma\chi\varrho\delta\varsigma$, $al\sigma\chi\varrho\delta$, $al\sigma\chi\varrho\delta\nu$, "ugly, shameful," has both a physical and a moral meaning.

180 UNIT 7

When two forms of $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda o_{\varsigma}$, $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda \eta$, $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda o$, "another, other," are used in the same sentence, each is translated twice: $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda o_{\varsigma}$ $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda o$ $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\varphi\varepsilon\iota$, "One man writes one thing, another (writes) another." The conjunction $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda\acute{a}$, "but," is the neuter plural of this word with a shift in accent.

The noun $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\mu\mu a$, $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\mu\mu\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $\tau\acute{o}$ is formed from the root of the verb $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\varphi\omega$ + the suffix - $\mu\alpha$: cf. $\pi\varrho\~{a}\gamma\mu\alpha$, $\pi\varrho\~{a}\gamma\mu\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $\tau\acute{o}$ from the root of $\pi\varrho\~{a}\tau\tau\omega$ <* $\pi\varrho\~{a}\varkappa\iota\omega$. The basic meaning of $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\mu\mu\alpha$ is "something written or drawn." "Letter of the alphabet" is a basic meaning of the word; $\tau\grave{a}$ $\gamma\varrho\acute{a}\mu\mu\alpha\tau\alpha$ are the alphabet. The meaning is then extended to the content of the writing: a letter (epistle), inscription, document, records, books.

The noun $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\eta$, $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\eta\varsigma$, η is also derived from the verb $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\omega$. It is often synonymous with $\gamma\varrho\alpha\mu\mu\alpha$. In this text it is used in one of its specialized meanings, "indictment"; cf. the English "writ." The verb $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\omega$ in the middle voice can mean "indict," and can govern $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\eta\nu$ as an internal or cognate accusative. The specific charge of the indictment goes into the genitive (the genitive of the charge) and the person whom one indicts is a direct object of the verb in the middle voice. The word $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\eta\nu$ can be dropped and the genitive of the charge still remain:

γραψώμεθα τοὺς ἀδίκους γραφὴν δώρων. γραψώμεθα τοὺς ἀδίκους δώρων. Let us indict the unjust men on a charge of bribery.

Note that there is no difference in meaning between the particles $\varepsilon i\theta \varepsilon$ and $\varepsilon i \gamma \delta \varrho$ when they introduce optatives of wish. The accent on $\varepsilon i\theta \varepsilon$ is an exception to the rule and must be learned individually.

ἐκεῖνος, ἐκεῖνη, ἐκεῖνο is a demonstrative pronoun or adjective. When used as an adjective, it usually precedes the definite article: ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἀδελφός, "that brother." Like the article, the relative pronoun, and the adjective ἄλλος, ἐκεῖνος has no final nu in the neuter singular nominative and accusative.

The root which conveyed the idea of "stealing" was $\kappa\lambda e/o\pi$ -. ("e/o" indicates that the vowel of the root can take the form - ε - or -o-.) Verbs often have a present tense stem with the root with - ε - (called the e-grade of the root): $\kappa\lambda \ell \pi \tau \omega < *\kappa\lambda \ell \pi \iota \omega$. Nouns which indicate an act often have -o- (the o-grade of the root): $\kappa\lambda o\pi\eta$, $\kappa\lambda o\pi\eta$, "theft." The stem of the perfect indicative active often uses the o-grade of the root: $\kappa\ell\kappa\lambda o\varphi\alpha$; cf. $\pi\ell\pi o\mu\varphi\alpha$.

Also note the final aspirated consonant of the perfect active tense stem: $\varkappa \acute{\epsilon}\varkappa \lambda o \varphi a$; cf. $\varkappa \acute{\epsilon}\varkappa \delta o \varphi a$, cf. $\varkappa \acute{\epsilon}\varkappa \delta o \varphi a$, cf. $\varkappa \acute{\epsilon}\varkappa \delta o \varphi a$. In the last principal part, note the absence of the suffix $-\theta$ - and the change of the vowel of the root to $-\alpha$ -; cf. $\mathring{\epsilon}\varkappa \varrho \acute{\alpha}\varphi \eta \nu$ and the alternative agrist passive $\mathring{\epsilon}\beta\lambda \acute{\alpha}\beta \eta \nu$.

VOCABULARY NOTES 181

In the verb $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$, $\lambda \epsilon l \psi \omega$, $\delta \lambda \iota \pi \sigma v$, $\lambda \delta \lambda \iota \iota \pi a$, $\lambda \delta \lambda \epsilon \iota \iota \mu \mu a \iota$, $\delta \lambda \epsilon l \psi \partial \eta v$, "leave, leave behind," the root shows three forms: $\lambda \epsilon \iota \pi$ - (Principal Part I and, with the final consonant changed, Principal Parts II, V, and VI), $\lambda \sigma \iota \pi$ - (Principal Part IV), and $\lambda \iota \pi$ - (Principal Part III). These are the e-grade ($\lambda \epsilon \iota \pi$ -), the o-grade ($\lambda \sigma \iota \pi$ -), and the zero-grade ($\lambda \iota \pi$ -), in which neither of these two vowels appears. There are no fixed rules for which vowel grade appears where, but the o-grade is fairly common in the perfect (cf. $\kappa \lambda \delta \pi \tau \omega$, $\pi \delta \mu \pi \omega$).

The particle $o\tilde{v}v$, like $\delta \dot{e}$, is postpositive. Its most common use in classical Greek is as a connective, indicating a new point in the development of the narrative or drawing a conclusion; hence the meanings "then, therefore."

The noun $\pi o i \eta \mu \alpha$, $\pi o i \eta \mu \alpha \tau \sigma \varsigma$, τo , "poem," uses the same suffix as the nouns $\pi \varrho \tilde{\alpha} \gamma \mu \alpha$ and $\gamma \varrho \dot{\alpha} \mu \mu \alpha$. Like the agent noun $\pi o i \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \varsigma$, it comes from the verb $\pi o i \dot{\omega}$, "make"; a poem is a "thing made."

A $\delta \acute{\eta} \tau \omega \varrho$, $\delta \acute{\eta} \tau \omega \varrho c$, δ is originally simply a "speaker." In a democracy, where one's power depended on one's ability to persuade one's fellow citizens with words, $\delta \acute{\eta} \tau \omega \varrho$ came to mean "politician." $\delta \acute{\eta} \tau \omega \varrho$ is cognate with the English word. All that is left of the sound that is represented by the English w is the rough breathing on the rho. This sound had been represented in Greek by a letter called digamma(f), but both the sound and the letter had disappeared from Attic Greek of the classical period.

The noun $\delta\eta\tau o\varrho\iota\varkappa\eta$, $\delta\eta\tau o\varrho\iota\varkappa\eta$, $\delta\eta\tau o\varrho\iota\varkappa\eta$, $\delta\eta$ is formed from the stem of $\delta\eta\tau\omega\varrho$ by adding the adjectival suffix $-\iota\varkappa o\varsigma$, $-\iota\varkappa\eta$, $-\iota\varkappa o\nu$, "pertaining to." The noun is feminine because as an adjective it originally modified the noun $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \chi \nu \eta$: rhetoric is the craft of the speaker. Words with this suffix have given us many English derivatives, e.g., music, arithmetic, physics. One must learn to deduce the meaning of such words, since they will not be given in the vocabulary.

In the verb $\sigma\dot{\phi}\zeta\omega$, $\sigma\dot{\omega}\sigma\omega$, $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\omega\sigma\alpha$, $\sigma\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\omega\kappa\alpha$, $\sigma\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\omega\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$ or $\sigma\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\omega\mu\alpha\iota$, $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\dot{\omega}\theta\eta\nu$, "save," note the iota subscript in the first principal part. The alternative perfect middle and passive forms have no difference in meaning.

In the noun $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\varrho$, $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, δ , "savior," the suffix $-\tau\eta\varrho$ indicates "one who does the action of the verb": $\sigma\omega\tau\eta\varrho$, "one who saves, savior."

The noun $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \dot{\eta}$, $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$ means essentially "price, value." The value that a community puts on a man is his "honor." This was and remains an extremely important concept in Greek society.

65. PARTICIPLES

Participles are verbal adjectives.

Their verbal nature is shown by the fact that they:

- (1) are formed on verbal tense stems
- (2) have both tense and voice
- (3) can take the same constructions as the finite forms of the verb, e.g., direct and indirect objects.

Their adjectival nature is shown by the fact that they:

- (1) have gender, number, and case
- (2) can modify and agree with nouns and pronouns.

There are active, middle, and passive participles of the present, future, aorist, and perfect tenses; each of these tenses and voices has forms of the masculine, feminine, and neuter in all cases in both numbers.

The tense of a Greek participle for the most part shows aspect but often in context it is clear that there is a definite temporal relationship between the participle and the main verb.

- 1. The present participle shows progressive/repeated aspect; its action is most often simultaneous with that of the main verb, and it can usually be translated by the English present participle, e.g., "educating, educating for oneself, being educated."
- 2. The future participle, like the future indicative, has either simple or progressive/repeated aspect. It always indicates subsequent action, and usually expresses intent or purpose. English does not have a future participle. The future participle of Greek can be translated by the phrase "about to..." or by "intending to...," e.g., "about to/intending to educate, about to/intending to educate for oneself, about to/intending to be educated."
- 3. The agriculture as a simple aspect; the action of an agriculture is often prior to, sometimes simultaneous with, that of the main verb.

The English equivalent of the agrist passive participle is the simple past participle "educated." Since English does not have the equivalent of an agrist participle active or middle, a Greek agrist participle active or middle must be translated by various English expressions, depending on the way in which the participle is used:

Having come (once and for all) to the city, he died.

Coming (once and for all) to the city, he died.

After coming to the city, he died.

Laughing (once and for all), he said the following.

With a laugh he said the following.

In Greek, all of the words in bold face above would have been expressed by acrist participles.

4. The perfect participle stresses the completion of the action; it is translated by the English present perfect participle, e.g., "having educated, having educated for oneself, having been educated."

Although the Greek agrist and perfect participles can often be translated by the same English participle, e.g. "having educated," the Greek agrist participle stresses the simple performance of the action, the perfect participle the completion of the action.

There are three major uses of the participle in Greek, the attributive, the circumstantial, and the supplementary. In this Unit the formation and declension of the participle and its attributive and circumstantial uses are presented. The supplementary use of the participle is presented in Unit 14.

Drill I, page 221, may now be done.

66. FORMATION AND DECLENSION OF THE ACTIVE PARTICIPLES

1. FORMATION OF THE ACTIVE PARTICIPLES

To form the active participles add the following suffixes + endings to the appropriate tense stem:

TENSE and TENSE STEM	SUFFIX	XES + E	NDINGS
	M	F	N
PRESENT Tense Stem	-ων -οντος	$-ov\sigma a$ $-ov\sigma\eta \varsigma$	-ον -οντος	Nom./Voc. Gen.	S
FUTURE Active and	-ων	-ουσα	-ον	Nom./Voc.	S
Middle Tense Stem	-οντος	-ουσης	-οντος	Gen.
FIRST AORIST Active	-āς	-āσα	-αν	Nom./Voc.	S and Middle Tense Stem	-αντος	-āσης	-αντος	Gen.
SECOND AORIST Active	-ών	-οῦσα	-όν	Nom./Voc.	S and Middle Tense Stem	-όντος	-ούσης	-όντος	Gen.

PERFECT Active Tense	-ώς	$-v ilde{\iota} a$	-ός	Nom./Voc.	S
Stem	-ότος	- $v l ar{a} arsigma$	-ότος	Gen.

Thus the active participles of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$, with the second a rist active participle of $\lambda \epsilon \acute{l} \pi \omega$, are as follows:

	M	F	N
PRESENT	παιδεύων	παιδεύουσα	παιδεῦον	Nom./Voc. S
	παιδεύοντος	παιδευούσης	παιδεύοντος	Gen.
FUTURE	παιδεύσων	παιδεύσουσα	παιδεῦσον	Nom./Voc. S
	παιδεύσοντος	παιδευσούσης	παιδεύσοντος	Gen.
FIRST	παιδεύσᾶς	παιδεύσāσα	παιδεῦσαν	Nom./Voc. S
AORIST	παιδεύσαντος	παιδευσάσης	παιδεύσαντος	Gen.
SECOND	λιπών	λιποῦσα	λιπόν	Nom./Voc. S
AORIST	λιπόντος	λιπούσης	λιπόντος	Gen.
PERFECT	πεπαιδευχώς	πεπαιδενκυῖα	πεπαιδευκός	Nom./Voc. S
	πεπαιδευχότος	πεπαιδενκυίᾶς	πεπαιδευκότος	Gen.

2. DECLENSION OF THE ACTIVE PARTICIPLES

The masculine and neuter are declined like third-declension nouns, and the feminine like a first-declension noun with a nominative in short $-\alpha$. To decline a participle, drop the declension endings from the masculine and feminine genitive singular to get the declension stems; then add the appropriate third-declension endings to the masculine/neuter declension stem and the appropriate first-declension endings to the feminine declension stem. The masculine/neuter dative plural undergoes sound changes according to the chart given in Section 48, p. 141.

- Observations: (1) The accent on participles is persistent and is given by the masculine singular nominative; hence the circumflex accent on the neuter singular nominative/accusative/vocative $\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon \tilde{v} o v$.
 - (2) The vocative of all first and third declension participles is the same as the nominative.
 - (3) Except for having no separate vocative, the masculine of the participle is declined exactly like the noun $\gamma \acute{e} \varrho \omega v$, $\gamma \acute{e} \varrho o v \tau \sigma \varsigma$, δ . Note the spurious diphthong -ov- in the masculine and neuter dative plural $\pi \alpha \iota \delta e \acute{v} o v \sigma \iota(v)$, a form identical with the third person plural, present indicative active form of the verb. Context will allow one to distinguish the two forms.
 - (4) The feminine of the participle is declined exactly like the noun $\mu o \tilde{v} \sigma a$, $\mu o \dot{v} \sigma \eta \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$. Note the circumflex accent on the ultima of the genitive plural, an exception to the rule of persistence of accent.

4. DECLENSION OF THE FUTURE ACTIVE PARTICIPLE

The future active participle differs from the present active participle only in the stem; the endings are exactly the same.

- Observations: (1) This participle is declined exactly like the present and future active participles of παιδεύω (cf. Section 66.3-4) except for the accent. Compare λιπόντος with παιδεύοντος.
 - (2) As in all participles whose feminine nominative singular ends in short $-\alpha$, the accent shifts to the ultima in the genitive plural: $\lambda \iota \pi o v \sigma \tilde{\omega} v$.

Acc.	πεπαιδευκότ ας	πεπαιδευκυί ας	πεπαιδευκότ α

- Observations: (1) Note the absence of a $-\nu$ before the $-\tau$ in the masculine/neuter declension stem. In the masculine/neuter dative plural, the combination $-o\tau\sigma\iota$ becomes $-o\sigma\iota$; see Section 48, p. 141.
 - (2) The feminine is declined like $\gamma \dot{\epsilon} \varphi \bar{\nu} \rho a$, $\gamma \dot{\epsilon} \varphi \dot{\nu} \rho \bar{a} \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$.
 - (3) Note the accent on the penult in all forms except the masculine nominative/vocative singular, the neuter nominative/vocative and accusative singular, and the feminine genitive plural.

67. FORMATION AND DECLENSION OF THE MIDDLE AND PASSIVE PARTICIPLES

The participles use the same forms for the middle and passive voice wherever the indicative does so, i.e., in the present and perfect tenses. In the future and in the aorist, there are separate middle and passive forms.

All middle and passive forms except the agrist passive add to the appropriate tense stem the suffix + endings $-\mu \epsilon \nu o \varsigma$, $-\mu \epsilon \nu o \gamma$ preceded by the thematic vowel in the present, future, and second agrist, and by the tense vowel $-\alpha$ - in the first agrist. They are declined just like first and second declension adjectives.

1. FORMATION OF THE MIDDLE PARTICIPLES

Thus the middle participles of $\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{v} \omega$, with the second a orist middle participle of $\lambda \varepsilon \ell \pi \omega$, are as follows:

	M	F	N

Note that the present passive and perfect passive participles are the same as the present middle and perfect middle participles, respectively.

Note also that ALL verbs form the aorist passive participle in the same way, using Principal Part VI.

Thus the passive participles of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ are as follows:

	M	F	N
PRE	SENT
	παιδευόμενος παιδευομένου	παιδευομένη παιδευομένης	παιδευόμενον παιδευομένου	Nom. S Gen.

Observation: Since the agrist passive of all verbs is formed in the same way from Principal Part VI, the agrist passive participle of $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$ is formed just like that of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$: $\lambda \epsilon \iota \varphi \theta \epsilon \acute{l} \varsigma$, $\lambda \epsilon \iota \varphi \theta \epsilon \acute{l} \sigma a$, $\lambda \epsilon \iota \varphi \theta \epsilon \acute{l} \sigma a$, $\lambda \epsilon \iota \varphi \theta \epsilon \acute{l} \sigma a$.

3. DECLENSION OF THE PRESENT MIDDLE/PASSIVE PARTICIPLE

The present middle/passive participle, future middle and passive participles, aorist middle participles, and perfect middle/passive participle are all declined like adjectives in $-o\varsigma$, $-\eta$, $-o\nu$. The declension of the present middle/passive participle is offered as a paradigm for all of the above.

Observation: Note that in the feminine plural genitive, the accent is NOT a circumflex on the ultima. In this, the participles in $-\mu \epsilon \nu o \varsigma$, $-\mu \epsilon \nu \eta$, $-\mu \epsilon \nu o \nu$ differ from the participles seen so far and resemble the adjectives.

4. DECLENSION OF THE AORIST PASSIVE PARTICIPLE

The aorist passive participle is declined like the active participles with a masculine/neuter declension stem in $-\nu\tau$ - and a short $-\alpha$ feminine.

 - (2) In the masculine and neuter dative plural, the combination -εντσι becomes -εισι; see Section 48, p. 141.

69. ATTRIBUTIVE USE OF THE PARTICIPLE

The attributive participle acts like any other adjective and is found in the attributive position, i.e., between the article and the noun it modifies or immediately preceded by the article after the noun it modifies. Such participles agree, of course, in gender, number, and case with the word they modify.

Remember that the tense of a participle can show both aspect (progressive/repeated, simple, completed) and relative time (simultaneous, prior, subsequent); see Section 65.

Attributive participles can often be translated by relative clauses.

 \begin{array}{l} \delta \; \pmb{\theta \tilde{\textbf{v}} \boldsymbol{\omega v}} \; \pi o \imath \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \varsigma \; \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \dot{\omega} \theta \eta. \\ \delta \; \pi o \imath \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \varsigma \; \delta \; \pmb{\theta \tilde{\textbf{v}} \boldsymbol{\omega v}} \; \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \dot{\omega} \theta \eta. \\ \pi o \imath \eta \tau \dot{\eta} \varsigma \; \delta \; \pmb{\theta \tilde{\textbf{v}} \boldsymbol{\omega v}} \; \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \dot{\omega} \theta \eta. \\ \end{array} \end{array} \end{array} \end{array} \end{array} \right} \end{array} \end{array} \right} \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{The sacrificing poet was saved.} \\ \text{The poet sacrificing was saved.} \\ \text{The poet who was sacrificing was saved.} \\ \tau o \tilde{\imath} \zeta \; \pmb{\theta \tilde{\textbf{v}} \sigma \overline{\alpha} \sigma \iota} \; \pi o \imath \eta \tau a \tilde{\imath} \zeta \\ \tau o \tilde{\imath} \zeta \; \pi o \imath \eta \tau a \tilde{\imath} \zeta \; \tau o \tilde{\imath} \zeta \; \pmb{\theta \tilde{\textbf{v}} \sigma \overline{\alpha} \sigma \iota v} \\ \pi o \imath \eta \tau a \tilde{\imath} \zeta \; \tau o \tilde{\imath} \zeta \; \pmb{\theta \tilde{\textbf{v}} \sigma \overline{\alpha} \sigma \iota v} \\ \tau \tilde{\eta} \zeta \; \tau u \theta \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\sigma} \boldsymbol{\eta} \zeta \\ \tau \tilde{\eta} \zeta \; \tau u \theta \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\eta} \zeta \\ \tau \tilde{\eta} \zeta \; \tau u \theta \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\eta} \zeta \\ a \imath \dot{\gamma} \dot{\delta} \zeta \; \tau \tilde{\eta} \zeta \; \tau u \theta \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\epsilon} \boldsymbol{\eta} \zeta \\ \end{array} \right\} \end{aligned} \end{aligned} \right\} \end{aligned} \\ \begin{cases} \text{of the sacrificed she-goat} \\ \text{of the she-goat which was sacrificed} \end{aligned}

For each of the participles in the examples given above, an adjective could be substituted, e.g., $\tau \tilde{\eta}_{\varsigma} \, \kappa a \lambda \tilde{\eta}_{\varsigma} \, a i \gamma \delta_{\varsigma}$, "of the beautiful she-goat." The attributive participle, like any adjective, serves to limit the noun with which it agrees.

The attributive participle takes all the constructions which the finite verb takes:

δ τὴν alγα θύσας ποιητής the poet who sacrificed the she-goat \mathring{\eta} alξ \mathring{\eta} ὑπὸ τοῦ ποιητοῦ τυθεῖσα the she-goat sacrificed by the poet the she-goat which was sacrificed by the poet
```

As with all adjectives, the attributive participle can be used substantively:

\delta τὴν αἶγα τῷ θεῷ θτων the man sacrificing the goat to the goddess the man who is sacrificing the goat to the goddess

ή χορεύουσα the dancing woman the woman who is dancing the dancer

The article with the substantive use of the attributive participle can be either particular, i.e., referring to specific people or objects, or generic, i.e., referring to a class of people or objects; cf. Sections 16.4 (p. 29) and 46 (p. 127). In the negative, où is used with particular substantives; $\mu\dot{\eta}$, with generic substantives. Thus, of $\theta\dot{v}ov\tau\epsilon\zeta$ are either "the (specific) men sacrificing, the men who are sacrificing," or "men (the whole class) sacrificing, men who sacrifice"; but of où $\theta\dot{v}ov\tau\epsilon\zeta$ are only "the specific men not sacrificing, the men who are not sacrificing (as opposed, e.g., to those over there who are sacrificing)" and of $\mu\dot{\gamma}$ $\theta\dot{v}ov\tau\epsilon\zeta$ are only "those (the whole class) not sacrificing, those who do not sacrifice."

Drill II.1-24, pages 221-22, may now be done.

70. CIRCUMSTANTIAL USE OF THE PARTICIPLE

A circumstantial participle is one NOT in the attributive position which gives the circumstances under which the action of the main verb takes place. Such participles agree in gender, number, and case with a noun or pronoun in the sentence (or the subject of the sentence contained in the verb), but they are really the equivalent of an adverbial clause, i.e., they function as adverbs in telling, e.g., why or when the action of the main verb of the sentence occurs.

Compare the use of the attributive participle in sentence (1) below with that of the circumstantial participle in sentence (2).

δ θύων ποιητής ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου σώζεται.
 The poet sacrificing is being saved by the people.
 The poet who is sacrificing is being saved by the people.

In sentence (1) the participle $\theta \dot{v}\omega v$ is in the attributive position and serves to point out the poet as would the adjective $\varkappa \alpha \lambda \delta \varsigma$.

- (2) θύων ο ποιητής ύπο τοῦ δήμου σώζεται.
 - a. Sacrificing, the poet is saved by the people.
 - b. When he sacrifices, the poet is saved by the people.
 - c. Since he sacrifices, the poet is saved by the people.
 - d. If he sacrifices, the poet is saved by the people.

In sentence (2) the participle is not in the attributive position and therefore is not serving to identify or point out the poet; instead, it gives the circumstances under which he is saved. The participle, in Greek as in English, may indicate only the general circumstances, or the content and context of the sentence may suggest something more specific as in translation (b), temporal relation between the action of the participle and that of the main verb; (c), causal relation between the action of the participle and that of the main verb; or (d), conditional relation between the action of the participle and that of the main verb.

Sometimes the exact nature of the circumstantial participle can be made clear by the use of an adverb or conjunction with either the main verb or the participle.

1. A temporal adverb like $\ell\pi\epsilon\iota\tau a$, "then, thereupon," accompanying the main verb, can indicate that a circumstantial participle is temporal.

λυθέντες έπειτα τοῖς θεοῖς ἐθύσαμεν.

Freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.

Upon being freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.

After being freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.

After we were freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.

2. The adverb $\delta\mu\omega\varsigma$, "nevertheless," with the main verb indicates that the circumstantial participle is concessive, i.e., the equivalent of a clause introduced by the conjunction "although."

λυθέντες όμως τοῖς θεοῖς οὐκ ἐθΰσαμεν.

Freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.

Upon being freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.

Although freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.

Although we were freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.

3. The word $\kappa al\pi \epsilon \varrho$, "although," with a circumstantial participle also indicates that the participle is concessive.

καίπεο λυθέντες τοῖς θεοῖς οὐκ ἐθύσαμεν.

Although freed, we did not sacrifice to the gods.

Although we were freed, we did not sacrifice to the gods.

4. The words $\tilde{a}\tau\varepsilon$ and ola with a circumstantial participle indicate that the participle is causal and that the speaker or writer is stating the cause on his own responsibility.

Freed (and I as speaker am asserting that this is the cause), they sacrificed to the gods.

Because they were freed (and I as speaker am asserting that this is the cause), they sacrificed to the gods.

5. The word $\delta \varsigma$ with a participle shows that the participle expresses either cause or purpose. The cause or purpose is one given by the subject of the sentence (or someone else important in the sentence), NOT one asserted on the authority of the speaker or writer. This reason may be either real or pretended.

δς λνθέντες τοῖς θεοῖς ξθνσαν.

Freed (as they said), they sacrificed to the gods.

Because they were freed (as they said), they sacrificed to the gods.

ἐπέμφθησαν ὡς θύσοντες τοῖς θεοῖς.

They were sent to sacrifice to the gods (as they said).

NOTE that the future participle, even without an introductory word, is an alternative to the purpose clause with a verb in the subjunctive or the optative.

ἐπέμφθησαν θύσοντες τοῖς θεοῖς.

They were sent to sacrifice to the gods.

6. The negative with all circumstantial participles is $o\vec{v}$ except for conditional participles (circumstantial participles used as protases of conditional sentences), which use $\mu\dot{\eta}$. Therefore a circumstantial participle negated by $\mu\dot{\eta}$ MUST be conditional.

μή βλαπτόμενοι έθέλομεν δώρα πέμπειν.

Not being harmed, we are willing to send gifts.

If we are not harmed, we are willing to send gifts.

In this sentence, the participle stands for a present general protasis.

Compare the conditional participle, indicated by the negative $\mu \dot{\eta}$, with a causal participle, negated by $o \dot{v}$.

οὐ βλαπτόμενοι ἐθέλομεν δῶρα πέμπειν.

Not being harmed, we are willing to send gifts.

Since we are not harmed, we are willing to send gifts.

Without the negative or an adverb or conjunction to help distinguish the circumstantial participles, only context allows one to choose from among all the possibilities.

βλαπτόμενοι οὐκ ἐθέλομεν δῶρα πέμπειν.

Being harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.

When we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.

Since we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.

If we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.

Although we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.

For examples of how to give the syntax of a participle, see pages 296-97 and 302-3.

Drills II.25-48 and III, pages 222-23, may now be done.

71. THE ADJECTIVE πᾶς, πᾶσα, πᾶν, "all, every; whole"

The adjective $\pi\tilde{\alpha}\varsigma$, $\pi\tilde{\alpha}\sigma\alpha$, $\pi\tilde{\alpha}\nu$, "all, every; whole" has forms of the first and third declensions. It is declined as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	πᾶς	πᾶσα	πᾶν
Gen.	παντός	πᾶσης	παντός
Dat.	παντί	πᾶση	παντί
Acc.	πάντα	πᾶσαν	πᾶν
Nom./Voc. P	πάντες	πᾶσαι	πάντα
Gen.	πάντων	πᾶσῶν	πάντων
Dat.	πᾶσι(ν)	πᾶσαις	πᾶσι(ν)
Acc.	πάντας	πᾶσᾶς	πάντα

Observation: This adjective has, except for the accent, the same declensional endings as the aorist participle active: cf. $\lambda \tilde{v} \sigma \bar{a} \varsigma$, $\lambda \tilde{v} \sigma \bar{a} \sigma \alpha$, $\lambda \tilde{v} \sigma a \nu$. The masculine and neuter stem is $\pi a \nu \tau$ - with a short alpha. The feminine declension stem is $\pi \bar{a} \sigma$ -. Note that in the singular in the masculine and neuter, the accent shifts to the ultima in the genitive and the dative; in all forms of the plural, except for the genitive plural $\pi \bar{a} \sigma \tilde{a} \nu$, it remains on the penult. In the dative plural masculine/neuter, * $\pi \acute{a} \nu \tau \sigma \iota(\nu)$ gives $\pi \tilde{a} \sigma \iota(\nu)$, with the long alpha due to compensatory lengthening.

This adjective usually appears in the predicate position and means "all":

πάντες οἱ διδάσκαλοι οἱ διδάσκαλοι πάντες all the teachers πᾶσα ἡ χώρᾶ πασα η χωφα ή χώφā πᾶσα all the land

In the singular, unaccompanied by the article, this adjective means "every":

πᾶς ἄνθοωπος every man

In the attributive position, this adjective means "whole" and emphasizes the entirety of a thing or group:

η πᾶσα χώρ ρthe whole land

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb $\mathring{a}\gamma\omega$, $\mathring{a}\xi\omega$, $\mathring{\eta}\gamma a\gamma o\nu$, $\mathring{\eta}\chi a$, $\mathring{\eta}\gamma\mu a\iota$, $\mathring{\eta}\chi\theta\eta\nu$, "lead," has as its basic root $\mathring{a}\gamma$. The future was formed by the addition of $-\sigma$: $\mathring{a}\xi\omega$. The aorist active and middle tense stem shows reduplication and is a second aorist: $\mathring{a}\gamma a\gamma$ -when unaugmented, $\mathring{\eta}\gamma a\gamma$ - when augmented. The $\mathring{\eta}$ - of Principal Parts IV and V is part of the stem and remains unchanged in the perfect and pluperfect (cf. $\mathring{\eta}\varrho\chi a$, $\mathring{\eta}\theta\acute{e}\lambda\eta\kappa a$, etc.). In Principal Part VI, the $\mathring{\eta}$ - is a past indicative augment and does not appear in the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem: $\dot{a}\chi\theta$ -. The word is used for leading animals or people (especially of leading away people or animals captured in war); providing leadership; conducting, e.g., $\ddot{a}\gamma\omega\ \dot{a}\gamma\bar{\omega}\nu a$, "I hold a contest"; $\ddot{a}\gamma\omega\ \theta\nu\sigma l\bar{a}\nu$, "I perform a sacrifice." The expression $\epsilon l\varrho\dot{\eta}\nu\eta\nu\ \ddot{a}\gamma\epsilon\iota\nu$ means "to keep peace."

The adjective ${}^{\prime}A\theta\eta\nu\alpha\tilde{\iota}o\varsigma$, ${}^{\prime}A\theta\eta\nu\alpha\tilde{\iota}a$, ${}^{\prime}A\theta\eta\nu\alpha\tilde{\iota}o\nu$, "Athenian," is derived from ${}^{\prime}A\theta\tilde{\eta}\nu\alpha\iota$, " ${}^{\prime}A\theta\eta\nu\tilde{\omega}\nu$, "Athens," which in turn is the plural of the name of the goddess Athena as it appears in Homer, ${}^{\prime}A\theta\tilde{\eta}\nu\eta$, ${}^{\prime}A\theta\tilde{\eta}\nu\eta\varsigma$, $\tilde{\eta}$.

Notice that $\ddot{a}\mu a$ can be either an adverb, "at the same time," or a preposition with the dative, "at the same time as, together with."

Note that $\tilde{a}\tau\varepsilon$ and $oldsymbol{i}a$ with causal participles both indicate that the speaker is taking responsibility for the assertion. Contrast this with $\delta \varsigma$ with a participle of cause or purpose, which indicates that the cause or purpose is that of the subject of the sentence or of someone else important in the sentence.

The adverb $\ddot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\tau a$ is used of time, "then" (= "thereupon, afterward"), or of consequences, "therefore."

The verb $\tilde{\eta} \varkappa \omega$, $\tilde{\eta} \xi \omega$, —, —, —, "have come, be present," exists in the present, the imperfect, and the future tenses only. $\tilde{\eta} \varkappa \omega$ is present in form but perfect in meaning; the imperfect has a pluperfect meaning: $\tilde{\eta} \varkappa o v$, "I had come, was present."

The word $\kappa \alpha i \pi \epsilon \varrho$, "although," is used only with participles, not with finite verbs. It consists of the conjunction $\kappa \alpha i +$ the enclitic $-\pi \epsilon \varrho$, and is accented accordingly (cf. $\kappa \alpha i \tau \sigma i$).

The accent of the conjunctions $\mu\eta\tau\epsilon\dots\mu\eta\tau\epsilon$ and $o\tilde{v}\tau\epsilon\dots o\tilde{v}\tau\epsilon$, "neither... nor," shows that they are formed from the negative adverb + the enclitic $\tau\epsilon$. Compounds of $\mu\eta$ and $o\tilde{v}$ are used in the same constructions as the corresponding simple negative:

οὔτε θύομεν οὔτε χορεύομεν. We are neither sacrificing nor dancing. μήτε θύωμεν μήτε χορεύωμεν. Let us neither sacrifice nor dance.

The noun $o\bar{t}vo\varsigma$, $o\bar{t}vov$, δ , "wine," is cognate with the Latin $v\bar{t}num$, whence the English "wine." Presumably the ancestors of the Greeks learned viticulture, wine drinking, and the name of the beverage from the pre-Greek inhabitants of the country. In Greek the initial digamma dropped out: * $fo\bar{t}vo\varsigma$ > $o\bar{t}vo\varsigma$.

The adverb $\delta\mu\omega\varsigma$, "nevertheless," frequently indicates that a participle is a concessive one.

Like the adjective $\pi\tilde{a}\zeta$, $\pi\tilde{a}\sigma a$, $\pi\tilde{a}\nu$, "all, every; whole," are declined the strengthened forms $\tilde{a}\pi\bar{a}\zeta$, $\tilde{a}\pi\bar{a}\sigma a$, $\tilde{a}\pi a\nu$, "all, quite all," and $\sigma\dot{\nu}\mu\pi\bar{a}\zeta$, $\sigma\dot{\nu}\mu\pi\bar{a}\sigma a$, $\sigma\dot{\nu}\mu\pi a\nu$, "all together." Except for the feminine genitive plural, $\tilde{a}\pi\bar{a}\sigma\tilde{a}\nu$, $\sigma\nu\mu\pi\bar{a}\sigma\tilde{a}\nu$, these forms are accented on the antepenult when the ultima is short, e.g., $\tilde{a}\pi a\nu\tau\sigma\zeta$. Otherwise, they are accented on the penult. Note the short alpha in the neuter nominative/accusative/vocative singular; contrast $\pi\tilde{a}\nu$. Like the simple form, the strengthened forms of this adjective appear in the predicate position and, less commonly, in the attributive position.

The noun στρατηγός, στρατηγοῦ, δ is a compound of στρατός, στρατοῦ, δ , "army," and the root $d\gamma$ - "lead": "army-leader, general."

A χρήμα, χρήματος, τό is a thing needed or useful. "Money" is an obvious extension of this meaning.

Note that the conjunction δc , which can accompany a circumstantial participle to show that the speaker does not vouch for the cause or purpose expressed, is a proclitic.

72. CONTRACTED VERBS: INTRODUCTION

Some verbs have a present tense stem which ends in α , ε , or o. Since this vowel contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the various endings added to this stem, according to the rules given below, these verbs are called contracted verbs.

THE CONTRACTION TAKES PLACE IN ANY FORM WHICH USES THE STEM FROM PRINCIPAL PART I. ALL OTHER TENSES ARE FORMED ACCORDING TO RULES ALREADY LEARNED, as the Principal Parts below make clear.

The contraction follows regular rules which will be given as each type of verb is presented.

Most endings employed by contracted verbs are the same as those of such verbs as $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$. Different endings occur in the present optative active only, and these will be listed separately.

Uncontracted forms of these verbs will be given in parentheses for comparison.

73. CONTRACTED VERBS WITH PRESENT TENSE STEMS IN -α-

The following verb will serve as an example:

τῖμάω, τῖμήσω, ἐτίμησα, τετίμηκα, τετίμημαι, ἐτῖμήθην, "honor"

The present tense stem is formed, as usual, by dropping the ending $-\omega$ from Principal Part I: $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \alpha$. The α of this stem contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the endings according to the rules below.

CONTRACT	IONS OF a
$aarepsilon > ar{a}$	$ao > \omega$
$aarepsilon\iota>ar{q}$	$ao\iota > \varphi$
$a\eta > \bar{a}$	$aov > \omega$
$ a\eta>ar{a}$	$a\omega > \omega$

Thus the forms of the present and imperfect tenses of $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a}\omega$ are as follows. (In learning the contracted forms, one can either memorize the contracted endings or make the contractions oneself according to the rules above from the uncontracted forms which are given in parentheses.)

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

	ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PA	SSIVE
S	1 τ τ μ ῶ	(τ ī μάω)	τ ῖμῶμαι	(τῖμάομαι)
	2 τ τ μ ᾳς	(τ ī μάεις)	τ ῖμᾳ̃	(τῖμάῃ/τῖμάει)
	3 τ τ μ ᾳ	(τ ī μάει)	τ ῖμᾶται	(τῖμάεται)
P	1 τ ξ μ ῶμεν	(τῖμάομεν)	τῖμώμεθα	(τῖμαόμεθα)
	2 τ ξ μ ᾶτε	(τῖμάετε)	τῖμᾶσθε	(τῖμάεσθε)
	3 τ ξ μ ῶσι(ν)	(τῖμάουσι[ν])	τῖμῶνται	(τῖμάονται)

- Observations: (1) The first person singular, present indicative active is given in its uncontracted form as Principal Part I in order to show the vowel of the present tense stem. But this form, like the others, is contracted in actual usage.
 - (2) The third person singular, present indicative active is identical in form with the second person singular, present indicative middle/passive.

General note on the accent of contracted verbs:

IF EITHER OF THE TWO SYLLABLES BEING CONTRACTED BORE AN ACCENT IN THE ORIGINAL UNCONTRACTED FORM, THE ACCENT REMAINS ON THE NEW, CONTRACTED SYLLABLE. THE ACCENT ON A CONTRACTED ULTIMA IS A CIRCUMFLEX; THE ACCENT ON A CONTRACTED PENULT IS DETERMINED BY THE RULES FOR THE POSSIBILITIES OF ACCENT. THE ACCENT OF THE UNCONTRACTED FORMS IS RECESSIVE.

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

ACTIVE			MIDDLE PASSIVE
S	1 ἐτίμ ων 2 ἐτίμ ᾶς	(ἐτίμαον) (ἐτίμαες)	$ec{\epsilon} auar{\iota}\mu$ ώ μ ην $ec{\epsilon} auar{\iota}\mu$ ῶ	(ἐτῖμαόμην) (ἐτῖμάου)

	3 ἐτίμων	$(\vec{\epsilon}\tau t\mu aov)$	$ec{\epsilon}$ $ au$ $ec{\iota}$ μ ῶντο	(ἐτῖμάοντο)

- Observations: (1) The imperfect indicative employs, of course, the past indicative augment.
 - (2) Nu-movable is NEVER added to the third person singular, imperfect indicative active of contracted verbs. Thus $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\dot{t}\mu\bar{a}$, but $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\bar{v}\epsilon(\nu)$.

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Observation: The present subjunctive of $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$, both active and middle/passive, is identical in form with the indicative throughout. Context will help to distinguish the forms.

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

In the present optative active contracted verbs can employ, before contraction, EITHER endings identical to those of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ OR a separate set of endings. The latter are listed separately.

Observations: (1) The alternative endings are more common in the singular; the endings identical to those of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are more common in the plural.

(2) This is the only instance where contracted verbs employ a set of endings different from those of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$. The alternative endings are composed of the thematic vowel -o-, the optative suffix $-\iota \eta$ -, and the person markers $-\nu$, $-\varsigma$, —, $-\mu \varepsilon \nu$, $-\tau \varepsilon$, $-\sigma \alpha \nu$. Compare the person markers of the aorist optative passive $(\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \nu \theta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \eta \nu$, etc.).

5. PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

3 τῖμῷντο (τῖμάοιντο)
```

6. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The contraction of the present infinitive active ending $-\varepsilon \iota \nu$ with the α of the stem does NOT follow the rules presented above.

τῖμᾶν

Observation: This form was originally *τ̄μάεεν, just as the present infinitive active of παιδεύω was *παιδεύεεν. The diphthong of the ending -ειν resulted from the contraction of the two epsilons. (Cf. the rules for the contraction of epsilon in Section 74.) Like a diphthong that results from compensatory lengthening, a diphthong that results from contraction is also a spurious diphthong.

When the spurious diphthong $-\varepsilon\iota$ - contracts with an $-\alpha$ -, there is no iota subscript in the result.

The present infinitive middle/passive follows the regular rules:

τιμασθαι (τιμάεσθαι)

7. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

To form the present participle active of contracted verbs, add to the present tense stem the same suffixes and endings as are employed to form the present participle active of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ (Section 66.1). As in the finite forms of contracted verbs, the present tense stem contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the suffix.

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	$ auar\iota\mu ilde\omega u$	$ auar\iota\mu ilde\omega\sigma a$	$ auar\iota\mu ilde\omega u$
	$(auar\iota\mulpha\omega u)$	$(auar\iota\mulpha ov\sigma a)$	(τ̄ιμάον)
Gen.	$ auar\iota\mu ilde\omega u au oarsigma$	τīμώσης	$ au ar{\iota} \mu ilde{\omega} u au o arsigma$
	(τῖμάοντος)	(τῖμαούσης)	(τ̄ιμάοντος)

Observations: (1) These participles are declined exactly like the present participle active of παιδεύω except that the contraction of the present tense stem with the suffix causes the accent to fall on the final syllable of the declension stem: e.g., τ̄ιμῶντος, but παιδεύοντος. As with the present participle active of παιδεύω, the case endings are dropped from the genitive singular forms in order to obtain the declension stem:

M F N $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \omega \nu \tau$ - $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \omega \sigma$ - $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \omega \nu \tau$ -

The masculine and neuter are then given third-declension case endings; the feminine is declined like a first declension noun with nominative singular in short $-\alpha$.

THE DECLENSION STEMS, CONTAINING THE CONTRACTIONS, ARE FIXED. The addition of the endings is simple.

- (2) In the feminine genitive plural, the accent shifts, as usual, to the ultima: $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \omega \sigma \tilde{\omega} \nu$.
- (3) Note that the masculine and neuter dative plural is $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \tilde{\omega} \sigma \iota(\nu)$ (* $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} o \nu \tau \sigma \iota[\nu]$).

8. PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present participle middle/passive of contracted verbs, add to the present tense stem the same suffixes and endings as are employed to form the present participle middle/passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\omega}$ (Section 67.1). The final vowel of the stem contracts with the initial vowel of the suffix.

Observation: This participle is declined exactly like the present participle middle/passive of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$.

Remember that only those forms of $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$ which use Principal Part I differ from those of $\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\omega} \omega$. From the other Principal Parts of this verb the other tenses are formed according to the rules already learned.

Drill I.1-14, page 248, may now be done.

74. CONTRACTED VERBS WITH PRESENT TENSE STEMS IN -E-

The following verb will serve as an example:

ποιέω, ποιήσω, ἐποίησα, πεποίηκα, πεποίημαι, ἐποιήθην, "do; make"

The present tense stem, $\pi o \iota \varepsilon$ -, contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the endings according to the chart below.

CONTRACT	TIONS OF ε
$ \epsilon \epsilon > \epsilon \iota$	$\varepsilon o > ov$
arepsilon arepsilo	$\varepsilon o \iota > o \iota$
$arepsilon \eta > \eta$	$\varepsilon ov > ov$
$\epsilon \eta > \eta$	$\varepsilon\omega > \omega$

Thus the forms of the present and imperfect tenses of $\pi o \iota \ell \omega$ (with uncontracted forms given in parentheses for reference) are as follows:

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

In the present optative active, contracted verbs with stems in $-\varepsilon$ - can employ, before contraction, EITHER endings identical with those of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{v} \omega$ OR the same alternative endings used by $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$. These are listed separately.

SECTION 75 239

Observations: (1) As in the declension of the participles of $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$, the declension stems remain unchanged throughout: $\pi o \iota o v v \tau$ - for the masculine and neuter, $\pi o \iota o v \sigma$ - for the feminine.

- (2) In the feminine genitive plural, the accent shifts, as usual, to the ultima: $\pi o \iota o v \sigma \tilde{\omega} v$.
- (3) Note the masculine and neuter dative plural of the present participle active: $\pi o \iota o \tilde{v} \sigma \iota(v)$ (* $\pi o \iota \acute{e} o v \tau \sigma \iota[v]$).

Drill I.15-54, page 248, may now be done.

75. THE DEMONSTRATIVE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN $\delta\delta\epsilon$, $\eta\delta\epsilon$, $\tau\delta\delta\epsilon$, "this"

The demonstrative adjective/pronoun $\delta\delta\varepsilon$, $\eta\delta\varepsilon$, $\tau\delta\delta\varepsilon$ means "this (here, in this place)" in contrast with the demonstrative $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\bar{\iota}\nu o\varsigma$, $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\dot{\iota}\nu \eta$, $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\bar{\iota}\nu o$, which means "that (there, in that place)" (Section 62).

The forms of this demonstrative are as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	$\H{o}\delta arepsilon$	$\eta\delta\varepsilon$	$ au \acute{o} \delta arepsilon$
Gen.	$ au o ilde{v} \delta arepsilon$	$ au ilde{\eta} \sigma \delta arepsilon$	$ au o ilde{v} \delta arepsilon$

Acc.	τούσδε	$ au ilde{lpha} \sigma \delta arepsilon$	$ aulpha\deltaarepsilon$

This demonstrative consists of the article + the enclitic suffix $-\delta\varepsilon$. The effect of this suffix on the accent of the article is the same as that of the enclitic $\tau\varepsilon$; hence the acute accent on such forms as $\eta\delta\varepsilon$, $\tau\circ\iota\sigma\delta\varepsilon$.

A noun modified by $\delta\delta\varepsilon$, $\eta\delta\varepsilon$, $\tau\delta\delta\varepsilon$ must be accompanied by the article. The demonstrative usually precedes the article. It may (rarely) follow the noun.

οίδε οἱ ἀδελφοὶ βιβλία ἔγραφον. These brothers were writing books.

εἰς τήνδε τὴν νῆσον εἰς τὴν νῆσον τήνδε (rare) to this island The demonstrative can also be used as a pronoun:

τήνδε παύσετε.

You will stop this woman.

τάδε πεφυλάχαμεν.

We have guarded these things.

The meanings of three demonstratives are compared in Section 77.

76. THE DEMONSTRATIVE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN οὖτος, αὔτη, τοῦτο, "this, that"

The demonstrative adjective/pronoun $o\tilde{v}\tau o \varepsilon$, $a\tilde{v}\tau \eta$, $\tau o\tilde{v}\tau o$ means, depending on context, "this" or "that." It indicates someone or something close at hand or in the speaker's thoughts, but it does not emphasize that closeness as much as the demonstrative $\delta \delta \varepsilon$, $\eta \delta \varepsilon$, $\tau \delta \delta \varepsilon$. It is equivalent to "this" or "that" in the sentences "I met this man you know," "You know that man I was telling you about."

The forms of this demonstrative are as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	$o \tilde{v} au o arsigma$	$a\~v au\eta$	$ au o ilde{v} au o$
Gen.	τούτου	ταύτης	τούτου
Dat.	τούτω	ταύτη	τούτω

Gen.	τούτων	τούτων	τούτων
Dat.	τούτοις	ταύταις	τούτοις
Acc.	τούτους	ταύτᾶς	ταῦτα

The endings are in almost every case identical with those of the article. Where the article has a rough breathing (in the nominative singular and plural, masculine and feminine), the demonstrative has a rough breathing in place of initial τ -. The stem has -av- instead of -ov- in all feminine forms EXCEPT the genitive plural, and in the neuter nominative and accusative plural.

A noun modified by $o\tilde{v}\tau o\varsigma$, $\alpha\tilde{v}\tau\eta$, $\tau o\tilde{v}\tau o$ must be accompanied by the article. The demonstrative usually precedes the article. It may (rarely) follow the noun.

ταύτας τὰς γεφύρας ἐφυλάττετε. τὰς γεφύρας ταύτας ἐφυλάττετε. (rare) You were guarding these/those bridges. The demonstrative can also be used as a pronoun:

τούτους παύσουσιν.

They will stop these/those men.

The meanings of three demonstratives are compared in Section 77.

77. DEMONSTRATIVES COMPARED ἐκεῖνος: (a) describes someone or something relatively far away from the speaker:

ἐκεῖνον εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἔπεμψα.
I sent that man (over there) to the island.

(b) can be used of someone famous or infamous:

ἐκεῖνος δ ποιητής that (famous) poet ἐκεῖνος δ γέρων that (horrible) old man

- (c) can mean "the former" when contrasted with ovros (cf. 3.c below).
- 2. ὅδε: (a) describes someone or something very close to the speaker:
 τόδε τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψα.
 I wrote this book (right here).
 - (b) looks ahead to what will follow:

έγράψαμεν τάδε· We wrote the following things:

3. $o\tilde{v}\tau o\varsigma$: (a) describes someone or something less close or less vividly present than would have been indicated by $\delta\delta \epsilon$:

τοῦτο τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψα.
I wrote this book (to which you refer).
I wrote that book (to which you refer).

(b) when contrasted with δδε, refers to what has gone before:
 ταῦτα μὲν "Ομηρος ἔγραψεν, τάδε δ' ἔγραψα.
 The preceding (things), on the one hand, Homer wrote; the following (things), on the other hand,

I wrote.

(c) when contrasted with ἐκεῖνος often means "the latter" as opposed to "the former":

ἀγαθοὶ καὶ οἱ νεᾶνίαι καὶ οἱ γέροντες.
ἐκεῖνοι μὲν γὰρ εἰς πόλεμον πέμπονται, οὕτοι δὲ βιβλία γράφουσιν.

Both young men and old men are good.
For the former, on the one hand, are sent to war;
the latter, on the other hand, write books.

(d) can be used of someone famous or infamous:

οὖτος ὁ ποιητής this (famous) poet that (famous) poet οὖτος ὁ γέρων this (horrible) old man that (horrible) old man

(e) often serves as the antecedent of a relative pronoun:

δς ἀν παιδευθῆ, οὖτος εἰς μάχην πεμφθήσεται.
Whoever is educated, that man will be sent into battle.

Drill II, page 249, may now be done.

78. SUBJECTIVE GENITIVE

A noun or pronoun in the genitive case can indicate the subject of a verbal action or state of being denoted by a noun. This usage is called the subjective genitive. The genitive stands in the attributive position.

δ 'Ομήρου φόβος Homer's fear (i.e., the fear which Homer feels) al τῶν Ἑλλήνων θυσίαι the sacrifices of the Greeks (i.e., the sacrifices which the Greeks perform)

79. OBJECTIVE GENITIVE

A noun or pronoun in the genitive case can also indicate the object of a verbal action denoted by a noun. This usage is called the objective genitive. The genitive stands in the attributive position.

 δ τῶν θεῶν $\varphi \delta \beta \sigma \varsigma$ fear of the gods (i.e., fear directed toward the gods) η τῶν αἰγῶν $\theta v \sigma l \bar{a}$

the sacrifice of the goats (i.e., someone sacrificed the goats)

Contrast the phrases in Section 78, where the subjective genitives $O\mu\eta\varrho\sigma v$ and $\tau\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $E\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\nu\omega\nu$ indicate the performer of an action. The objective genitives $\tau\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $\theta\varepsilon\tilde{\omega}\nu$ and $\tau\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $al\gamma\tilde{\omega}\nu$ indicate the receiver of an action. Context usually allows one to determine whether such a genitive is subjective or objective.

80. DATIVE OF MANNER

A noun in the dative case, without a preposition, can indicate the manner in which an action takes place or a state of being holds true. This usage is called the dative of manner.

τούτω τῷ τρόπω βιβλίον ἔγραψα. In this way I wrote a book.

Most datives of manner are phrases consisting of a noun and an adjective, but some nouns can be used alone in such expressions:

οί στρατιῶται σῖγῆ εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπέμφθησαν. The soldiers were sent in silence to the island.

In general, however, nouns not modified by adjectives employ various prepositions with the dative of manner:

σύν δίκη ἐπέμφθησαν ἐκ τῆς χώρᾶς οἱ πολέμιοι. With justice the enemy were sent out of the land.

Carefully distinguish the dative of manner from the instrumental dative:

τὴν γέφυξαν σῖγῆ ἐφύλαττον.
They were guarding the bridge in silence. (dative of manner) τὴν γέφῦραν ὅπλοις ἐφύλαττον.

They were guarding the bridge with weapons. (instrumental dative)

81. DATIVE OF RESPECT

A noun in the dative case, without a preposition, can also indicate the respect in which a statement is true. This usage is called the dative of respect.

τῷ μἐν σώματι καλὸς ὁ νεᾶνίᾶς, τῆ δὲ ψῦχῆ κακός. In body (i.e., with respect to his body), on the one hand, the young man is beautiful; in soul, on the other hand, he is evil.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀδικέω, ἀδικήσω, ἠδίκησα, ἠδίκηκα, ἠδίκημαι, ἠδικήθην, "do wrong, wrong," is a denominative verb formed from the adjective ἄδικος, ἄδικον, "unjust." Likewise, the verbs $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{\alpha} ω$, $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{\gamma} σω$, ἐτίμησα, τετίμηκα, τετίμημαι, ἐτιμήθην, "honor," and νικάω, νικήσω, ἐνίκησα, νενίκηκα, νενίκημαι, ἐνικήθην, "win; conquer," are denominative verbs formed from the nouns $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{\gamma}$ and $\nu \acute{\iota} κ γ$. The verb ἀδικέω can be used either transitively or intransitively.

The adjective $\mathring{a}\lambda o\gamma o\varsigma$, $\mathring{a}\lambda o\gamma ov$, "unreasoning, unreasonable, irrational," is formed from the noun $\lambda \acute{o}\gamma o\varsigma$ (in the sense "reason") with alpha privative prefixed.

The adjective $\beta \acute{a}\varrho \beta a \varrho o s$, $\beta \acute{a}\varrho \beta a \varrho o v$, "non-Greek, foreign," is an onomatopoeic word which imitates the sound of unintelligible foreign speech. It lacks the negative connotations of the English derivative "barbaric." Although not compounded, this is a two-ending adjective.

The noun βlos , βlov , δ , "life, means of living," can refer either to a person's manner of life (e.g., a good life as opposed to a bad one) or to the means by which one supports oneself, one's livelihood.

The noun $\delta \alpha l \mu \omega \nu$, $\delta \alpha l \mu \omega \nu \sigma \varsigma$, δ or $\dot{\eta}$, "god, goddess, divine being," can refer to a god or goddess but more frequently denotes an unnamed and unspecified divine power: e.g., $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu \delta \alpha l \mu \omega \nu \nu$, "with (the help of) a god." This noun can also refer to the power which controls one's fortune or destiny. In certain contexts, $\delta \alpha l \mu \omega \nu \varepsilon \varsigma$ can also be divine beings inferior to the gods, or the deified souls of dead men.

The adjective $\tilde{\epsilon}\chi\theta\varrho\delta\varsigma$, $\tilde{\epsilon}\chi\theta\varrho\delta$, $\tilde{\epsilon}\chi\theta\varrho\delta$, "hated, hostile; (as substantive) enemy," can have either the passive meaning "hated" or the active meaning "hostile (= hating)," or both. It refers to ill-will directed personally at other human beings or at institutions (e.g., democracy). Contrast the adjective $\pi o\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\mu\iota o\varsigma$, $\pi o\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\epsilon} a$, $\pi o\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\mu\iota o\nu$, which refers to people who are at war with others. One's personal enemies are one's $\hat{\epsilon}\chi\theta\varrho o\ell$; the enemies one meets in battle are $\pi o\lambda \hat{\epsilon}\mu\iota o\iota$.

The adjective $\check{\epsilon}\mu\pi\epsilon\iota\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, $\check{\epsilon}\mu\pi\epsilon\iota\varrho\sigma\nu$, "experienced in, acquainted with," is a compound formed from the noun $\pi\epsilon\bar{\iota}\varrho\alpha$, $\pi\epsilon\iota\varrho\bar{\alpha}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "trial, attempt, experience," with the preposition $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ prefixed. This adjective takes a noun in the genitive case to indicate the area in which someone is experienced: e.g., $\pi\sigma\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\mu\sigma\nu$ $\check{\epsilon}\mu\pi\epsilon\iota\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, "experienced in (of) war." The abstract noun $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\pi\epsilon\iota\varrho\iota\bar{\alpha}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "experience, practice" (cf., e.g., $\varphi\iota\lambda\iota\bar{\alpha}$), takes the same construction.

The verb ποιέω, ποιήσω, ἐποίησα, πεποίηκα, πεποίημαι, ἐποιήθην has the two distinct meanings "make" and "do." A poet, ποιητής, is a "maker" of poetry. In the sense "make," ποιέω can appear in either the active or the middle voice: e.g., εἰρήνην ποιεῖν, "to make peace (for others)"; εἰρήνην ποιεῖσθαι, "to make peace (for oneself)." It can take a double accusative: ποιεῖν τὸν ἀδελφὸν σοφόν, "to make the brother wise." In the sense "do" this verb can also take a double accusative (cf. πράττω): κακὰ ποιεῖν τὸν ἀδελφόν, "to do bad things to the brother." An adverb can appear instead of the adjective: κακῶς ποιεῖν τὸν ἀδελφόν, "to do bad(ly) to the brother." The verb can also be used intransitively: εδ ποιεῖ, "He/She does well."

In the middle voice $\pi o \iota \acute{e} \omega$ is often used with a verbal noun to express the idea of the verb from which the noun is derived:

θυσίαν ἐποιοῦντο.

They were making a sacrifice.

The noun $\tau\varrho\delta\pi\sigma\varsigma$, $\tau\varrho\delta\pi\sigma\upsilon$, δ , "way, manner; character," can refer to the way or means by which something is done, the manner in which a person does it, or the character of a person (as expressed by his manner of acting). The root meaning of this noun is "turn" or "turning": cf. the English phrases "turn of mind," "turn of speech."

The preposition $\delta\pi\ell\varrho$ can take either the genitive or the accusative case. With the genitive it has the two distinct meanings "over, above" (of fixed position) and "on behalf of." The second meaning developed out of the idea of covering protectively. With the accusative case $\delta\pi\ell\varrho$ means "over, beyond" with reference either to motion or to measure.

- 5. The Athenians, on the one hand, without the other Greeks were falling/used to fall/were being drawn up/used to be drawn up into battle order; for the latter wished to stay in their houses if the former were ever called out to war.  - (b) $\beta\lambda\dot{\alpha}\psi or\tau \epsilon\zeta$ is a future participle, M pl. nom.: circumstantial participle, introduced by $\dot{\omega}\zeta$, showing purpose not vouched for by the speaker; future tense to show subsequent time; agrees in gender, number, and case with $\beta\dot{\alpha}\varrho\beta\alpha\varrho\sigma\iota$.
- 6. Sokrates was composing/used to compose/was making/used to make his words/speeches about the nature of the good, with the result that he educated thoroughly all the souls of the prudent. If only I, (upon) leaving behind my daughter, could/might lead this man out of the city.
 - (a) $\partial \xi \epsilon \delta i \delta \alpha \xi \epsilon$ is a orist indicative: indicative in a clause of actual result; a orist tense to show past time and simple aspect.
 - (b) ποιήσᾶς is an aorist participle, M sing. nom.: circumstantial participle, introduced by καίπερ, used concessively; aorist tense to show simple aspect; agrees in gender, number and case with the subject of τελευτήσει.

UNIT 11

89. THE IMPERATIVE MOOD

In addition to the indicative, subjunctive, and optative moods, Greek has a fourth mood, the imperative mood, which is used to give commands. The tense of the imperative mood, like that of the subjunctive, the optative, and the infinitive, shows aspect only: the present imperative indicates progressive/repeated aspect; the aorist, simple aspect. The rarely used perfect imperative shows completed aspect, and its forms are given only in the Appendix.

Like the other moods, the Greek imperative has person (but ONLY second and third person) and number. The second person corresponds to our English imperative: "Sit down and learn this!" The third person imperatives can be expressed in English by using the helping verb "let": "Let him/her/it/them do it!" There are no first person forms of the imperative. In the first person plural, the idea of "Let us do something!" is expressed by the hortatory subjunctive; cf. Section 50.

The imperative uses the same tense stems as all the other moods; it simply puts different endings on these stems. See Section 89.10, page 311, for a chart showing all of these endings.

1. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

To form the present imperative active add to the present tense stem the following endings:

	S	P
2	-€	-ετε
3	-ετω	-οντων

Thus the forms of the present imperative active of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

	S		P
2	παίδευ ς	be educating/ educate	παιδεύ ετε	be educating/ educate
3	παιδεν έτω	let him /her/it be educating/ educate	παιδευ όντων	let them be educating/ educate

- Observations: (1) The second person plural, present imperative active is identical in form with the second person plural, present indicative active. The third person plural, present imperative active is identical in form with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active. Context usually allows one to distinguish these forms.
 - (2) The accent of the imperative is recessive and can go back onto the prefix when necessary: e.g., $\partial \pi \delta \lambda \bar{v} \varepsilon$.

2. PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present imperative middle/passive, add to the present tense stem the following middle/passive endings:

	S	P
2	-ov $<$ *- $arepsilon$ o	-εσθε
3	-εσθω	-επθων

Thus the forms of the present imperative middle/passive of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$ are as follows:

S 2	παιδεύ ου	Mid.: be having/have (someone) educated Pass.; be being educated/be educated
3	παιδεν έσθω	Mid.: let him/her/it be having/have (someone) educated
		Pass.: let him/her/it be being educated/be educated
P 2	παιδεύ εσθε	Mid.: be having/have (someone) educated Pass.: be being educated/be educated
3	παιδενέσθων	Mid.: let them be having/have (someone) educated
		Pass.: let them be being educated/be educated

SECTION 89 307

Observation: As in the active voice, so in the middle/passive, the second person plural imperative and indicative forms are identical.

3. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE OF CONTRACTED VERBS

The present imperative active of contracted verbs adds the endings of the present imperative active to the present tense stem of the verbs. The vowels of the stem and the endings contract according to the rules given in Sections 73, 74, and 84. In the forms which are given below, the uncontracted forms are given in parentheses for reference. The contractions do not occur, of course, in the aorist imperative of these verbs.

	S		P
2	τίμ ᾶ	(τίμαε)	τ ιμ ᾶτε	(τ ῖμάετε)
	τ ι μ άτω	(τ ι μαέτω)	τ ι μ ώντων	(τ ῖμαόντων)
2	ποίει	(ποίεε)	ποι εῖτε	(ποιέετε)
	ποιείτω	(ποιεέτω)	ποι ούντων	(ποιεόντων)
2	δήλου δηλούτω	(δήλοε) (δηλοέτω)	$\delta \eta \lambda$ οῦτε $\delta \eta \lambda$ ούντων	(δηλόετε) (δηλοόντων)

Observations: (1) Distinguish carefully between the second person singular, present imperative active forms and the third person singular, present indicative active forms of the contracted verbs:

IMPERATIVE		INDICATIVE
$ au t \mu ar{a}$	$(\tau^t \mu a \varepsilon)$	$ auar\iota\mu ilde a$	(τῖμάει)
ποίει	$(\pi o i \epsilon \epsilon)$	$\pi o \iota arepsilon ilde{\iota}$	(ποιέει)
δήλου	(δήλοε)	δηλοῖ	(δηλόει)

- (2) In the second person plural all present imperative active forms are identical with those of the indicative: $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \tilde{\alpha} \tau \varepsilon$, $\pi o \iota \varepsilon \bar{\iota} \tau \varepsilon$, $\delta \eta \lambda o \tilde{\iota} \tau \varepsilon$.
- (3) In the third person plural, present imperative active the forms of the imperative are identical with those of the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active: τ̄ιμώντων, ποιούντων, δηλούντων.

4. PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE OF CONTRACTED VERBS

The present imperative middle/passive of contracted verbs adds the endings of the present imperative middle/passive to the present tense stem of the verbs. The final vowel of the stem and the initial vowel of the endings contract according to the rules of contraction given in Sections 73, 74, and 84. In the forms which are given below, the uncontracted forms are given in parentheses. The contractions do not occur in the agrist tense of these verbs.

	S		P
2 3	τ ῖμ ὧ τ ῖμ ἀσθω	(τῖμάου) (τῖμαέσθω)	$ au ar\iota \mu$ ᾶσθ $oldsymbol{\epsilon}$ $ au ar\iota \mu$ ᾶσθων	(τῖμάεσθε) (τῖμαέσθων)
2 3	ποι οῦ ποι είσθω	(ποιέου) (ποιεέσθω)	ποι είσθε ποι είσθων	(ποιέεσθε) (ποιεέσθων)
2	δηλοῦ	(δηλόου)	$\delta\eta\lambda$ οῦσθ ϵ	(δηλόεσθε)
3	$\delta\eta\lambda$ ούσ $oldsymbol{\Theta}$ ω	(δηλοέσθω)	$\delta\eta\lambda$ ούσ $oldsymbol{ heta}$ ων	(δηλοέσθων)

Observations: (1) The second person singular, present imperative middle/passive of $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$ is the same as the first person singular, present indicative and subjunctive active: $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$ (imperative) and from $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$ (indicative and subjunctive).

- (2) In the second person plural, all present imperative middle/ passive forms are identical with those of the indicative: $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \tilde{\alpha} \sigma \theta \varepsilon$, $\pi o \iota \varepsilon \bar{\iota} \sigma \theta \varepsilon$, $\delta \eta \lambda o \tilde{\iota} \sigma \theta \varepsilon$.
- (3) Distinguish carefully the forms $\delta\eta\lambda o\tilde{v}$ (second person singular, present imperative middle/passive) and $\delta\dot{\eta}\lambda ov$ (second person singular, present imperative active).

5. FIRST AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

To form the first agrist imperative active, add to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem the following endings:

	S	P
2	- 0 V	-ατε
3	-C(T(x)	-00700

Thus the forms of the first agrist imperative active of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \acute{v} \omega$ are as follows:

	S		P
2	παίδευσ ον	educate	παιδεύσ ατε	educate
3	παιδευσ άτω	let him/her/it	παιδευσ άντων	let them educate		educate

- Observations: (1) The third person plural agrist imperative active is identical in form with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the agrist participle active.
 - (2) Note the difference in accent between the imperative $d\pi \delta \lambda \bar{v} \sigma \sigma v$ and the neuter nom./acc./voc. singular of the future active participle $d\pi \sigma \lambda \bar{v} \sigma \sigma v$.

6. FIRST AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE

To form the first agrist imperative middle, add the following endings to the unaugmented agrist active and middle tense stem:

	S	P
2	-αι	-ασθε
3	-ασθω	-ασθων

Thus the first agrist imperative middle forms of παιδεύω are as follows:

S	2	παίδευσαι	have (someone) educated
	3	παιδενσ άσθω	let him/her/it have (someone) educated
P	2	παιδεύσ ασθε	have (someone) educated
	3	παιδευσ άσθων	let them have someone educated

Observation: Note that the second person singular ending of the aorist imperative middle counts as short for purposes of accentuation.

Observe carefully the different accents on three very similar forms:

παίδευσαι second person singular, agrist imperative middle παιδεύσαι third person singular, agrist optative active agrist infinitive active

7. SECOND AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

To form the second agrist imperative active, add the endings of the present imperative active to the unaugmented second agrist active and middle tense stem. Thus the forms of the second agrist imperative active of $\lambda\epsilon\ell\pi\omega$ are as follows:

UNIT 11

S P
2 λίπε λίπετε
3 λιπέτω λιπόντων

Observation: The third person plural, second agrist imperative is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the second agrist participle active.

8. SECOND AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE

To form the second agrist imperative middle, add the endings of the present imperative middle/passive to the unaugmented second agrist active and middle tense stem. The resulting form is middle only; the agrist imperative passive of all verbs is formed from Principal Part VI.

Thus the forms of the second agrist imperative middle of $\lambda \epsilon l \pi \omega$ are as follows:

S P
2 λιποῦ λίπεσθε
3 λιπέσθω λιπέσθων

Observation: The accent on the second person singular, second aorist imperative middle is NOT recessive; it is always a circumflex on the ultima.

9. AORIST IMPERATIVE PASSIVE

To form the agrist imperative passive, add to the unaugmented agrist passive tense stem the following endings:

S P 2 -ηθι, -ητι -ητε 3 -ητω -εντων

παιδευθέντων

Thus the forms of the agrist imperative passive of $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\acute{v}\omega$ are as follows:

let them be educated

S 2 παιδεύθητι be educated
 3 παιδευθήτω let him/her/it be educated
 P 2 παιδεύθητε be educated

SECTION 90 311

Observations: (1) The original ending of the second person singular, a orist imperative passive was $-\eta\theta\iota$. Dissimilation of aspirates causes the $-\theta$ - to change to a $-\tau$ - when the ending is added to a stem ending in an aspirate (φ, χ, θ) . Since most a orist passive tense stems end in an aspirate, the ending $-\eta\tau\iota$ is more common than $-\eta\theta\iota$. Compare $\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\rho\theta\eta\tau\iota$ with $\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\beta\eta\theta\iota$.

(2) Note the $-\varepsilon$ - of the third person plural ending in contrast to the $-\eta$ - of the other forms. The third person plural, agrist imperative passive is identical in form with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the agrist participle passive.

10. ENDINGS OF THE IMPERATIVE

	PRESENT IMPER. ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPER. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	FIRST AORIST IMPER. ACTIVE	FIRST AORIST IMPER. MIDDLE	AORIST IMPER. PASSIVE
S 2	-€	-ou	-ov	-αι	-ηθι, -ητι
3	-ετω	-εσθω	-ατω	-ασθω	-ητω
P 2	-ετε	-εσθε	-ατε	-ασθε	-ητε
3	-οντων	-εσθων	-αντων	-ασθων	-εντων

Observation: Remember that the second agrist imperative active and middle forms use the same endings as the present imperative active and middle/passive.

90. COMMANDS AND PROHIBITIONS

Commands are expressed in the first person (plural) by the subjunctive in the second person by the imperative in the third person by the imperative.

άλλ' ἄγε διδάσκωμεν τοὺς νεāνίας. But come on, let's teach the young men.

άλλ' ἄγε δίδασκε τοὺς νεᾶνίᾶς. But come on, teach the young men.

άλλ' ἄγε δή σοφὸς διδασκέτω τοὺς νεᾶνίᾶς. But come on, let a wise man be teaching the young men.

άλλ' ἄγε δὴ σοφὸς διδαξάτω τοὺς νε \bar{a} νί \bar{a} ς. But come on, let a wise man teach the young men.

When a command involves two actions, one of them is usually expressed by a participle.

τὴν οἰκίᾶν λιπών, δήλωσον ταῦτα τῷ ἐκκλησίᾳ. Upon leaving your house, make these things clear to the assembly. Leave your house and make these things clear to the assembly.

Prohibitions (negative commands) are all introduced by $\mu\dot{\eta}$. The first person prohibition, like the first person command, uses the hortatory subjunctive; tense shows progressive/repeated or simple aspect. In the second and third persons, prohibitions with progressive/repeated aspect use $\mu\dot{\eta}$ with a present imperative; prohibitions with simple aspect use $\mu\dot{\eta}$ with an aorist subjunctive, the prohibitive subjunctive. In the second and third persons, the aorist imperative with $\mu\dot{\eta}$ is sometimes found.

Prohibitions are summarized in the following chart:

PERSON	PROGRESSIVE REPEATED	SIMPLE
1 μή	+ Present Subjunctive (Hortatory)	$\mu \acute{\eta} + ext{Aorist Subjunctive} \ ext{(Hortatory)}$
2 μή	+ Present Imperative	$\mu \acute{\eta} + ext{Aorist Subjunctive} \ ext{(Prohibitive)}$
3 μή	+ Present Imperative	$\mu \acute{\eta} + ext{Aorist Subjunctive} \ ext{(Prohibitive)}$
	μη λύωμεν τούς στρατιώτας. Let us not be freeing the soldi Let us not free the soldiers.	(Hortatory subjunctive)
	μη λύσωμεν τοὺς στρατιώτᾶς. Let us not free the soldiers.	. (Hortatory Subjunctive) μὴ λύετε τοὺς στρατιώτᾶς. (Present Do not be freeing the soldiers. Imperative) Do not free the soldiers.

 μὴ λύσητε τοὺς στρατιώτᾶς. (Prohibitive Do not free the soldiers.

Like the hortatory and prohibitive subjunctive, the imperative can stand in the apodosis of a future more vivid conditional sentence in place of the future indicative.

ἐἀν σωθ $\tilde{\eta}$ ή πόλις, θῦσον τοῖς δαίμοσιν. If the city is saved, sacrifice to the divinities.

91. FORMS OF THE GREEK VERB

Now that the imperative has been learned, it is convenient to give a chart of the forms of the Greek verb. In the chart which follows, all moods and tenses can be found in the active, middle and passive voice. Consult the chart in Section 92 for a summary of the verb which shows which of the principal parts is used to form each of the moods and tenses in the various voices.

Note: Contraction of vowels occurs in the present (e.g., τίμάω, ποιέω, δηλόω) and in the future active and middle (e.g., $\dot{a}\gamma\gamma\varepsilon\lambda\bar{\omega}$). Except for the optative active, contracted verbs use the same endings as uncontracted verbs. The contractions are made according to the charts in Sections 73, 74, and 84.

The future optative and infinitive are given in Unit 16.
 Forms in square brackets are found in the Appendix only.

93. DEPONENT VERBS: MIDDLE DEPONENTS

Verbs which lack an active voice, and which show only middle or passive forms, are called deponent verbs. They will be distinguished by their Principal Parts.

Here is an example of a middle deponent, all of whose Principal Parts are in the middle voice:

δέχομαι, δέξομαι, έδεξάμην, ——, δέδεγμαι, ——, "receive; welcome"

Principal Parts I and V, which are middle/passive in form, are not used passively in this verb. Principal Part IV, which gives only active forms, and Principal Part VI, which is passive only, are lacking.

It is not known why Greek expresses certain actions in the middle voice only, i.e., with deponent verbs, nor is there any formula for determining which verb will be deponent. Rather, it will be clear from the Principal Parts, all of which must always be learned, which verbs are deponent.

Since middle deponent verbs lack an active voice in contrast to which the middle can have the force of "having something done" or "doing something for oneself," A MIDDLE DEPONENT IS TRANSLATED BY AN ENGLISH ACTIVE VERB WITH NO ADDITIONAL MIDDLE FORCE.

τοὺς ξένους δεχόμεθα. We welcome the strangers. τοὺς ξένους ἐδεξάμεθα. We welcomed the strangers.

94. PASSIVE DEPONENTS

Some deponent verbs have, instead of an aorist middle, an aorist passive which, like all other forms of these verbs, is translated by an English active. These verbs are called passive deponents. Here is an example:

βούλομαι, βουλήσομαι, —, , βεβούλημαι, έβουλήθην, "want" βιβλίον γράψαι βουλόμεθα. We want to write a book.

βιβλίον γράψαι βουλησόμεθα. We shall want to write a book.

βιβλίον γράψαι έβουλήθημεν. We wanted to write a book.

95. PARTIAL DEPONENTS

Some verbs lack an active voice in one or more tenses but not throughout the verbal system. Such verbs are called partial deponents. Their Principal Parts will show which tenses are deponent. Here is an example:

ἀκούω, ἀκούσομαι, ἤκουσα, ἀκήκοα, —, ἠκούσθην, "hear"

Principal Part II of this verb is in the middle voice rather than the active voice, but this difference CANNOT be expressed in translation: ἀκούομεν (first person plural, present indicative active) means "we hear"; ἀκουσόμεθα (first person plural, future indicative middle) means "we shall hear." But ἠκούσθημεν (first person plural, aorist indicative passive) has the normal passive meaning "we were heard."

96. THE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό

The forms of the adjective/pronoun $\alpha \vec{v} \tau \delta \varsigma$, $\alpha \vec{v} \tau \acute{\eta}$, $\alpha \vec{v} \tau \acute{\sigma}$ are as follows:

	M	\mathbf{F}	N
Nom. S	αὐτός	$a v au \eta$	$a \vec{v} au \phi$
Gen.	$a \vec{v} \tau o \tilde{v}$	$\alpha \mathring{v} \tau \tilde{\eta} \varsigma$	$a v au o ilde{v}$
Dat.	$a v au ilde{\psi}$	$lpha$ ὖ $ au ilde{\eta}$	$a v au ilde{arphi}$
Acc.	αὐτόν	αὖτήν	αὖτό
Nom. P	αὐτοί	a v au a l	αὖτά
Gen.	$a \vec{v} \tau \tilde{\omega} v$	$a v ilde{\omega} v$	αὐτῶν
Dat.	αὐτοῖς	$a v a ar{\imath}arsigma$	$a\dot{v} au o ilde{\iota} arsigma$
Acc.	αὖτούς	$a v au ar{a}arsigma $	αὖτά

The endings are the same as those of $\dot{\epsilon}$ $\kappa \epsilon \bar{i} \nu o \varsigma$, $\dot{\epsilon}$ $\kappa \epsilon \bar{i} \nu \eta$, $\dot{\epsilon}$ $\kappa \epsilon \bar{i} \nu o$.

According to its use in sentences, this word has three different meanings:

1. As an adjective in the attributive position it means "same":

δ αὐτὸς ποιητής the same poet τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἔργοις by the same deeds

- 2. In the predicate position, or when standing alone in the nominative case, it functions as an intensive and means "-self." It agrees in gender, number, and case with the word to which it refers, whether that word is expressed in the sentence or only implied. In English translation, the intensive must also be given a person according to context.
 - (a) δ ποιητής αὐτός αὐτὸς δ ποιητής the poet himself
 - (b) οἱ ποιηταὶ αὐτοἱ
 αὐτοὶ οἱ ποιηταί
 the poets themselves
 - (c) ἐπαιδεύσαμεν αὐτὸν τὸν "Ομηρον. We educated Homer himself.
 - (d) αὐτὸς ἔγραψε τὸ βιβλίον.He himself wrote the book.
 - (e) αὐτὴ ἔγραψε τὸ βιβλίον.
 She herself wrote the book.
 - (f) αὐτὴ ἔγραψα τὸ βιβλίον.
 I myself wrote the book.

In sentences (d), (e), and (f) above, the intensive agrees with the unexpressed subject of the verb and is translated accordingly.

3. Standing by itself as a pronoun in the genitive, dative, and accusative cases, $\alpha \dot{v} \tau \dot{o}_{\zeta}$ serves as the personal pronoun of the third person:

ἐπαιδεύσαμεν αὐτόν. We educated him.

αὐτὴν πεπαιδεύκαμεν. We have educated her.

αὐτοῖς αἶγας ἐπέμψαμεν. We sent goats to them. We sent them goats.

In the nominative case, where a third-person verb form indicates that the subject is "he, she, it" or "they," this personal pronoun is not separately expressed:

ἔγραψαν τὸ βιβλίον.
They wrote the book.

SECTION 97 319

Remember that any form of $a\vec{v}\tau\delta\varsigma$ standing by itself in the nominative is an intensive:

αὐτοὶ ἔγραψαν τὸ βιβλίον. They themselves wrote the book.

97. TEMPORAL CLAUSES

action:

Temporal clauses are dependent clauses introduced by temporal conjunctions (e.g., "after," "while," "until") and indicating a relationship in time between the action of the dependent clause and that of the main or independent clause.

With respect to the action of the main clause, the action of the temporal clause can be prior, simultaneous, or subsequent.

Prior action: After he wrote the book, he taught the citizens.

(The writing precedes the teaching.)

Simultaneous When he was writing the book, he taught the citizens.

(Writing and teaching go on simultaneously.)

Subsequent He was teaching the citizens until he finished the book. action: (The finishing followed the teaching.)

action. (The limining personal the continues)

The action of the main clause can be past (as above), present, or future.

This Section will present temporal clauses which show prior and simultaneous action in various times.

Each type of temporal clause will be presented together with the type of main or independent clause with which it is associated.

1. PAST DEFINITE TEMPORAL CLAUSE

Verb of temporal clause: past tense of the indicative (negative ov)

Verb of main clause: past tense of the indicative

(negative $o\vec{v}$)

Temporal conjunctions:

Prior action: ἐπεί, ἐπειδή, "after, when"

+ past tense of the indicative (usually aorist)

Simultaneous action: ὅτε, "when"

+ aorist or imperfect indicative

Here are examples of past definite temporal clauses with prior action and with simultaneous action:

Prior action: ἐπεὶ τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν, τοὺς πολίτᾶς ἐδίδαξεν.

After he wrote the book, he taught the citizens.

έπεὶ εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπέμφθη, τοὺς πολίτας ἐδίδαξεν. When he was sent to the island, he taught the citizens.

After he was sent to the island, he taught the citizens.

Simultaneous action:

ὅτε τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραφεν, τοψς πολίτᾶς ἐδίδαξεν. When he was writing the book, he taught the citizens.

ὅτε τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν, τοψς πολίτ $\bar{a}ς$ ἐδίδαξεν. When he wrote the book, he taught the citizens.

Remember that the conjunctions $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\dot{\iota}$ and $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\epsilon\iota\delta\dot{\eta}$ can also mean "since, because" and introduce causal clauses (cf. Vocabulary Note to Unit 3).

The remaining three types of temporal clauses here presented correspond to the protases of three types of conditional sentences; the main clauses of sentences with these temporal clauses correspond to the apodoses of conditional sentences (cf. Section 41.7).

98. GENITIVE ABSOLUTE

The circumstantial participles already introduced agree with nouns or pronouns, expressed or implied, whose case is determined, separately, by their function in a sentence (cf. Section 70).

θύων δ ίερεὺς ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου τῖμᾶται.

Sacrificing, the priest is honored by the people.

λυθέντες ὅμως τοῖς θεοῖς οὐ θύομεν.

Released, nevertheless we do not sacrifice to the gods.

Although released, nevertheless we do not sacrifice to the gods.

In the first example the participle agrees with the subject of the sentence, δ $i\epsilon\varrho\epsilon\dot{\nu}\varsigma$. In the second example the participle agrees with the subject of the verb $\theta\dot{\nu}o\mu\epsilon\nu$, which is not separately expressed.

SECTION 98 323

To describe a circumstance involving a person or thing not otherwise connected with the rest of the sentence, a phrase consisting of a noun or pronoun (and any modifiers) plus a participle (and any objects) can be put in the genitive case.

This usage is called the genitive absolute. The term "absolute" indicates that the noun or pronoun in the genitive absolute has no direct grammatical relationship to any other word in the sentence. Objects of the participle retain their usual case.

θύοντος τοῦ ἰερέως αἶγα, $\Delta \eta \mu o \sigma \theta \acute{e} v \eta \varsigma$ $\delta \pi \eth$ τοῦ $\delta \acute{\eta} \mu o v$ $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \tilde{a} \tau a \iota$.

The priest sacrificing a goat, Demosthenes is honored by the people.

λυθέντων τῶν φίλων, ὅμως τοῖς θεοῖς οὐ θύομεν. Our friends released, we nevertheless do not sacrifice to the gods.

In these examples the noun in the genitive case, modified by a participle, is separate from the rest of the sentence: the genitive absolute states a circumstance which has no grammatical connection with the rest of the sentence. The closest English equivalent to a genitive absolute is, as in the examples above, a nominative absolute.

Like other circumstantial participles, the genitive absolute can have a tempo-ral, concessive, or causal relation to the main verb. Adverbs or other words accompanying either the participle or the main verb can make this relationship clearer.

Genitives absolute can often be expressed by clauses in English: e.g., "while the priest was sacrificing..."; "although our friends were released" τῆς πόλεως σωθείσης, οἱ ἱερεῖς ἔθν̄σαν. The city saved, the priests sacrificed. When the city was saved, the priests sacrificed. (temporal) Although the city was saved, the priests sacrificed. (concessive) Because the city was saved, the priests sacrificed. (causal)

Context will help to determine meaning.

The genitive absolute can also stand in place of the protasis of a conditional sentence. The negative is $\mu\dot{\eta}$; that of the other genitives absolute is $o\dot{v}$. The two sentences below are equivalent in meaning.

τῆς πόλεως μὴ σωθείσης, οὖ θΰσομεν.
The city not saved, we shall not sacrifice.
ἐἀν ἡ πόλις μὴ σωθῆ, οὖ θὖσομεν.
If the city is not saved, we shall not sacrifice.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀκούω, ἀκούσομαι, ἤκουσα, ἀκήκοα, —, ἦκούσθην, "hear; be spoken of," takes, in the sense "hear," an accusative of the thing heard and/or a genitive of the person heard:

ταῦτ' ἀκούομεν.
 Σωκράτους ἀκούομεν.
 ταῦτα Σωκράτους ἀκούομεν.
 We hear these things.
 We hear Sokrates.
 We hear these things from Sokrates.

εύτα Σωκράτους ἀκούομεν. We hear these things from Sokrates.

This verb is also used, in the active voice, in the sense "be spoken of"; it describes someone's reputation and can be accompanied by a genitive of personal agent:

κακῶς ἀκούομεν.
 We are spoken badly of.
 (We have a bad reputation.)
 κακῶς ἀκούομεν ὑπὸ πάντων.
 We are spoken badly of by all.

All speak badly of us.

The verb βάλλω, βαλῶ, ἔβαλον, βέβληκα, βέβλημαι, ἐβλήθην means either "throw" or "hit (with a thrown object)" and takes a direct object either of the thing thrown or of the person or thing hit:

 $\lambda \ell \theta o v_{\mathcal{S}} = \ell \theta \delta \lambda o \mu \epsilon v.$ We threw stones. $\tau o v_{\mathcal{S}} = \pi o \lambda \epsilon \mu \ell o v_{\mathcal{S}} = \ell \theta \delta \lambda o \mu \epsilon v.$ We hit the enemy.

τούς πολεμίους λίθοις ἐβάλομεν. We hit the enemy with stones.

326 UNIT 11

The form $\beta\acute{a}\lambda\lambda\omega$ comes from * $\beta\acute{a}\lambda\dot{\omega}$. Principal Parts II and III show more clearly the root, $\beta a\lambda$ -; the double lambda appears only in the present tense stem. Note the contracted future: $\beta a\lambda\tilde{\omega} < \beta a\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega < *\beta a\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$. Compare $\dot{a}\gamma\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\omega$, $\dot{a}\gamma\gamma\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\tilde{\omega}$.

The verb $\beta o \delta \lambda o \mu a \iota$, $\beta o v \lambda \dot{\eta} \sigma o \mu a \iota$, —, $\beta \epsilon \beta o \delta \lambda \eta \mu a \iota$, $\dot{\epsilon} \beta o v \lambda \dot{\eta} \theta \eta v$, "want," expressed originally a positive desire, while $\dot{\epsilon} \theta \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \omega$, "wish, be willing," expressed a lack of objection. But the meanings of the two verbs came to overlap. Both can take an object infinitive.

Although it does not have a monosyllabic stem, $\gamma v v \eta$, $\gamma v v \alpha \iota \kappa \delta \varsigma$, η , "woman; wife," is accented as if it had one: the accent is on the penult in the accusative singular $(\gamma v v \alpha \tilde{\iota} \kappa \alpha \varsigma)$ and in the plural nominative/vocative $(\gamma v v \alpha \tilde{\iota} \kappa \alpha \varsigma)$ and accusative $(\gamma v v \alpha \tilde{\iota} \kappa \alpha \varsigma)$; in the genitive and dative singular and plural the accent is on the ultima, e.g., $\gamma v v \alpha \iota \kappa \tilde{\omega} v$. The vocative singular is $\gamma \dot{v} v \alpha \iota$ (the stem $\gamma v v \alpha \iota \kappa$ - without the final kappa).

The adverb $\dot{\epsilon}\nu\tau\alpha\tilde{\nu}\theta\alpha$ can have either a spatial or a temporal meaning.

Do not confuse the noun κάλλος, κάλλους, τό, "beauty," with the adjective καλός, καλή, καλόν.

Note that the dative plural of $\kappa\tilde{\eta}\varrho v\xi$, $\kappa\tilde{\eta}\varrho\bar{v}\kappa o\varsigma$, δ , "herald," is $\kappa\tilde{\eta}\varrho v\xi\iota(v)$ with a short upsilon.

In the verb $\lambda \alpha \mu \beta \acute{\alpha} \nu \omega$, $\lambda \acute{\eta} \psi o \mu \alpha \iota$, $\ddot{\epsilon} \lambda \alpha \beta o \nu$, $\varepsilon i \lambda \eta \phi \alpha$, $\varepsilon i \lambda \eta \mu \mu \alpha \iota$, $\dot{\epsilon} \lambda \acute{\eta} \phi \theta \eta \nu$, "take," note that the root is $\lambda \alpha \beta$ -. The present is formed by inserting a nasal into this root (a nasal infix) and adding a suffix $-\alpha \nu$ -: $\lambda \alpha \mu \beta \acute{\alpha} \nu \omega$; both nasal infix and suffix appear only in the present tense stem. The long-vowel grade of the root, $\lambda \eta \beta$ -, appears in the future, the perfect active and middle, and in the aorist passive. The second aorist uses the short-vowel grade of the root. The accent on the second person singular, aorist imperative active of this verb is fixed on the ultima: $\lambda \alpha \beta \acute{\epsilon}$ (contrast $\lambda \acute{\iota} \pi \epsilon$). When this form is compounded, however, the accent is recessive: $\dot{\alpha} \pi \acute{\alpha} \lambda \dot{\alpha} \beta \epsilon$. The plural is regular: $\dot{\lambda} \dot{\alpha} \beta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$. The ϵi - of Principal Parts IV and V is part of the perfect tense stem; it is not augmented in the pluperfect: $\epsilon i \lambda \dot{\eta} \phi \eta$, $\epsilon i \lambda \dot{\eta} \phi \iota \iota \iota$, etc. In Most verbs when principal part IV or V begins with $\dot{\epsilon}$ or $\dot{\epsilon} i$ -, the pluperfect is unaugmented. Note also the aspirated perfect. From the physical meaning "take, grab," developed a mental one; cf. "He did not grasp my meaning."

The verb $\pi \acute{a}\sigma \chi \omega$, $\pi \epsilon l \sigma o \mu a \iota$, $\check{\epsilon}\pi a \theta o v$, $\pi \acute{\epsilon}\pi o v \theta a$, ——, "suffer, have (something) done to one," is related to the noun $\pi \acute{a}\theta o \varsigma$, $\pi \acute{a}\theta o v \varsigma$, $\tau \acute{o}$. Like the noun, the verb has both a neutral meaning ("experience, have [something] done to one") and a more common negative meaning ("suffer"). The root of the word appears in the following grades: e-grade $\pi \epsilon v \theta$ -, o-grade $\pi o v \theta$ -, and zero-grade $\pi a \theta$ - $< *\pi v \theta$ -. The present is formed from the zero-grade of the root + the Distinguish carefully between the interrogative adverb $\pi \tilde{\omega} \zeta$, "how?" and the indefinite enclitic adverb $\pi \omega \zeta$, "in any way, in some way."

The noun $\varphi o \nu \epsilon \psi \varsigma$, $\varphi o \nu \epsilon \omega \varsigma$, δ , "murderer, killer," is an agent noun formed with the suffix $-\epsilon \nu \varsigma$. Cf. $\varphi \phi \nu o \varsigma$, $\varphi \phi \nu o \nu$, δ , "murder."

99. -μι VERBS

Instead of having the ending $-\omega$, Principal Part I of a Greek verb can have the ending $-\mu\iota$. Such verbs are called $-\mu\iota$ verbs; and in the moods and tenses formed from Principal Parts I, III, and (sometimes) IV, $-\mu\iota$ verbs differ in conjugation from the $-\omega$ verbs seen thus far. The moods and tenses of the $-\mu\iota$ verbs have exactly the same functions as the moods and tenses of the $-\omega$ verbs; they are simply formed in a different way.

Three of the most common $-\mu \iota$ verbs are:

- (a) δίδωμι, δώσω, ἔδωκα, δέδωκα, δέδομαι, ἐδόθην, "give"
- (b) τίθημι, θήσω, ἔθηκα, τέθηκα, τέθειμαι, ἐτέθην, "put"
- (c) ἴστημι, στήσω, ἔστησα (transitive) or ἔστην (intransitive), ἔστηκα (intransitive), ἔσταμαι, ἐστάθην, "make stand; (intransitive and middle) stand"

The principal parts in boldface are those for which new patterns of conjugation must be learned. The present system of $-\mu\iota$ verbs, except for participles, is presented in this Unit: the present indicative, subjunctive, optative, imperative and infinitive, and the imperfect indicative, in all three voices. The conjugation of the other emphasized forms is given in Unit 13. The principal parts not emphasized are used to form moods and tenses in exactly the same way as the corresponding principal parts of the $-\omega$ verbs.

The participles of the $-\mu\iota$ verbs are presented in Unit 14.

100. PRESENT SYSTEM OF -μι VERBS

In the present system, $-\mu\iota$ verbs differ from $-\omega$ verbs in the endings they use and in having both a long-vowel and a short-vowel grade of the present tense stem. Thus, to conjugate these verbs properly, one must learn what endings to put on what grade of the stem. The two grades of the present tense stem of the three verbs given above are:

VERB	LONG-VOWEL GRADE PRESENT TENSE STEM	SHORT-VOWEL GRADE PRESENT TENSE STEM
$\delta \ell \delta \omega \mu \iota$	$\delta\iota\delta\omega$ -	$\delta\iota\delta o$ -
$ au i heta \eta \mu \iota$	$ au\iota heta\eta$ -	$ au\iota hetaarepsilon$ - ΐστημι	ίστη-	ίστα-

Note that $-\eta$ - is the long vowel grade of both $-\varepsilon$ - and $-\alpha$ -; cf. $\dot{\epsilon}\theta\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\omega/\dot{\eta}\theta\varepsilon\lambda\sigma\nu$; $\dot{\alpha}\delta\iota\kappa\tilde{\omega}/\dot{\eta}\delta\iota\kappa\sigma\nu$.

THE LONG-VOWEL GRADE IS USED ONLY IN THE SINGULAR OF THE PRESENT AND IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE. THE SHORT-VOWEL GRADE IS USED IN ALL OTHER FORMS.

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the indicative active endings of the $-\omega$ verbs with those of the $-\mu\iota$ verbs.

	$PRESENT\ INDICATIVE$	PRESENT INDICATIVE
	ACTIVE	ACTIVE
	- ω VERB ENDINGS	- $\mu \iota$ VERB ENDINGS
S 1	-ω	-μι
2	$-arepsilon \iota arsigma$	-5
3	13-	$-\sigma\iota(v)$
P 1	-ομεν	-μεν
2	-arepsilon auarepsilon	-τ€
3	$-ov\sigma\iota(v)$	-āσι(ν)

Observations: (1) The two sets of endings are most similar in the first and second person plural. In the $-\omega$ verbs, the person markers $-\mu\epsilon\nu$ and $-\tau\epsilon$ are only part of the ending; they are preceded by the thematic vowel. The $-\mu\nu$ verbs use the person markers $-\mu \varepsilon \nu$ and $-\tau \varepsilon$ by themselves as endings. From the presence of the thematic vowel, the endings of the $-\omega$ verbs are called thematic endings, and the $-\omega$ verbs are called thematic verbs. The $-\mu \iota$ verb endings lack the thematic vowel and are called athematic endings. The $-\mu \iota$ verbs themselves are also called athematic verbs.

(2) The ending -μι of the first person singular, present indicative active of athematic verbs has been seen already as a person marker in the present and aorist optative active endings -οιμι and -αιμι.

To form the present indicative active of an athematic verb, add the present active athematic endings to the long-vowel grade of the present tense stem in the singular and to the short-vowel grade of the stem in the plural.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	$STEMS$ $\delta\iota\delta\omega$ - $\delta\iota\delta\sigma$ -	$STEMS$ $ au\iota\theta\eta$ - $ au\iota\theta\varepsilon$ -	STEMS

2	-5	$\delta \ell \delta \omega$ ς	$ au i heta \eta$ ς	ΐστης
3	$-\sigma\iota(v)$	$\delta i\delta \omega$ σι(ν)	$ au\ell heta\eta$ σι(ν)	$\emph{l}\sigma au\eta$ $oldsymbol{\sigma} \iota(oldsymbol{ u})$
P 1	-μεν	δίδομεν	auί $ heta arepsilon$ μεν	ἵσταμεν
2	-τε	$\delta i\delta o au oldsymbol{\epsilon}$	au i heta arepsilon $ au$	ΐστατε
3	-ᾱσι(ν)	$\delta\iota\delta\delta\bar{f \alpha}$ σι(ν)	$ au\iota hetaarepsilonar{f lpha}$ σι(ν)	$i\sigma au ilde{m{lpha}} m{\sigma} extbf{\iota}(m{ u})$

Observation: In the third person plural of $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$, note the contraction of the $-\alpha$ - of the ending with the $-\alpha$ - of the stem and the resulting circumflex accent. There is no contraction in the third person plural forms $\delta\iota\delta\delta\bar{\alpha}\sigma\iota(\nu)$ or $\tau\iota\theta\dot{\epsilon}\bar{\alpha}\sigma\iota(\nu)$.

2. PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the present indicative middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE	PRESENT INDICATIVE
	MIDDLE/PASSIVE	MIDDLE PASSIVE
	THEMATIC ENDINGS	ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	$-o\mu a\iota$	-μαι
2	$-\epsilon\iota/\eta$	-σαι
9		-ται

P 1	$-o\muarepsilon hetalpha$	-μεθα
2	$-arepsilon\sigma hetaarepsilon$	-σθε
3	-ονται	-νται

Observation: The middle/passive athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. They are the same endings as those used in the perfect indicative middle/passive: $\pi \epsilon \pi a l \delta \epsilon v \mu \alpha \iota$, $\pi \epsilon \pi a l \delta \epsilon v \sigma \alpha \iota$, etc.

To form the present indicative middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the present middle/passive athematic endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM διδο-	$STEM$ $ au\iota\thetaarepsilon$ -	STEM ίστα-

2	-σθε	δίδοσθε	τίθεσθε	 ίστα σθε
3	-νται	δίδονται	τίθενται	ΐστανται

Observation: Note that the $-\sigma$ - of the second person singular ending, even though intervocalic, remains.

3. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the imperfect indicative endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	-ov	-v
2	-ες	- $
3	$-\varepsilon(u)$	-
P 1	-ομεν	-µev
2	-arepsilon au arepsilon	-τ ∈
3	-ov	-σαν

Observation: Except for the third person plural ending $-\sigma a \nu$, the imperfect indicative active athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. The $-\sigma a \nu$ is the same person marker that has been seen in such third person plural forms as $\hat{\epsilon} \pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \delta \eta \sigma a \nu$ (a orist indicative passive) and $\pi o \iota o l \eta \sigma a \nu$ (present optative active); it was borrowed from such forms as $\hat{\epsilon} \pi a l \delta \epsilon \nu \sigma a \nu$, where the $-\sigma$ - is, of course, part of the aorist active and middle tense stem.

To form the imperfect indicative active of an athematic verb, add the imperfect indicative active athematic endings to the augmented long-vowel grade of the present tense stem in the singular and to the augmented short-vowel grade of the present tense stem in the plural. (NOTE: For some of the athematic forms a thematic form has been substituted; such thematic forms are printed entirely in boldface in the paradigms and explained in the observations.)

	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEMS διδω- διδο-	$STEMS$ $\tau\iota\theta\eta$ - $\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon$ -	STEMS ἱστη- ἱστα-

Observations: (1) The past indicative augment on a word beginning with a vowel is shown by lengthening the initial vowel. Note carefully the difference in quantity of the initial vowel that distinguishes the imperfect from the present in the first and second person plural of loτημι.

"ίσταμεν, "ίστατε: The long iota shows the past indicative augment of the imperfect.

lσταμεν, lστατε: The short iota shows that the form is unaugmented and therefore present.

(2) Only the imperfect of $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ completely follows the rule given above. In the imperfect of $\tau\ell\theta\eta\mu\iota$ one would have expected the forms $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\ell\theta\eta\varsigma$ and $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\ell\theta\eta$ according to the rule. Instead, for the second and third person singular the verb is given thematic forms, with the second and third person singular, imperfect indicative active thematic endings $-\varepsilon\varsigma$ and $-\varepsilon$ added to the augmented short-vowel grade of the present tense stem; the vowels of the stem and the ending contract to give the forms:

(3) In the imperfect of $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$, thematic forms also replace the original athematic ones:

 $\begin{array}{l} \mathring{\epsilon}\delta (\delta ovv < *\mathring{\epsilon}\delta (\delta oov\\ \mathring{\epsilon}\delta (\delta ov\varsigma < *\mathring{\epsilon}\delta (\delta oe\varsigma\\ \mathring{\epsilon}\delta (\delta ov < *\mathring{\epsilon}\delta (\delta oe\varsigma\\ \end{array})$

4. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the imperfect indicative middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

2	$-arepsilon\sigma hetaarepsilon$	-σθε
3	-0270	-970

Observation: The imperfect indicative middle/passive athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. They are the same endings as those used in the pluperfect indicative middle/passive ἐπεπαιδεύμην, ἐπεπαίδευσο, etc.

To form the imperfect indicative middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the imperfect middle/passive athematic endings to the augmented short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

Observation: As in the active, so in the middle/passive, in the first and second person plural only the length of the initial iota allows one to distinguish between the present and the imperfect of $\emph{iot}\eta\mu\iota$. Compare

5. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

To form the present subjunctive active of an athematic verb, add the usual subjunctive active endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem and contract the vowel of the stem and that of the ending.

	SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE ENDINGS	STEM διδο-	$STEM$ $ au\iota hetaarepsilon$ -	$STEM$ $\delta\sigma auarepsilon$ -
S 1	-ω	$\delta\iota\delta ilde{\omega}$	$ au\iota heta ilde{\omega}$	ίστῶ

3	$-\omega\sigma\iota(v)$	$\delta\iota\delta\tilde{\omega}\sigma\iota(v)$	$ au\iota heta ilde{\omega}\sigma\iota(u)$	$i\sigma au ilde{\omega}\sigma\iota(u)$

Observations: (1) The contraction of $o + \eta$ gives φ in the second and third person singular, NOT the -oı of contracted verbs with stems in -o; contrast $\delta\eta\lambda\delta\tilde{\iota}_{\varsigma} < \delta\eta\lambda\delta\eta\varsigma$.

- (2) Note that the subjunctive of $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ is formed from the stem $l\sigma\tau\epsilon$ NOT the expected $l\sigma\tau\alpha$ -. The contractions are regular.
- (3) A similar contraction between the subjunctive endings and the vowel of the stem, with a circumflex accent on the resulting ultima, occurs in the aorist subjunctive passive, e.g., $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta \tilde{\omega}$, $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta \tilde{\omega}$, $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon v \theta \epsilon \eta \varepsilon$.

6. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present subjunctive middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the usual subjunctive middle/passive endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem and contract the vowels of the stem and the ending.

1	SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE PASSIVE ENDINGS	$STEM \ \delta \iota \delta o$ -	$STEM$ $ au\iota hetaarepsilon$ -	STEM ίστε-

3	$-\eta au a\iota$	$\delta \iota \delta ilde{\omega} au a \iota$	$ au\iota heta ilde{\eta} au a\iota$	ίστῆται
P 1	$-\omega\muarepsilon hetalpha$	διδώμεθα	τιθώμεθα	ίστώμεθα
2	$-\eta\sigma\theta\varepsilon$	$\delta\iota\delta ilde{\omega}\sigma hetaarepsilon$	$ au\iota heta ilde{\eta}\sigma hetaarepsilon$	$i\sigma au ilde{\eta}\sigma hetaarepsilon$
3	$-\omega \nu au lpha \iota$	διδῶνται	$ au\iota heta ilde{\omega} u au a\iota$	ίστῶνται

- Observations: (1) As in the subjunctive active, note that the contraction of $o + \eta$ gives φ NOT $o\iota$, and that the stem of the present subjunctive middle/passive of $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ is once again $l\sigma\tau\epsilon$ NOT the expected $l\sigma\tau\alpha$ -.
 - (2) As with the thematic verbs, the forms of the second person singular, present subjunctive middle/passive are identical with those of the third person singular, present subjunctive active.

7. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the present optative endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	PRESENT OPTATIVE	PRESENT OPTATIVE

P 1	-οιμεν	-ιμεν/-ιημεν
2	-οιτε	-ιτε/-ιητε
3	-0187	-ι€ν/-ιησαν

Observation: Except for the absence of the initial $-\varepsilon$ - or -o-, these endings are the same as those of the aorist optative passive $(-\varepsilon \iota \eta \nu, -\varepsilon \iota \eta \varsigma,$ etc.) or the alternative endings of the present optative active of contracted verbs $(-o\iota \eta \nu, -o\iota \eta \varsigma,$ etc.). These athematic endings consist of an optative suffix (the full-grade $-\iota \eta$ - in the singular, the zero-grade $-\iota$ - and the alternative full-grade $-\iota \eta$ - in the plural) and the person markers $-\nu$, $-\varsigma$, $-\mu \varepsilon \nu$, $-\tau \varepsilon$, $-\varepsilon \nu$ (with the zero grade suffix) $/-\sigma \alpha \nu$ (with the full-grade suffix).

To form the present optative active of an athematic verb, add the present optative active athematic endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

Observation: Except for the second person singular, the present imperative active athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. In the second person singular each verb uses one of the following: the ending $-\theta\iota$ or $-\varepsilon$ on the short vowel grade, or the long-vowel grade of the stem with no ending.

To form the present imperative active of an athematic verb, add the present imperative active athematic endings to the short vowel grade of the stem. The second person singular form must be learned for each verb.

- Observations: (1) The second person singular forms $\delta \ell \delta ov$ and $\tau \ell \theta \varepsilon \iota$ employ the ending $-\varepsilon$ of thematic verbs: cf. $\pi a \ell \delta \varepsilon v \varepsilon$. The ending contracts with the stem: cf. $\delta \eta \lambda ov$, $\pi o \ell \varepsilon \iota$.
 - (2) The second person singular form $l\sigma\tau\eta$ consists of the long-vowel grade of the present tense stem with no ending added.
 - (3) The second person plural, present imperative active is identical in form with the second person plural, present indicative active.
 - (4) The second person singular ending $-\theta\iota$ has been seen as a person marker in the aorist imperative passive ending $-\eta\theta\iota$. It will be used to form imperatives of certain athematic verbs given in later Units.

350 UNIT 12

One verb which introduces fear clauses is:

φοβέομαι, φοβήσομαι, ——, πεφόβημαι, ἐφοβήθην, "fear, be afraid" φοβοῦμαι μὴ λύση τοὺς κακούς.

I am afraid that he may/will free the wicked men.

φοβοῦμαι μὴ οὐ λύη τοὺς ἀγαθούς.

I am afraid that he may/will not free [habitually] the good men.

έφοβούμην μη λύσειε τούς κακούς.

I was afraid that he might/would free the wicked men.

When a fear clause refers to an action contemporaneous with or prior to that of the main verb of fearing, the indicative is used.

φοβοῦμαι μὴ λύει τοὺς κακούς.

I am afraid that he is freeing the wicked men.

 $\varphi \circ \beta \circ \tilde{v} \mu a \iota \mu \eta$ ἔλῦσε τούς κακούς.

I am afraid that he freed the wicked men.

έφοβούμην μη έλυσε τούς κακούς.

I was afraid that he freed the wicked men.

έφοβούμην μή ούκ έλυσε τούς άγαθούς.

I was afraid that he did not free the good men.

Observation: The second person plural, present imperative middle/passive is identical with the second person plural, present indicative middle/passive. Context will help to determine meaning.

11. PRESENT INFINITIVES ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the present infinitive active and middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	THEMATIC	ATHEMATIC
PRESENT ACTIVE	-ειν	-ναι
PRESENT MIDDLE/PASSIVE	$-\varepsilon\sigma\thetalpha\iota$	-σθαι

To form the present infinitives active and middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the appropriate ending to the short vowel grade of the present tense stem.

I	ENDING	STEM διδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ίστα-
PRESENT ACTIVE	-ναι	διδόναι	τιθέναι	ໂστά ναι
PRESENT MIDDLE/PASSIVE	-σθαι	δίδοσθαι	τίθε σθαι	Ιστα σθαι

- Observations: (1) the syllable preceding the infinitive ending -ναι is always accented; hence the non-recessive accent on διδόναι, as in the perfect infinitive active πεπαιδευκέναι and the acrist infinitive passive παιδευθηναι.
 - (2) The present infinitive middle/passive athematic ending differs from the thematic ending only in the absence of the thematic vowel. Note that the accent on the form is recessive.

101. FEAR CLAUSES

After verbs of fearing, a fear clause can serve as an object of the verb. It is introduced by the conjunction $\mu\eta$, which in a fear clause has the meaning "that" or, somewhat archaically, "lest." A fear clause indicating a fear that something may not or might not happen is introduced by $\mu\eta$ oo, "that not."

When the fear clause refers to a subsequent action, the fear clause takes the subjunctive in primary sequence and the optative in secondary sequence; tense indicates aspect only. Fear clauses, like purpose clauses, follow the rules of sequence of moods.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The reciprocal pronoun —, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\omega\nu$, "one another," is found only in the plural in the genitive $(\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\omega\nu)$, the dative $(\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\omega\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\dot{\eta}\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\eta\lambda\alpha\iota$.

From the verb $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\omega$, "write, draw," come the agent noun $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\varepsilon\dot{\nu}\varsigma$, $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\dot{\varepsilon}\omega\varsigma$, δ , "writer, painter" (with the suffix $-\varepsilon\dot{\nu}\varsigma$; cf. $i\varepsilon\varrho\varepsilon\dot{\nu}\varsigma$, $i\pi\pi\varepsilon\dot{\nu}\varsigma$) and the verbal noun $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\iota\varkappa\dot{\eta}$, $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\iota\varkappa\dot{\eta}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "writing, painting" (from $\dot{\eta}$ $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi\iota\varkappa\dot{\eta}$ $\tau\dot{\varepsilon}\chi\nu\eta$; cf. $\dot{\varrho}\eta\tau\varrho\iota\varkappa\dot{\eta}$).

The noun $\delta\eta\mu\iotaουργός$, $\delta\eta\mu\iotaουργοῦ$, δ , "skilled workman," is a compound of the adjective $\delta\eta\mu\iotaος$, $\delta\eta\mu\iotaον$, "public," from $\delta\eta\muος$, $\delta\eta\muον$, δ , "the people" (cf. $\pi\delta\lambda\epsilon\muο\varsigma$ and $\piο\lambda\epsilon\mu\iotaο\varsigma$) and $\epsilon\varrho\gammaον$, $\epsilon\varrho\gammaον$, $\epsilon\varrho\gammaον$, τό, "work, deed." It means a person skilled enough to be a professional and can be applied to any craft including, e.g., bronze-workers, sculptors, doctors. In some cosmologies, there is a $\delta\eta\mu\iota ov\rho\gamma\delta\varsigma$, creator of the world.

In the verb $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\delta \omega \sigma \omega$, $\delta \delta \omega \kappa a$, $\delta \delta \delta \omega \kappa a$, $\delta \delta \delta \omega \mu a \iota$, $\delta \delta \delta \theta \eta \nu$, "give," note the long-vowel grade of the root in Principal Parts I–IV and the short-vowel grade of the root in Principal Parts V and VI. Note that when a present tense has reduplication, the vowel between the repeated consonants is $-\iota$ -; contrast the $-\varepsilon$ - of the reduplication of the perfect. The prefixed verb $\frac{\partial \sigma}{\partial \nu} \delta \delta \omega \mu \iota$ when used in the active voice means such things as "give back, pay (penalties, honors), permit." In the middle, $\frac{\partial \sigma}{\partial \nu} \delta \delta \omega \mu \iota$ can mean "sell." The price for which one sells something can be put in the genitive. This is called the genitive of price and is a special instance of the genitive of value seen with, e.g., $\frac{\partial \delta}{\partial \nu} \delta \omega \nu$.

ἀποδίδονται τὰ βιβλία χρῦσοῦ. They sell the books for gold.

The phrase δίκην διδόναι means "pay a/the penalty":

δίκην δίδωσιν δ ποιητής τῶν ἀδίκως πεπράγμένων.

The poet is paying the penalty for the things which have been done unjustly (i.e., his unjust deeds).

The noun $\ell\pi\sigma\varsigma$, $\ell\pi\sigma\upsilon\varsigma$, $\tau\delta$, "word; (pl., sometimes) epic poetry," is synonymous in many respects with $\lambda\delta\gamma\sigma\varsigma$, $\lambda\delta\gamma\sigma\upsilon$, δ . It, too, can mean things like "speech, story," but it is used more frequently in Attic than $\lambda\delta\gamma\sigma\varsigma$ to mean an "individual word." In the plural, in contrast to other types of poetry, it can mean "epic poetry."

The noun $\ell\varrho\mu\eta\nu\epsilon\dot{\nu}\varsigma$, $\ell\varrho\mu\eta\nu\dot{\epsilon}\omega\varsigma$, δ , "interpreter," is used of a "translator" of foreign languages or of anyone who explains anything.

The noun $\zeta\omega\gamma\varrho\dot{\alpha}\varphi\sigma\varsigma$, $\zeta\omega\gamma\varrho\dot{\alpha}\varphi\sigma\upsilon$, δ , "painter," is an agent noun formed from the roots $\zeta\omega$ -, "life" and $\gamma\varrho\alpha\varphi$ -, "paint." It meant originally a "painter of nature" but came to be a general word for painter.

Two words or phrases linked by $\ensuremath{\tilde{\eta}}$ usually have the same grammatical construction:

μᾶλλον τῖμῶσιν οἱ πολῖται τὸν ἡήτορα ἢ τὸν ποιητήν. The citizens honor the public speaker more than the poet.

The basic meaning of the verb $l\sigma\eta\mu\iota$, $\sigma\tau\eta\sigma\omega$, $l\sigma\tau\eta\sigma\alpha$ (trans.) or $l\sigma\tau\eta\nu$ (intrans.), $l\sigma\tau\eta\nu\alpha$ (intrans.), $l\sigma\tau\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$, $l\sigma\tau\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$, $l\sigma\tau\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$ is "stand." Its transitive meanings, "make stand, set up," must be distinguished from its intransitive ones, "stand, be standing."

The chart on pages 354-55 gives the meanings of the various tenses of this verb in the active, middle, and passive voices. Intransitive meanings are for myself

σταθήσομαι I shall be stood up I shall be being stood up	ἐστάθην I was stood up		έσταμαι I have been stood up	είστάμην Ι had been stood up
στήσομαι I shall stand I shall be standing I shall stand (something) up for myself I shall be standing (something) up for myself	ἐστησάμην I stood (something) up for myself		έσταμαι (rare) I have stood (myself) up I have stood (something) up for myself	είστάμην (rare) I had stood (myself) up I had stood (something) up italicized. Note that the present, imperfect, and future middle can be either transitive or intransitive; the first acrist active $\emph{έστησα}$ is transitive, but the second acrist active $\emph{έστην}$ (whose conjugation is given in Unit 13) is intransitive; the first acrist middle, unlike the other middle forms, is only transitive; the perfect $\emph{έστηκα}$ (whose conjugation is given in Unit 13) is intransitive and has a present meaning, and likewise, the pluperfect $\emph{είστήκη}$ is intransitive and has an imperfect meaning. The perfect and pluperfect middle are very rare.

FUTURE	AORIST		PERFECT	PLUPERFECT

In learning the principal parts, observe how the formation of the various tenses affects the spelling of the word:

lστημι < *σίστημι: the reduplicated σ- drops out but causes the initial rough breathing έστην and έστησα: the $\dot{\epsilon}$ - is a past indicative augment ξστηκα < *σέστηκα and ξσταμαι < *σέσταμαι: the reduplicated σ-drops out but causes the initial rough breathing $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\alpha}\theta\eta\nu$: the $\dot{\epsilon}$ - is a past indicative augment.

Note that as in $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$, Principal Parts I–IV have a long vowel; Principal Parts V and VI have a short vowel.

Note carefully that the future active, middle, and passive; the first aorist active and middle; the aorist passive; and the perfect and pluperfect middle/passive of this verb are conjugated just like $\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon \delta \omega$.

The verb $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ occurs very frequently in compounds. Two important compounds are $\dot{\alpha}\rho l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ and $\kappa\alpha\theta l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$; the latter is treated under the prefix $\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha$ -below.

The compound verb ἀφίστημι, ἀποστήσω, ἀπέστησα (trans.) or ἀπέστην (intrans.), ἀφέστηκα (intrans.), ἀφέσταμαι, ἀπεστάθην, "(trans.) cause to revolt; (mid. and intrans.) revolt," shows the same distinctions of meaning in the various tenses and voices as does the simple verb, e.g.:

άφίσταμεν τούς στρατιώτας.

(present active)

We are causing the soldiers to revolt.

ἀφιστάμεθα ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως.

(present middle)

We are revolting from the city.

The prefix $\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha$ - can have a spatial meaning, "down," or one of the meanings of the preposition $\kappa\alpha\tau\dot{\alpha}$, "against." It can also simply strengthen the meaning of a verb. Thus $\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\lambda\dot{v}\omega$, "destroy," is a somewhat more forceful word than the simple verb $\lambda\dot{v}\omega$.

The compound verb καθίστημι, καταστήσω, κατέστησα (trans.) οr κατέστην (intrans.), καθέστηκα (intrans.), καθέσταμαι, κατεστάθην, "appoint, establish, put into a state; (mid. and intrans.) enter into a state," is a very important word and can be used of "setting up" a form of government, "appointing" officials, etc.; it can also be used of putting someone or something into a certain state. It shows the same distinctions of meaning in the various tenses and voices as does the simple verb, e.g.:

τὸν δῆμον εἰς πόλεμον καθιστάναι to be putting the people into (a state of) war δημοκρατίαν κατεστήσαμεν. We established a democracy.

βασιλεύς καθέστηκα.

I am established as king (i.e., I have entered into the state of being king).

In a negative purpose clause introduced by $\mathit{lva}\ \mu\acute{\eta},\ \delta\varsigma\ \mu\acute{\eta},\ \text{or}\ \delta\pi\omega\varsigma\ \mu\acute{\eta},\ \mu\acute{\eta}$ is an adverb. In a fear clause expressing a fear that something may happen, $\mu\acute{\eta}$ is a conjunction. A clause expressing a fear that something may not happen is introduced by $\mu\grave{\eta}$ ov, in which $\mu\acute{\eta}$ is a conjunction and ov is an adverb.

The words $\mu\eta\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ and $o\dot{v}\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ can be conjunctions connecting two items, the second of which is negative: "and not." They can also be used as adverbs: "not even."

The three interrogative adverbs of place correspond to the three cases expressing motion or absence of motion; cf. the chart at the end of Section 13.4, page 20.

$$\overbrace{ \begin{array}{c} \pi o \tilde{\imath}; \\ \hline \\ \pi o \tilde{\imath}; \end{array} } \overbrace{ \begin{array}{c} \pi \phi \theta \varepsilon \nu; \\ \hline \end{array} }$$ ποῖ πέμπεις τὰ βιβλία; To where are you sending the books?

ποῦ τὰ βιβλία γράφεις; Where do you write the books?

πόθεν ήκεις εἰς τὴν τῶν ὁπλῖτῶν οἰκίāν; From where have you come to the house of the hoplites?

Distinguish carefully between the interrogative adverb $\pi o \tilde{v}$, "where," and the indefinite enclitic adverb $\pi o v$, "I suppose; somewhere."

The preposition $\pi\varrho\delta\varsigma$ governs all three cases and has several meanings: with the genitive it means "in the eyes of": $\pi\varrho\delta\varsigma$ $\tau\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $d\nu\theta\varrho\omega\pi\omega\nu$, "in the eyes of men." In exclamations and oaths, it means "in the name of": $\pi\varrho\delta\varsigma$ $\tau\tilde{\omega}\nu$ $\theta\epsilon\tilde{\omega}\nu$, "in the name of the gods." With the dative case, it means either "near" (showing position) or "in addition to." With the accusative, it means "toward," either of motion or of almost any sort of relation (love, hatred, etc.).

The basic meaning of $\tau \ell \theta \eta \mu \iota$, $\theta \dot{\eta} \sigma \omega$, $\dot{\epsilon} \theta \eta \kappa a$, $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \theta \epsilon \iota \mu a \iota$, $\dot{\epsilon} \tau \dot{\epsilon} \theta \eta \nu$ is "put, place." It also means "put (something) down to last, make": e.g., $\nu \dot{\epsilon} \mu o \nu \varsigma \tau \iota \theta \dot{\epsilon} \nu a \iota$, "to make laws." In learning the principal parts, note that as in $\delta \dot{\epsilon} \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$, there is the same reduplication in the present ($\tau \dot{\epsilon} \theta \eta \mu \iota < *\theta \dot{\epsilon} \theta \eta \mu \iota$ with dissimilation of aspirates) and the same long-vowel grade of the root in Principal Parts I–IV. Observe that Principal Part V has the diphthong $-\epsilon \iota$ - in the tense stem: $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \theta \epsilon \iota \mu a \iota$ (contrast the short vowels of $\delta \dot{\epsilon} \delta \sigma \mu a \iota$ and $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau a \mu a \iota$). The short vowel of Principal Part VI is similar to that of $\dot{\epsilon} \delta \dot{\delta} \theta \eta \nu$ and $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \dot{\alpha} \theta \eta \nu$.

The compound verb $dva\tau l\theta\eta\mu\iota$, "set up, dedicate," is used especially to describe the dedication of an object to a god, e.g., $\tau \alpha \tilde{v} \tau \alpha \tau \tilde{\eta} \theta \epsilon \tilde{\omega} d\nu \alpha \theta \acute{\eta} \sigma o \mu \epsilon r$, "We shall dedicate these things to the goddess." Many votive objects bear an inscription stating simply that the donor dedicated the object to a god.

102. -μι (ATHEMATIC) VERBS: CONTINUED

In this Section are presented the remaining forms of $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$, and $l \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ which are not conjugated like the corresponding tenses of $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \dot{\omega} \omega$: the second aroist active of all three verbs, the second aroist middle of $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$, and the perfect and pluperfect indicative active and perfect infinitive active of $l \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$.

The Principal Parts in bold face below are those which still require explanation. All other Principal Parts of these verbs can already be employed to construct the appropriate forms.

- (a) δίδωμι, δώσω, ἔδωκα, δέδωκα, δέδομαι, ἐδόθην, "give"
- (b) τίθημι, θήσω, ἔθηκα, τέθηκα, τέθειμαι, ἐτέθην, "put"
- (c) ἴστημι, στήσω, ἔστησα (transitive) or ἔστην (intransitive), ἕστηκα (intrans.), ἔσταμαι, ἐστάθην, "make stand; (intrans. and mid.) stand"

1. AORIST ACTIVE AND MIDDLE OF ATHEMATIC VERBS

In the agrist active and middle, athematic verbs have some first agrist forms and some second agrist forms. The term first agrist applies to those agrists active and middle which employ exactly the same endings as the equivalent agrist forms of $\pi a \iota \delta e \iota \omega$. The term second agrist applies to any agrist active or middle which employs any different endings.

The second agrist active and middle of $\lambda\epsilon\ell\pi\omega$, which is thematic throughout and which is marked by the ending -ov (or $-o\mu\eta v$) of Principal Part III, must be distinguished from the second agrists active and middle presented in this Section, which are for the most part athematic and which generally employ endings different from those of the second agrists already learned.

The second agrist active and (where it exists) the second agrist middle of these athematic verbs are built upon a stem which shows the same vowel gradation as the present tense stem. This stem differs from the present tense stem ONLY in that there is no reduplication of the initial consonant.

PRESENT TENSE STEM:

long-vowel grade
$$\delta i\delta \omega$$
- $\tau i\theta \eta$ - $i\sigma \tau \eta$ - $(<\sigma i\sigma \tau \eta$ -) short-vowel grade $\delta i\delta \sigma$ - $\tau i\theta \varepsilon$ $\delta \sigma \tau \sigma$ - $(<\sigma i\sigma \tau \sigma$ -)

SECOND AORIST ACTIVE AND MIDDLE TENSE STEM:

long-vowel grade
$$*\delta\omega$$
- $*\theta\eta$ - $\sigma\tau\eta$ - short-vowel grade $\delta\sigma$ - $\theta\varepsilon$ - $\sigma\tau\sigma$ -

The stems * $\delta\omega$ - and * $\theta\eta$ -, which had appeared only in the singular of the indicative active, were replaced by the first agrist stems $\delta\omega\varkappa$ - and $\theta\eta\varkappa$ - which appear in Principal Part III. In the plural of the indicative active, and in the rest of this conjugation, these verbs use the short-vowel stems $\delta\sigma$ - and $\theta\varepsilon$ -.

In contrast, $\ddot{e}\sigma\tau\eta\nu$ uses the long-vowel grade of the stem throughout the indicative. It is therefore treated separately below.

2. AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE

In the singular of the aorist indicative active, the verbs $\delta \ell \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\tau \ell \theta \eta \mu \iota$ have a first aorist; in the plural they have an athematic second aorist which employs the short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem. To this stem are added the same athematic endings as are employed to form the imperfect indicative active of these verbs.

Such a mixture of first agrist singular and second agrist plural is called a mixed agrist.

AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE	AUGMENTED STEMS:
ATHEMATIC	ἐδωκ-	ἐθη ϰ-
ENDINGS	ἐδο -	$\dot{\epsilon}\theta\epsilon$ -
S 1	ἔδωκα	ἔθηκα	FIRST
2	ἔδωκας	ἔθηκας	AORIST
3	ἔδωκε(ν)	ἔθηκε(ν)
Ρ1 -μεν	ἔδομεν	ἔθεμεν	ATHEMATIC
2 -τε	ἔδοτ ε	$ec{arepsilon} hetaarepsilon$ $ au$	SECOND
3 -σαν	ἔδοσαν	$\ddot{arepsilon} hetaarepsilon$ σαν	AORIST

Observations: (1) The singular is formed from Principal Part III with the regular endings of the first aorist (cf. ἐπαίδευσα).

(2) In the plural the agrist indicative active of $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$ differs from the imperfect indicative active ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. $\tilde{\epsilon} \delta o \mu \epsilon \nu$ (first person plural, agrist indicative active) and $\tilde{\epsilon} \delta l \delta o \mu \epsilon \nu$ (first person plural, imperfect indicative active).

The verb $\[\[\] \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota \]$ has two separate aorists. The first aorist $\[\] \sigma \tau \eta \sigma a$ is transitive and means "I stood (something, e.g., a statue) up." It can also be used transitively in the middle, e.g., $\[\] \sigma \tau \eta \sigma \dot{a} \mu \eta \nu$, "I stood (something) up for myself." The second aorist $\[\] \sigma \tau \eta \nu$ is intransitive and means "I stood (someplace)"; it has no middle voice.

Unlike the aorists $\ell\delta\omega\kappa a$ and $\ell\theta\eta\kappa a$, the second aorist indicative active $\ell\sigma\eta \eta$ is an athematic second aorist throughout its conjugation and employs in the indicative ONLY the long-vowel grade of the second aorist active tense stem, together with the same athematic endings as were employed in the imperfect indicative active of athematic verbs. Such a second aorist is called a root aorist. Other root aorists will be introduced later.

	ROOT AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE ENDINGS	AUGMENT STEM: ἐστη-	'ED
S 1	-ν	ἔστην	ROOT
2	-5	ἔστη ς	AORIST
3	_	ἔστη
P 1	-μεν	ἔστημεν
2	-τε	ἔστη τε
3	-σαν	ἔστησαν

3. AORIST INDICATIVE MIDDLE

In all forms of the aorist indicative middle, as in the plural of the aorist indicative active, the verbs $\delta i\delta\omega\mu\iota$ and $\tau i\theta\eta\mu\iota$ have an athematic second aorist which employs the short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem. The athematic endings are the same as those of the imperfect indicative middle/passive of these verbs, except in the second person singular. Remember that $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ has no second aorist middle.

	AORIST INDICATIVE MIDDLE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	AUGMENT ἐδο-	TED STEMS; ἐθε-
S 1	-μην	έδόμην	ἐθέμην
2	-o <*-σo	ἔδου	$\ddot{\epsilon} heta o v$
3	-το	ἔδο το	ἔθετο
P 1	-μεθα	έδόμεθα	ἐθέμεθα
2	-σθε	ἔδοσθε	ἔθεσθε
3	-ντο	ἔδο ντο	$ec{\epsilon} heta\epsilon$ vto

Observations: (1) In the second person singular, contraction produces the spurious diphthong -ov: $\ddot{e}\delta o\mathbf{o} > \ddot{e}\delta ov$, $\ddot{e}\theta e\mathbf{o} > \ddot{e}\theta ov$.

- (2) Remember that the vowel preceding the endings is NOT a thematic vowel but part of the stem: thus $\mathring{\epsilon}\delta\mathbf{o}\sigma\theta\epsilon$ (where the thematic vowel would be $-\epsilon$ -); $\mathring{\epsilon}\theta\dot{\epsilon}\mu\epsilon\theta\alpha$ (where the thematic vowel would be $-\sigma$ -).
- (3) Since the endings of the athematic agrist indicative middle are the same as those of the corresponding imperfect, except in the second person singular, it follows that everywhere except in the second person singular the agrist indicative middle of $\delta \ell \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\tau \ell \theta \eta \mu \iota$ differs from the imperfect middle/passive ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. $\ell \delta \delta \mu \epsilon \theta a$ (first person plural, agrist indicative middle) and $\ell \delta \iota \delta \omega \mu \epsilon \theta a$ (first person plural, imperfect indicative middle/passive).

4. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

To form the agrist subjunctive active of athematic verbs, add the usual subjunctive active endings to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem and contract the vowel of the stem with the initial vowel of the ending.

	SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE ENDINGS	$STEM:$ δo -	STEM: $ heta arepsilon -$	STEM: στε-
S 1	-ω	$\delta ilde{\omega}$	$ heta ilde{\omega}$	$\sigma au ilde{\omega}$
2	-ทร	$\delta ilde{arphi} arsigma$	$ heta ilde{\eta}arsigma$	$\sigma au ilde{\eta}arsigma$
3	- n	$\delta ilde{arphi}$	$ heta ilde{\eta}$	$\sigma au ilde{\eta}$

P 1	-ωμεν	$\delta ilde{\omega} \mu arepsilon v$	$ heta ilde{\omega} \mu$ e v	στῶμεν
2	-ητε	$\delta ilde{\omega} au arepsilon$	$ heta ilde{\eta} au arepsilon$	$\sigma au ilde{\eta} au arepsilon$
3	-ωσι(ν)	$\delta \tilde{\omega} \sigma \iota(v)$	$\theta \tilde{\omega} \sigma \iota(v)$	$\sigma au ilde{\omega} \sigma \iota(v)$

Observations: (1) As in the present subjunctive, $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ employs a stem ending in $-\epsilon$ - in the second agrist subjunctive.

- (2) The stem δo contracts with the singular endings as does the present stem $\delta \iota \delta o$ (cf. Section 100.5): $\delta \delta \eta \varsigma$ becomes $\delta \tilde{\varphi} \varsigma$ NOT $\delta o \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$; $\delta \delta \eta$ becomes $\delta \tilde{\varphi}$ NOT $\delta o \tilde{\iota}$.
- (3) Since athematic verbs employ the same endings in the aorist subjunctive active and the present subjunctive active, and since the appropriate stem shows the short-vowel grade in both, it follows that the aorist subjunctive active of these verbs differs from the present subjunctive active ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. δῶμεν (first person plural, aorist subjunctive active) and διδῶμεν (first person plural, present subjunctive active).

5. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist subjunctive middle of athematic verbs, add the usual subjunctive middle endings to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem and contract the vowel of the stem with the initial vowel of the ending.

	UBJUNCTIVE IDDLE ENDINGS	STEM: δο-	$STEM:$ $\theta \varepsilon$ -
S 1	-ωμαι	δῶμαι	θῶμαι
2	-n	$\delta ilde{arphi}$	$ heta ilde{\eta}$
3	-ηται	$\delta ilde{\omega} au a \iota$	$ heta ilde{\eta} au a\iota$
P 1	-ωμεθα	δώμεθα	θώμεθα
2	-ησθε	$\delta \tilde{\omega} \sigma \theta \varepsilon$	$ heta ilde{\eta}\sigma hetaarepsilon$
3	-ωνται	$\delta ilde{\omega} u au a \iota$	$ heta ilde{\omega}$ νται

Observations: (1) The stem δo - contracts with the singular endings as does the stem $\delta \iota \delta o$ - (cf. Section 100.6): $*\delta \delta \eta$ becomes $\delta \tilde{\varphi}$ NOT $\delta o \tilde{\iota}$.

(2) As in the active voice, the aorist subjunctive middle of these verbs differs from the present subjunctive middle/passive ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. $\delta \omega \mu \epsilon \theta a$

(first person plural, aorist subjunctive middle) and $\delta\iota\delta\omega\mu\epsilon\theta\alpha$ (first person plural, present subjunctive middle/passive).

6. AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE

To form the agrist optative active of athematic verbs, add to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem the same endings as are employed to form the present optative active of athematic verbs.

	OPTATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	$STEM: \ \delta o$ -	$STEM: \ heta arepsilon -$	STEM: στα-
S 1	-เทุง	δοίην	heta arepsilonίην	σταίην

P 1	-ιημεν	δοίημεν	θείημεν	σταίημεν
2	~ιητε	δοίητε	heta arepsilonίητε	σταίητε
3	-ιησαν	δοίησαν	θείησαν	σταίησαν

Observation: The aorist optative active of these verbs differs from the present optative active ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. $\delta o \tilde{\iota} \mu \epsilon \nu$ (first person plural, aorist optative active) and $\delta \iota \delta o \tilde{\iota} \mu \epsilon \nu$ (first person plural, present optative active).

7. AORIST OPTATIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist optative middle of athematic verbs, add to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem the same endings as were employed to form the present optative middle/passive of these verbs.

	OPTATIVE MIDDLE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	$STEM:$ $\delta o-$	$STEM: \ heta arepsilon -$
S 1	-ιμην	δοίμην	θ είμην
2	-to	δο ῖο	hetaarepsilonĩo
3	-tto	δo \tilde{i} $ au o$	θε $$ ιτο
P 1	-ιμεθα	δοίμεθα	θείμεθα
2	-ισθε	δοῖσθε	θ ε ῖ σ θ ϵ
3	-1740	$δο$ ῖντ \mathbf{o}	heta arepsilonῖντο

Observations: (1) The verb $\tau l\theta \eta \mu \iota$ has alternative thematic forms in the third person singular and in the plural. The final vowel of the stem contracts with the initial diphthong of the ending. Cf. the alternative forms of the present optative middle/passive, Section 100.8.

Alternative thematic forms:

S 3 θοῖτο (*θέοιτο)
P 1 θοίμεθα (*θεοίμεθα)
2 θοῖσθε (*θέοισθε)
3 θοῖντο (*θέοιντο)

(2) The aorist optative middle of these verbs, including both athematic and alternative thematic forms, differs from the present optative middle/passive ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. $\delta o l \mu \epsilon \theta a$ (first person plural, aorist optative middle) and $\delta \iota \delta o l \mu \epsilon \theta a$ first person plural, present optative middle/passive).

8. AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

The agrist imperative active of athematic verbs is formed as follows:

tense stem		tense stem
	+ endings:	+ endings:

P 2	δότε	θέτε	σ τ $\tilde{\eta}$ τ $oldsymbol{\epsilon}$
3	δόντων	$ heta \dot{\epsilon}$ ντων	στά ντων

Observations: (1) All root agrists use the second person singular ending $-\theta \iota$ with the long-vowel grade of the stem. Verbs with mixed agrists use the ending $-\varsigma$ with the short-vowel grade of the stem.

(2) The imperative forms $\delta\delta\varsigma$ and $\theta\epsilon\varsigma$, when compounded, have an accent on the penult:

ἀπόδος

δός ἔκδος

(3) The long-vowel stem $\sigma\tau\eta$ - is shortened before the third person plural ending $-\nu\tau\omega\nu$.

9. AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE

To form the agrist imperative middle of athematic verbs, add to the short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem the following endings:

j	IMPERATIVE MIDDLE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM:	$STEM: \ heta arepsilon -$
S 2	-o < *-σο	δοῦ (*δό ο)	θοῦ (*θέ ο)
3	-σθω	δό σθω	θέ σθω
P 2	-σθε	δόσθε	θέσθε
	-σθων	δόσθων	θέσθων

Observation: The imperative forms $\delta o \tilde{v}$ and $\theta o \tilde{v}$, when compounded with a monosyllabic prefix, retain the circumflex on the ultima; when compounded with a disyllabic prefix or with more than one prefix, they take an acute accent on the penult:

 $\delta o ilde{v}$ $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \delta o ilde{v}$ $\dot{a} \pi \delta \delta o v$

10. AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE

The verbs $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$ form the agrist infinitive active by adding to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem the ending -έναι, which contracts with the vowel of the stem to form a spurious diphthong:

$$δοῦναι$$
 (* $δοέναι$) $θεῖναι$ (* $θεέναι$)

The verb $lost\eta\mu$ forms the second agrist infinitive active by adding to the unaugmented long-vowel grade of the second agrist active tense stem the ending -val:

στῆναι

Other root agrists, to be introduced later, follow the same pattern.

11. AORIST INFINITIVE MIDDLE

The verbs $\delta \ell \delta \omega \mu \iota$ and $\tau \ell \theta \eta \mu \iota$ form the agrist infinitive middle by adding to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second agrist active and middle tense stem the ending $-\sigma \theta \alpha \iota$:

Note that all infinitives have a fixed, non-recessive accent which is retained in compounds:

ἀποστῆναι

ἀποδόσθαι

12. PERFECT AND PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE OF $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$

The perfect and pluperfect indicative active of $\delta i\delta\omega\mu\iota$ and $\tau i\theta\eta\mu\iota$ are formed in the same way as the same tenses of $\pi a\iota\delta\epsilon i\omega$.

The verb $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ forms the singular of the perfect and pluperfect indicative active in the same way as the same tenses of $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\acute{v}\omega$. But in the plural this verb employs a different stem, and different endings.

The perfect active of $lor\eta\mu\iota$ is conjugated as follows:

	STEMS: έστηκ- έστα-	(*σεστη ν -) (*σεστα-)
S 1	ξστηκα
2	ξστηκας
3	έστηκας έστηκε(ν)

P 1	ἕστα μ εν
2	ἔστα τε
3	$\delta\sigma au$ $\tilde{oldsymbol{lpha}}$ $\sigma\iota(oldsymbol{\gamma})$

Observation: In the singular $\emph{Eothera}$ is conjugated like $\emph{nenaldevea}$; in the plural, this perfect uses the stem \emph{Eota} and the person markers $-\mu \emph{ev}$ and $-\tau \emph{e}$ as endings, together with the normal third person plural ending $-\bar{\alpha} \emph{oi}(\emph{v})$, which contracts with the final \emph{a} of the stem.

The pluperfect active of $l\sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ is conjugated as follows:

	STEMS: είστηκ- έστα-	(*ἐσεστηκ-) (*σεστα-)
S 1 2 3	είστήκη είστήκης είστήκει(ν)
P 1 2 3	ἕστα μεν ἕστα τε ἕστα σαν

Observation: In the singular the augmented stem είστηκ- receives the usual pluperfect indicative endings; in the plural the alternative stem έστα-, unaugmented, receives the person markers -μεν, -τε, -σαν as endings. In the first and second persons plural the forms of the perfect and pluperfect indicative active are identical. Context will help to determine meaning.

13. PERFECT INFINITIVE ACTIVE OF ἴστημι

The verb $l\sigma\eta\mu\iota$ forms the perfect infinitive active by adding the ending -val to the perfect active stem $l\sigma\tau\alpha$ -. The penult is accented, as always before this ending:

έστάναι

103. OBJECT CLAUSES OF EFFORT

Verbs of effort, striving, or caring often take object clauses of effort with the future indicative, introduced by the conjunction $\delta\pi\omega\varsigma$, "that." The negative is $\mu\dot{\eta}$.

SECTION 104 379

One verb which introduces such clauses is $\pi \varrho \acute{a} \tau \tau \omega$ when used in the sense "bring it about (that)." Another is $\mu \eta \chi a \nu \acute{a} \omega \mu a \iota$:

μηχανάομαι, μηχανήσομαι, ἐμηχανησάμην, —, μεμηχάνημαι, —, "contrive, devise" πράττει ὅπως τῆς πόλεως ἄρξει.

He is bringing it about that he will rule the city.

 $\mu\eta\chi a v\tilde{\omega} v\tau a \iota$ ὅπως τοὺς πολεμίους νῖκήσουσιν.

They are contriving that they will defeat the enemy.

μηχανᾶσθε ὅπως ἡ δημοκρατία μὴ λυθήσεται.

You are contriving that the democracy will not be destroyed.

The future indicative is used even when the introductory verb is in a secondary tense:

έμηχανῶντο ὅπως τοὺς πολεμίους νῖκήσουσιν.

They were contriving that they would defeat the enemy.

Object clauses of effort can be used independently with the force of an exhortation or a warning. They are thus alternatives to the imperative and the hortatory and prohibitive subjunctives (cf. Section 90).

ὅπως τοὺς πολεμίους νῖκήσετε. (See to it) that you defeat the enemy!

ὄπως μὴ νῖκηθήσεσθε. (See to it) that you are not defeated!

ὅπως νῖκήσομεν.

(Let us see to it) that we conquer!

104. OBJECT CLAUSES OF EFFORT AND PURPOSE CLAUSES COMPARED

Object clauses of effort are so named because they function as the direct object of a verb. They answer the question "What?" (E.g., What is he bringing about?, What are they contriving?)

Purpose clauses function as adverbs and answer the question "Why?"

μηχανᾶται ὅπως τοῦ δήμου ἄρξει. (object clause of effort) He is contriving that he will rule the people.

$$τα\~τα$$
 $μηχαν\~αται$
$$\left\{ egin{array}{l} \"δπως \\ \~ινα \\ \'ως \end{array} \right\} \quad το\~ν \, \, δήμον \, \, \'αρξη. \, \, (purpose \, clause) \end{array}$$

He is contriving these things in order that he may rule the people.

The object clause of effort answers the question "What is he contriving?" The purpose clause answers the question "Why is he contriving these things?"

105. ACCUSATIVE OF RESPECT

A noun in the accusative case, without a preposition, can indicate the respect in which a statement is true. This usage is called the accusative of respect. It is employed to limit the application of an adjective or of a verb denoting a state of being.

ψυχήν μέν καλός δ Σωκράτης, σώμα δὲ αἰσχρός.
In soul (with respect to his soul), on the one hand, Sokrates is beautiful; in body (with respect to his body), on the other hand, (he is) ugly.

ἀγαθὸς μάχην οὖτος ὁ στρατιώτης.
This soldier is good in battle (with respect to battle).

In the first example the two accusatives of respect show that Sokrates' beauty and ugliness are limited to particular areas. In the second example the soldier's goodness is limited to a single area.

106. ACCUSATIVE OF RESPECT AND DATIVE OF RESPECT COMPARED

The accusative of respect and dative of respect (cf. Section 81) overlap in meaning and can often be used interchangeably. They differ in that the force of the dative is instrumental, while the force of the accusative is limiting.

ψῦχὴν καλὸς ὁ Σωπράτης.
Sokrates is beautiful in soul.
(Sokrates' beauty is limited to one area, his soul.)
(As far as his soul is concerned, Sokrates is beautiful.)
ψῦχῆ καλὸς ὁ Σωπράτης.
Sokrates is beautiful in soul.

(Sokrates is beautiful by means of his soul.)

VOCABULARY NOTES

Aristophanes (c. 450-c. 385 B.C.) was a poet of Old Comedy (i.e., Athenian fifth-century comedy). Eleven of his plays have survived.

The noun $\tilde{a}\varrho\chi\omega\nu$, $\tilde{a}\varrho\chi\sigma\nu\tau\sigma\varsigma$, δ , "ruler; archon," should be distinguished from the related noun $\tilde{a}\varrho\chi\dot{\eta}$, $\tilde{a}\varrho\chi\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "beginning; rule, empire," and the related verb $\tilde{a}\varrho\chi\omega$, one of whose meanings is "rule."

The verb $\gamma \ell \gamma \nu \alpha \mu \alpha \iota$, $\gamma \epsilon \nu \eta \sigma \alpha \mu \alpha \iota$, $\delta \gamma \epsilon \nu \delta \mu \eta \nu$, $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \sigma \nu \alpha$, $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu \eta \mu \alpha \iota$, —, "be born; become; happen," is a deponent verb: Principal Parts I, II, III, and V are in the middle voice. But this verb also has a perfect active, with no difference in meaning from the perfect middle. The root shows an e-grade ($\gamma \epsilon \nu \eta \sigma \alpha \mu \alpha \iota$, $\delta \gamma \epsilon \nu \delta \mu \eta \nu$, $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu \eta \mu \alpha \iota$), an o-grade ($\gamma \epsilon \gamma \sigma \nu \alpha$), and a zero-grade ($\gamma \epsilon \gamma \nu \alpha \mu \alpha \iota$). Cf. $\lambda \epsilon \ell \pi \omega$. The present tense stem shows a reduplication of the initial consonant of the root + iota: $\gamma \ell \gamma \nu \alpha \mu \alpha \iota$. Contrast the reduplication with epsilon in the two tense stems of the perfect: $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \sigma \nu \alpha$, $\gamma \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \nu \gamma \nu \alpha \mu \alpha \iota$. Note that this verb has a thematic second agrist; cf. $\delta \lambda \iota \pi \delta \mu \eta \nu$.

In the sense "become" this verb is copulative and takes a predicate nominative:

άγαθοὶ γίγνονται. They are becoming good.

In the agrist this verb often indicates that someone was good (bad, etc.) on some particular occasion.

The basic meaning of the preposition $\partial n \ell$ is "on." Its use with the genitive, dative, and accusative cases deserves special attention, since meanings overlap and cannot always be derived from the original force of these cases.

+ gen.	ἐπὶ γῆς καὶ ὑπὸ γῆς ἐφ ' ἵππου	on the earth and under the earthon horseback
+ dat.	χοῦσὸς ἐπὶ a table νόμος ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀδίκοις εἰοήνην ἐποιησάμεθα ἐπὶ τούτοις.	gold on a table a law pertaining to the unjust We made peace on these conditions.
+ acc.	He jumped ἐπὶ τὸν ἵππον. ἥκω ἐπὶ τόδε. δ στρατὸς extended ἐπὶ πέντε στάδια. στρατιώτᾶς ἔπεμψα ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους.	He jumped onto his horse. I have come for this thing (purpose). The army extended over (a distance of) five stades. I sent soldiers against the enemy.

The verb $\ell\varrho\chi o\mu\alpha\iota$, $\ell\lambda\epsilon\acute{v}\sigma o\mu\alpha\iota$, $\tilde{\eta}\lambda\theta o\nu$, $\ell\lambda\acute{\eta}\lambda\nu\theta\alpha$, —, —, "come, go," is deponent in the present and future tenses only. In Attic Greek it appears ONLY in the present indicative, in the aorist (all moods), and in the perfect and pluperfect. The missing moods and tenses (present EXCEPT for the indicative, imperfect, and future) are supplied by another verb, $\epsilon\ell\mu\iota$, to be introduced in Unit 17. The unaugmented aorist active tense stem is $\ell\lambda\theta$. The second person singular, aorist imperative active, like that of $\lambda\alpha\mu\beta\acute{a}\nu\omega$, is accented on the ultima: $\ell\lambda\theta\acute{e}$, $\lambda\alpha\beta\acute{e}$. When these forms are compounded, the accent is recessive: $\ell\alpha\kappa\ell\lambda\theta\epsilon$, $\ell\alpha\ell\lambda\alpha\beta\epsilon$.

The pluperfect does not add the past indicative augment: e.g. $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda\eta\lambda\delta\theta\eta$, "I had come." Remember the general rule that when Principal Part IV or V begins with $\hat{\epsilon}$ - or $\epsilon\hat{l}$ -, the pluperfect is unaugmented; cf. $\epsilon\hat{l}\lambda\eta\varphi a$.

Euripides (c. 485-c. 406 B.C.) was the youngest of the three great tragic playwrights of fifth-century Athens.

The proper noun $E \partial_{\varrho} \bar{\iota} \pi i \delta \eta_{\varsigma}$, $E \partial_{\varrho} \bar{\iota} \pi i \delta \sigma v$, δ , "Euripides," has the vocative singular $E \partial_{\varrho} \bar{\iota} \pi i \delta \eta$. Contrast the vocative singular of $\pi o \lambda i \tau \eta_{\varsigma}$: $\pi o \lambda i \tau \alpha$. All first-declension nouns with nominatives in $-\iota \delta \eta_{\varsigma}$ have such a vocative.

Principal Parts I and III of $\mu a \nu \theta \acute{a} \nu \omega$, $\mu a \theta \acute{\eta} \sigma \sigma \mu a \iota$, $\ddot{\epsilon} \mu a \theta \sigma \nu$, $\mu \epsilon \mu \acute{a} \theta \eta \varkappa a$, ——, "learn, understand," resemble those of $\lambda a \mu \beta \acute{a} \nu \omega$. Note, however, that $\mu a \nu \theta \acute{a} \nu \omega$ uses the suffix $-\eta \sigma$ - to form the future: contrast $\mu a \theta \acute{\eta} \sigma \sigma \mu a \iota$ with $\lambda \acute{\eta} \psi \sigma \mu a \iota$.

The verb $\mu \acute{a}\chi o \mu a \iota$, $\mu a \chi o \widetilde{\nu} \mu a \iota$, $\mathring{\epsilon} \mu a \chi \varepsilon \sigma \acute{a} \mu \eta \nu$, —, $\mu \varepsilon \mu \acute{a} \chi \eta \mu a \iota$, —, "fight," is a deponent verb with a contracted future. It takes a dative of the person(s) against whom one is fighting:

τοῖς πολεμίοις ἐμαχόμεθα. We were fighting the enemy.

The prefix $\mu\epsilon\tau a$ - indicates either sharing or change. The verb $\mu\epsilon\tau a\delta i\delta\omega\mu\iota$ means "give a share of" and takes a dative of indirect object and a genitive of the thing shared: $\mu\epsilon\tau a\delta\iota\delta\delta\bar{a}\sigma\iota$ $\tau\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$ $\dot{a}\varrho\chi\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$ $\tau\tilde{\psi}$ $\delta\dot{\eta}\mu\psi$, "They give a share of the rule to the people." The verb $\mu\epsilon\tau a\nu i\sigma\tau a\mu a\iota$ means "stand up and change place, migrate." Note the double prefix: $\mu\epsilon\tau a$ - + $\dot{a}\nu a$ -.

The noun $\mu\eta\chi\alpha\nu\dot{\eta}$, $\mu\eta\chi\alpha\nu\ddot{\eta}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "device, machine," can denote, among other contrivances, the crane-like device by which actors were hoisted into and out of the playing area in the fifth-century B.C. Athenian theater, whence the Latin phrase deus ex machinā, "god from the machine," to describe a god hoisted in to halt the errant plot of a work. The verb $\mu\eta\chi\alpha\nu\dot{\alpha}o\mu\alpha\iota$, $\mu\eta\chi\alpha\nu\dot{\eta}\sigmao\mu\alpha\iota$, $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\eta\chi\alpha\nu\eta\sigma\dot{\alpha}\mu\eta\nu$, —, $\mu\epsilon\mu\eta\chi\dot{\alpha}\nu\eta\mu\alpha\iota$, —, "contrive," is a denominative verb formed from this noun. Note that it is a contracted deponent verb.

The genitive plural of the noun $\pi \alpha \tilde{\iota} \varsigma$, $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \delta \varsigma$, δ or $\tilde{\eta}$, "child," is $\pi \alpha i \delta \omega r$ instead of the expected $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \tilde{\omega} r$. The vocative singular is $\pi \alpha \tilde{\iota}$ by the regular rules (cf. Section 48).

The vocative singular of the noun $\pi o \acute{v}\varsigma$, $\pi o \acute{o}\acute{\varsigma}$, \acute{o} , "foot," is $\pi o \acute{v}\varsigma$. By the regular rules it would have been * $\pi \acute{o}$ (<* $\pi \acute{o}\acute{o}$).

Distinguish the adjective $\sigma a \varphi \eta \zeta$, $\sigma a \varphi \xi \zeta$, "clear, distinct," from the adjective $\sigma o \varphi \delta \zeta$, $\sigma o \varphi \eta$, $\sigma o \varphi \delta v$, "wise, skilled."

The noun $\sigma \dot{\nu} \mu \mu \alpha \chi \sigma \varsigma$, $\sigma \nu \mu \mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \sigma \nu$, $\dot{\sigma}$, "ally," is formed from the preposition $\sigma \dot{\nu} \nu$ + the root $\mu \alpha \chi$ - (cf. $\mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \eta$, $\mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \sigma \mu \alpha \iota$).

The noun $\tau \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \chi o \varsigma$, $\tau \varepsilon (\chi o v \varsigma, \tau \delta)$ means the "fortification wall" of a town or a city.

A $\tau\varrho\delta\pi a\iota ov$, $\tau\varrho\sigma\pi a\iota ov$, $\tau\delta$, "trophy, victory monument," according to ancient etymology, was set up on the field of battle at the point where the victors forced the defeated enemy to turn and run (cf. the verb $\tau\varrho\epsilon\pi\omega$, "make turn"). It consisted of a representative sample of the defeated enemies' weapons and was sacred and hence inviolable. No victory was complete until the victors had commemorated their victory by setting up a trophy.

The verb $\varphi \varepsilon \acute{v} \gamma \omega$, $\varphi \varepsilon \acute{v} \xi o \mu a \iota$, $\ddot{\varepsilon} \varphi v \gamma o v$, $\pi \acute{\varepsilon} \varphi \varepsilon v \gamma a$, —, "flee; be in exile; be a defendant," is a partial deponent; it is deponent only in the future tense. Principal Parts I, II, and IV show the e-grade of the root; Principal Part III shows the zero-grade.

107. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE AND SECOND AORIST PARTICIPLE ACTIVE OF THE ATHEMATIC VERBS $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$, AND $l \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$

The present participle active and second agrist participle active of the athematic verbs $\delta \ell \delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\tau \ell \theta \eta \mu \iota$, and $\ell \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ are presented below, in the nominative/vocative and genitive singular. The declension of these participles is almost identical with that of participles already learned.

The present and agrist participles of these athematic verbs are identical except that the present participle shows reduplication of the stem.

396 UNIT 14

Observations: (1) The masculine nominative/vocative singular of these participles ends in $-\varsigma$ and has an acute accent on the ultima. The masculine and neuter declension stem uses the short vowel grade of the stem + the suffix $-\nu\tau$ - without the thematic vowel. Particular attention must be paid to the feminine declension stem, which has undergone phonetic changes.

- (2) The present and second aorist participles active of δίδωμι are declined, EXCEPT in the masculine nominative singular, exactly like the second aorist participle active of thematic verbs (cf. Section 66.6). Compare λιπόντος, διδόντος, δόντος.
- (3) The present and second agrist participles active of $\tau i\theta\eta\mu\iota$ are declined exactly like the agrist participle passive of all verbs (cf. Section 67.4). Compare $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\upsilon\theta\dot{\epsilon}\nu\tau\sigma$, $\tau\iota\theta\dot{\epsilon}\nu\tau\sigma$.
- (4) The present and second agrist participles active of ἴστημι are declined like the first agrist participle active (cf. Section 66.5), EXCEPT for the accent. Contrast ἱστάντος, παιδεύσαντος.
- (5) Note that the masculine and neuter genitive plural of these participles is identical in form with the third person plural, present or second agrist imperative active (e.g., lστάντων, στάντων).
- (6) All these participles accent the ultima of the feminine genitive plural: e.g., διδονσῶν, τιθεισῶν, ἱστāσῶν.
- (7) Masculine and neuter participles with monosyllabic stems do NOT shift the accent to the ultima in the genitive and dative as do other third-declension forms. Contrast δόντος, αἰγός.
- (8) The accent of monosyllabic participles, like that of all participles, is persistent and remains the same when these participles are compounded:

ἀποδούς, ἀποδοῦσα, ἀποδόν

108. PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE AND SECOND AORIST PARTICIPLE MIDDLE OF ATHEMATIC VERBS

Athematic verbs form the present participle middle/passive and the second aorist participle middle by adding to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem and the second aorist active and middle tense stem the suffix and endings $-\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\varsigma$, $-\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\nu$ without the thematic vowel.

These participles are declined exactly like the present participle middle/passive of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \dot{\nu} \omega$ (cf. Section 67.3).

Remember that the verb $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ does not have a second agrist middle.

	M	\mathbf{F}	N
Nom. S	δόμενος	δομένη	δόμενον
Nom. S	θέμενος	$ heta arepsilon \mu \acute{\epsilon} v \eta$	θέμενον

The aorist participle passive of all verbs is formed from Principal Part VI according to rules already learned.

109. PERFECT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE OF lστημι

The perfect participle active of $l\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ is declined as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	έστώς	έστῶσα	έστός
Gen.	έστῶτος	έστώσης	έστῶτος

Observation: The masculine and neuter belong, as usual, to the third declension (dative plural $\hat{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\tilde{\omega}\sigma\iota[\nu]$), the feminine to the first declension (genitive plural $\hat{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\omega\sigma\tilde{\omega}\nu$).

All participles of $\delta l \delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$, and $l \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ not covered in the preceding Sections are formed from the other Principal Parts of these verbs according to rules already learned.

110. THE VERB $δείμν \bar{v}μι$, "show"

The verb $\delta \varepsilon i \varkappa \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ has the following Principal Parts:

δείχνυμι, δείξω, ἔδειξα, δέδειχα, δέδειγμαι, ἐδείχθην, "show"

This verb is athematic in the present and imperfect. In all other tenses it employs the same endings as $\pi \alpha \iota \delta \varepsilon \acute{\nu} \omega$. Thus all the athematic forms of $\delta \varepsilon \acute{\iota} \kappa \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ come from Principal Part I; $\mathring{\epsilon} \delta \varepsilon \iota \mathring{\xi} a$ is a first aorist like $\mathring{\epsilon} \pi \alpha \acute{\iota} \delta \varepsilon \nu \sigma a$, $\delta \acute{\epsilon} \delta \varepsilon \iota \chi a$ is a perfect like $\pi \varepsilon \pi \alpha \acute{\iota} \delta \varepsilon \nu \kappa a$.

This verb also differs from $\delta \ell \delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\tau \ell \theta \eta \mu \iota$, and $\ell \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ in that:

- (1) In the present subjunctive, the final vowel of the stem does NOT contract with the endings.
- (2) The present optative is thematic.

The present tense stem of $\delta \epsilon l \varkappa \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ shows the same vowel gradation as the present tense stems of the athematic verbs already encountered (cf. Section 100):

Long-vowel grade: δεικνῦ-Short-vowel grade: δεικνν-

As usual, the long-vowel grade is used only in the singular of the present and imperfect indicative active.

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present indicative active and middle/passive of $\delta \epsilon ln v \bar{v} \mu \iota$, add the usual athematic endings to the appropriate grade of the present tense stem (cf. Section 100). The forms are as follows:

		PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	δείκνῦμι	δείκνυμαι
	2	δείκνῦς	δείκνυσαι
	3	\deltaarepsilon ίκν $ar{v}$ σι(ν)	δείκνυται
P	1	δείκνυμεν	δεικνύ μ∈θα
	2	δείκνυτ€	δείκνυ σθε
	3	$\delta \varepsilon$ ικνύ $\bar{\mathbf{a}}$ σι(\mathbf{v})	δείκνυνται

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the imperfect indicative active and middle/passive of $\delta \epsilon i \nu \bar{\nu} \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$, add the usual athematic endings to the appropriate grade of the augmented present tense stem (cf. Section 100). The forms are as follows:

		IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE PASSIVE
S	1	έδείκνῦν	έδεικνύμην
	2	ἐδείκνῦ ς	ἐδείκνυ σο
	3	$\dot{\epsilon}\delta\epsilon l \varkappa v ar{v}$	ἐδείκνυ το
Р	1	έδείκνυμεν	ἐδεικν ύ μεθα
	2	έδείκνυτε	έδείκνυσθ€
	3	ἐδείκνυσαν	ἐδείκνυντο

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

In the present subjunctive active and middle/passive $\delta\epsilon\ell\kappa\nu\bar{\nu}\mu\iota$ employs the usual subjunctive endings. But it differs from $\delta\ell\delta\omega\mu\iota$, $\tau\ell\theta\eta\mu\iota$, and $\ell\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$ in that the final vowel of the stem does not contract with the endings. Thus these forms are like the corresponding forms of $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\ell\omega$.

	PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE PASSIVE
S 1	δεικνύω	δεικνύωμαι
2	δεικνύης	δεικνύη
	etc.	etc.

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Unlike $\delta l\delta \omega \mu \iota$, $\tau l\theta \eta \mu \iota$, and $l\sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$, the verb $\delta \epsilon l\varkappa \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ uses in the present optative active and middle/passive the same thematic endings as those employed in the corresponding forms of $\pi a \iota \delta \epsilon \nu \omega$.

PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE PASSIVE
δεικνύ οιμι δεικνύ οις	δεικνυ οίμην δεικνύ οιο
etc.	etc.

5. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The present imperative of $\delta \epsilon \ell \kappa \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ follows the pattern of $\ell \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ (Section 100). The second person singular active consists of the long-vowel grade of the stem with no ending added. The other forms add the usual endings to the short-vowel stem.

	PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S 2 3	δείκν υ δεικνύ τω	δείκνυσο
P 2	δείκνυτε	δεικνύ σθω δείκνυ σθε
3	δεικνύντων	δεικνύσθων

Observation: The forms of the second person plural, present imperative active and middle/passive are identical with the corresponding indicative forms.

6. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The verb $\delta \epsilon l \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ forms the present infinitives active and middle/passive in the same way as the athematic verbs already studied (cf. Section 100).

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: δεικνύναι
PRESENT INFINITIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE: δείκνυσθαι

7. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The present participles active and middle/passive of $\delta \epsilon l \nu \bar{\nu} \mu \iota$ are declined as follows:

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

	\mathbf{M}	\mathbf{F}	N
Nom./Voc. S	$\delta arepsilon$ ιχν $\dot{v}_{arsigma}$	δεικνῦσα	δεικνύν
Gen.	δεικνύντος	δεικνύσης	δεικνύντος

PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

	M	\mathbf{F}	N
Nom. S	δεικνύμενος	δεικνυμένη	δεικνύμενον

SECTION 111 401

Observations: (1) As with the other athematic participles, the masculine nominative/vocative singular ends in -ς and has an acute accent; the masculine and neuter declension stem employs the short-vowel grade of the stem + the suffix -ντ-. Again, the feminine declension stem has undergone phonetic change. The masculine and neuter dative plural is δεικνῦσι(ν) (<*δεικνῦντσι[ν]); the feminine genitive plural is δεικνῦσῶν.

(2) The masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active are identical with the third person plural, present imperative active.

111. SUPPLEMENTARY USE OF THE PARTICIPLE

The supplementary participle completes the meaning of a verb. The participle indicates aspect only, not relative time, in the constructions explained below.

1. SUPPLEMENTARY PARTICIPLE WITH VERBS OF EMOTION

Many verbs indicating emotion take a supplementary participle.

One such verb is:

χαίρω, χαιρήσω, —, κεχάρηκα, —, ἐχάρην, "take pleasure, enjoy" χαίρετε τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
You take pleasure doing this.
You enjoy doing this.

Such participles are best translated not by an English participle, as in the first translation above, but by an English gerund, as in the second translation. Compare the circumstantial participle, which states a separate circumstance.

τῖμᾶσθε τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
Doing this, you are honored.
Because you do this, you are honored.

In this example the participle and the main verb cannot be combined into a single verbal expression (cf. "you enjoy doing").

2. SUPPLEMENTARY PARTICIPLE WITH VERBS OF BEGINNING, CEASING, AND ENDURING

Many verbs of beginning, ceasing, and enduring take a supplementary participle. The participle is generally in the present tense.

ἐπανσάμεθα τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. We ceased doing this.

παύσομεν αὐτοὺς τοῦτο ποιοῦντας. We shall stop them (from) doing this. We shall stop their doing this.

These participles must be translated by the English gerund, not the English participle.

The verb $\alpha \varrho \chi \omega$, which in the middle voice means "begin," can take either a supplementary participle or an infinitive, with a difference in meaning.

ἀρξόμεθα τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. We shall begin by doing this. ἀρξόμεθα τοῦτο ποιεῖν. We shall begin to do this.

The supplementary participle with this verb states the first of a series of actions (e.g., "We shall begin by doing this, then we shall do that"); the infinitive indicates the beginning of a single action, and is usually in the present tense.

3. SUPPLEMENTARY PARTICIPLE WITH THE VERBS $\lambda \alpha \nu \theta \acute{a} \nu \omega$, $\phi \theta \acute{a} \nu \omega$, AND $\tau \nu \gamma \chi \acute{a} \nu \omega$

Here are the Principal Parts of three verbs whose meaning is usually completed by a supplementary participle:

λανθάνω, λήσω, ἔλαθον, λέληθα, ——, ——, "escape the notice of (+ acc.)" φθάνω, φθήσομαι, ἔφθασα οτ ἔφθην, ——, ——, "act first; be first (in doing something); anticipate (someone)" τυγχάνω, τεύξομαι, ἔτυχον, τετύχηκα, ——, "happen (to); hit the mark; (+ gen.) obtain"

The supplementary participle with $\tau v \gamma \chi \acute{a} v \omega$ must be rendered by the appropriate English infinitive.

τυγχάνομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. (present participle) We happen to be doing this.

ἐτύχομεν τοῦτο ποιήσαντες. (aorist participle) We happened to do this.

ἐτύχομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. (present participle) We happened to be doing this.

English lacks verbs with the exact meaning of $\lambda a \nu \theta \acute{a} \nu \omega$ and $\varphi \theta \acute{a} \nu \omega$. Sentences with these verbs are best translated in two stages: a literal, if awkward, version, and then a more colloquial version. Note especially that the direct object in the Greek will be translated as a possessive or as the object of a preposition in English.

τοὺς φίλους λανθάνομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. We escape our friends' notice doing this. We do this secretly from our friends. We are doing this secretly from our friends.

τοὺς φίλους ἐλάθομεν τοῦτο ποιήσαντες. We escaped our friends' notice doing this. We did this secretly from our friends.

τοὺς φίλους φθάνομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες. We anticipate our friends (in) doing this. We do this before our friends. We are doing this before our friends.

τούς φίλους $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \dot{\epsilon} \varphi \theta \dot{a} \sigma a \mu \epsilon \nu \\ \dot{\epsilon} \varphi \theta \eta \mu \epsilon \nu \end{array} \right\}$ τοῦτο ποιήσαντες. We anticipated our friends (in) doing this. We "beat" our friends doing this. We did this before our friends.

The participle usually has the same aspect as the finite verb, but an agrist participle together with a present or imperfect indicative shows prior action:

τυγχάνομεν τοῦτο ποιήσαντες. We happen to have done this.

VOCABULARY NOTES

---, ἐχάρην

The adjective $d\mu\alpha\theta\eta\varsigma$, $d\mu\alpha\theta\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma$, "ignorant, stupid," is formed from the root $\mu\alpha\theta$ - (cf. $\mu\alpha\nu\theta\dot{\alpha}\nu\omega$) + alpha privative. From the stem of this adjective is formed the abstract noun $d\mu\alpha\theta\dot{t}a$, $d\mu\alpha\theta\dot{t}a\varsigma$, η , "ignorance, stupidity." Cf. the agent noun $\mu\alpha\theta\eta\tau\dot{\eta}\varsigma$, $\mu\alpha\theta\eta\tau\sigma\ddot{\upsilon}$, δ , "student, pupil" (with which compare, e.g., $\pi \iota \iota \iota \iota \iota$).

The verb $\delta\epsilon\ell\kappa\nu\bar{\nu}\mu\iota$, $\delta\epsilon\ell\xi\omega$, $\delta\epsilon\delta\epsilon\iota\xi\alpha$, $\delta\epsilon\delta\epsilon\iota\chi\alpha$, $\delta\epsilon\delta\epsilon\iota\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\delta\delta\epsilon\ell\chi\theta\eta\nu$, "show," has the root $\delta\epsilon\iota\kappa$ - and is athematic only in the present indicative, imperative, infinitive, and participle, and the imperfect indicative. The present tense stem consists of the root $\delta\epsilon\iota\kappa$ - + the suffix $-\nu\bar{\nu}$ -/ $-\nu\nu$ - and adds the appropriate athematic or thematic endings (cf. Section 110). Several other verbs are formed similarly and show in Principal Part I the suffix + ending $-\nu\bar{\nu}\mu\iota$.

The compound verb $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\iota\delta\epsilon\dot{l}\varkappa\nu\nu\mu\alpha\iota$ means "to show off (something of one's own)," e.g., rhetorical skill. The verbal noun $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\iota}\delta\epsilon\iota\xi\iota\varsigma$, $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\iota\delta\epsilon\dot{\iota}\xi\epsilon\omega\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "display, demonstration," can take an objective genitive of the thing displayed.

The verb $\ell \pi a v \ell \sigma \tau a \mu a \iota$, $\ell \pi a v a \sigma \tau \eta \sigma \sigma \mu a \iota$, $\ell \pi a v \ell \sigma \tau \eta v a$, $\ell \pi a v \ell \sigma \tau \eta v a$, —, "rise in insurrection (against)," takes a dative of the persons against whom one rises. Note that this verb is a double compound: $\ell \pi \iota - + \ell \sigma \tau a \mu a \iota$. The past indicative augment follows both prefixes: compare $\ell \pi a v \ell \sigma \tau \eta v$ (first person singular, root a orist indicative active) with $\ell \pi a v a \sigma \tau \tilde{\omega}$ (first person singular, root a orist subjunctive active). This verb uses intransitive forms of $\ell \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$: present and imperfect middle, future middle, second a orist active, perfect and pluperfect active.

The adjective $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\bar{a}$, $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma v$, "the other (of two)," refers in the singular to an individual contrasted with another individual. In the plural, it refers to one of two contrasted groups. This adjective marks, more strongly than the adjective $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\sigma\varsigma$, $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\eta$, $\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\sigma$, the fact that one person or thing (or group) belongs to a different class from another. The adjective can be repeated and refer in turn to each of the contrasted persons or groups.

Δημοσθένης μέν ταῦτα ποιεῖ, ὁ δ' ἔτερος τάδε.

Demosthenes does these (those) things, but the other man does the following things.

ό μέν έτερος ταῦτα ποιεῖ, ὁ δ' έτερος τάδε.

The one man does these (those) things, but the other man does the following things.

οί μέν ἕτεροι ταῦτα ποιοῦσιν, οί δ' ἔτεροι τάδε.

One group does these (those) things, but the other group does the following things.

ἔτερον τόδε ἢ οὔ;

Is this another (a different, a separate) thing or not?

The adjective $\varkappa o\iota v \acute{o}_{\varsigma}$, $\varkappa o\iota v \acute{\eta}$, $\varkappa o\iota v \acute{o}_{\iota}$, "common," refers to things shared. The phrase $\tau \grave{\alpha}$ $\varkappa o\iota v \acute{\alpha}$ often means "public affairs," and $\tau \grave{o}$ $\varkappa o\iota v \acute{o}_{\iota}$ can mean "the state" (i.e., the city). Koine ($\acute{\eta}$ $\varkappa o\iota v \grave{\eta}$ $\delta\iota \acute{\alpha} \lambda \varepsilon \varkappa \tau o_{\varsigma}$) is a "common" dialect of Greek which developed during the Hellenistic age.

The adjective $\mu \& \sigma \sigma \varsigma$, $\mu \& \sigma \sigma \eta$, $\mu \& \sigma \sigma v$, "middle (of)," has two distinct meanings: in the attributive position it means "middle"; when it precedes the article, it means "(the) middle of (the noun which follows)."

έν τῆ μέση ἀγορᾶ

in the middle market place

(i.e., not the one to the left or the right)

έν μέση τῆ ἀγορᾶ

in the middle of the market place

The adjective $\nu \acute{e}o\varsigma$, $\nu \acute{e}\bar{a}$, $\nu \acute{e}o\nu$, "new, young," was originally * $\nu \acute{e}_{F}o\varsigma$. Compare the stem * νe_{F} - with the English cognate new.

The verbal noun $\sigma \tau \acute{a}\sigma \iota \varsigma$, $\sigma \tau \acute{a}\sigma \epsilon \omega \varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, "civil strife, faction," means literally a "standing"; it is formed from the unreduplicated short-vowel grade of the stem of $\~{i}\sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$: $\sigma \tau \alpha$ -.

The verb $\tau v \gamma \chi \acute{a} r \omega$, $\tau \varepsilon \acute{v} \xi o \mu a \iota$, $\check{\varepsilon} \tau v \chi o v$, $\tau \varepsilon \tau \acute{v} \chi \eta \varkappa a$, —, "happen (to); hit the mark; (+ gen.) obtain," is deponent in the future tense only. Principal Parts III and IV show the zero-grade of the root: $\tau v \chi$ -. Principal Part I has the zero-grade with a nasal infix and the suffix -av-: $\tau v \gamma \chi a v$ -. Principal Part II has the e-grade: $\tau \varepsilon v \xi$ - (<* $\tau \varepsilon v \chi \sigma$ -). Cf. $\mu a v \theta \acute{a} r \omega$, but note the different formation of its future $\mu a \theta \acute{\eta} \sigma o \mu a \iota$. The zero-grade of this root appears also in the noun $\tau \acute{v} \chi \eta$. When this verb means "obtain" it takes an object in the genitive case: $\varepsilon \iota \acute{\varrho} \acute{\eta} r \eta \varsigma \dot{\varepsilon} \tau \acute{v} \chi o \mu \varepsilon v$, "We obtained peace."

Note the difference in meaning between $\delta\pi o\mu\acute{e}\nu\omega$, "await; stand firm; endure," and $\pi a\varrho a\mu\acute{e}\nu\omega$, "stand fast; stay behind."

The verb $\varphi\theta\acute{a}\nu\omega$, $\varphi\theta\acute{\eta}\sigma\sigma\mu\alpha$, $\xi\varphi\theta\alpha\sigma\alpha$ or $\xi\varphi\theta\eta\nu$, ——, ——, "act first; be first (in doing something); anticipate (someone)," is deponent in the future tense only. There is no difference in meaning between the first acrist $\xi\varphi\theta\alpha\sigma\alpha$ and the root acrist $\xi\varphi\theta\eta\nu$, which is conjugated just like $\xi\sigma\eta\nu$ (from $\xi\sigma\eta\mu\iota$). E.g.:

The verb $\chi \alpha l \varrho \omega$, $\chi \alpha \iota \varrho \dot{\eta} \sigma \omega$, —, $\kappa \epsilon \chi \dot{\alpha} \varrho \eta \kappa \alpha$, "rejoice (in), take pleasure (in), enjoy (+ dat.)," is a passive partial depondent: it has an aorist passive, with an active meaning, rather than an aorist active. The present was originally * $\chi \dot{\alpha} \varrho \iota \omega$: cf. $\chi \dot{\alpha} \varrho \iota \varsigma$. The iota "jumped over" the rho. The resulting stem $\chi \alpha \iota \varrho$ - was used, with a suffix, to form the future.

	M/F	N
Nom. S	au l arsigma	$\tau \ell$
Gen.	$ au \ell v o arsigma / au o ilde v$	$ au \ell v o arsigma / au o ilde v$
Dat.	$ au \ell u \iota / au ilde{\phi}$	$ au \ell u \iota / au ilde{\omega}$
Acc.	τίνα	$ au\ell$

 - (3) Note the alternative forms in the genitive and dative singular with the circumflex accent.
 - (4) Note that $\tau l \nu a$ can be either the masculine/feminine accusative singular "whom?" or the neuter plural nominative or accusative "what (things)?"

113. THE INDEFINITE PRONOUN/ADJECTIVE $\tau\iota\varsigma$, $\tau\iota$

As a pronoun, the indefinite $\tau\iota\varsigma$, $\tau\iota$ means "someone, anyone, something, anything."

As an adjective, the indefinite $\tau\iota\varsigma$, $\tau\iota$ means "some, any."

Observations: (1) The indefinite pronoun/adjective differs from the interrogative pronoun/adjective in accent only and is an enclitic. For a summary of enclitics and examples of the use of the indefinite pronoun/adjective, see Section 114.

(2) Note the alternative forms in the genitive and dative singular.

(3) Note that the form $\tau \iota \nu \acute{a}$ can be either the masculine/feminine accusative singular or the neuter nominative or accusative plural.

437

(4) Note that the genitive plural, when accented, takes a circumflex accent on the ultima; cf. Section 114.

114. ENCLITICS SUMMARIZED

Enclitics are words which are closely attached in pronunciation to the word they follow, and which usually affect the accent of the preceding word. In addition to the indefinite pronoun/adjective $\tau\iota\varsigma$, $\tau\iota$, there are a number of other words which are enclitic. Seven words which are enclitic are:

γε: emphasizes or limits the preceding word; "at any rate"

 $-\pi\varepsilon\rho$: adds force to the word it follows

 $\pi o \tau \epsilon$: "at some time, ever"

που: qualifies an assertion, "I suppose"; "somewhere"

 $\pi\omega\varsigma$: "in any way, in some way"

 $\tau \varepsilon$: "and" (often used together with $\kappa \alpha i$) τοι: "let me tell you, you know"

See the Vocabulary Notes of the various units for the uses of these enclitics.

Observe how an enclitic affects the accent of the preceding word:

(1) A word ending with an acute accent (-a-p-ú) followed by an enclitic (e, e-é, e-ẽ) does NOT change its acute accent to a grave accent; the enclitic does not take any accent:

(2) A monosyllabic enclitic following a word with an acute on the penult has no accent:

-a-p-u + e λόγφ τε καὶ ἔργφ by word and deed

A disyllabic enclitic following a word with an acute on the penult takes an accent on its final syllable:

of some men

(3) A word with an acute accent on the antepenult (-á-p-u) receives an additional accent from the enclitic; the enclitic does not take any accent:

-á-p-ú + e ἄνθρωποί τε καὶ θεοί men and gods $-\text{á-p-ú} + \text{e-e} \qquad \text{ἄνθρωποί τινες}$ some men

(4) A word ending in a circumflex keeps its circumflex; the enclitic has no accent:

-a-p- $\tilde{\mathbf{u}}$ + \mathbf{e} $ai \ \tau \bar{\imath} \mu a i \ \tau \tilde{\omega} \nu \ d\gamma a \theta \tilde{\omega} \nu \ \tau \varepsilon \ \kappa a i \ \sigma o \varphi \tilde{\omega} \nu$ the honors of the good and wise -a-p- $\tilde{\mathbf{u}}$ + e-e $ai \ \tau \bar{\imath} \mu a i \ \sigma o \varphi \tilde{\omega} \nu \ \tau \iota \nu \omega \nu$ the honors of some wise men

(5) A word with a circumflex accent on the penult takes an additional accent on the final syllable; the enclitic has no accent:

-a- \tilde{p} - \acute{u} + e $\vec{\epsilon}$ $\varkappa \epsilon \tilde{\imath} v \acute{a}$ $\tau \epsilon$ $\varkappa a \grave{\imath}$ $\tau a \tilde{\imath} \tau a$ those things and these things -a- \tilde{p} - \acute{u} + e-e $\delta \tilde{\omega} \varrho \acute{a}$ $\tau \imath v a$ some presents

(6) A proclitic ($\epsilon i \zeta$, $\epsilon \varkappa / \epsilon \xi$, ϵv , ϵi , $\omega \zeta$, $o v / o v \varkappa / o v \chi$, and the forms of the article δ , η , o i, and a i) takes an acute accent when followed by an enclitic; the enclitic has no accent:

 $\epsilon i' \tau i \varsigma$ of γ' $\alpha \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi o i$ if anyone the men/the men, at least

Thus, if the accent is as far back on the word as it can go (-á-p-u or -a- \tilde{p} -u), the word, when followed by an enclitic, takes an additional acute accent on the final syllable (e.g. -á-p-ú + e, -a- \tilde{p} -ú + e). There is no accent on the enclitic.

If the accent is on the final syllable (-a-p-ũ or -a-p-ú), the accent on the word remains unchanged; there is no accent on the enclitic (-a-p-ú + e, -a-p-ũ + e).

Only in the case of a word with an acute accent on the penult followed by a disyllabic enclitic does the enclitic have an accent, an acute on the final syllable of the word (except for $\tau \iota \nu \tilde{\omega} \nu$, the genitive plural of $\tau \iota \varsigma$, $\tau \iota$).

In a series of enclitics, each takes an acute accent from the following enclitic; the final enclitic of such a series has no accent:

 $\dot{\epsilon}$ âν ποτέ τίς τί τινι $\delta\iota\delta$ $\ddot{\phi}$ if anyone ever gives anything to anyone

Some disyllabic enclitics can be placed at the beginning of a clause or sentence. When this occurs, they take an acute accent on the ultima; this accent becomes a grave accent if no pause follows:

τινὲς μὲν χον̄σον διδοᾱσιν, τινὲς δ' ον. Some give gold, others do not.

115. THE VERB εἰμί, "be"

This verb is found only in the present system active and as a middle deponent in the future. The present system has an athematic conjugation with a number of irregularities. The future has a regular thematic conjugation ($\xi\sigma o\mu\alpha\iota$, $\xi\sigma\eta$ / $\xi\sigma\epsilon\iota$, etc.) except for the third person singular, which is $\xi\sigma\tau\alpha\iota$.

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: εἶναι

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE: M F N Nom. S $\breve{\omega}v$ o $\breve{v}\sigma\alpha$ $\breve{\sigma}v$ Gen. $\breve{\sigma}v\tau\sigma\varsigma$ o $\breve{v}\sigma\eta\varsigma$ $\breve{\sigma}v\tau\sigma\varsigma$

- Observations: (1) Unlike the athematic verbs seen thus far, the verb $\epsilon i\mu \ell$ does not have a long-vowel and a short-vowel grade of the stem. Instead, the forms are built on the e-grade stem $\ell\sigma$ or the zero-grade stem σ -.
 - (2) Note the absence of the final $-\varsigma$ in the second person singular of the present indicative active $\varepsilon \bar{l}$; contrast this with $\tau l\theta \eta \varsigma$, $\delta l\delta \omega \varsigma$, etc.
 - (3) Note that the third person singular indicative active ending is $-\tau \iota$ and not the $-\sigma \iota$ of, e.g., $\delta \ell \delta \omega \sigma \iota$.

- (4) Particular care must be taken in memorizing the third person plural of the present indicative active and all of the imperfect.
- (5) In the imperative the second person singular is irregular; the third person plural form $\ell\sigma\tau\omega\nu$ omits the - ν of the ending - $\nu\tau\omega\nu$; the alternative third person plural form $\delta\nu\tau\omega\nu$ is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active.

The disyllabic forms of the present indicative active of $\varepsilon i\mu l$ (all forms except the second person singular εl) are enclitic and follow the rules for accent given above.

ἀγαθοί ἐσμεν. We are good. εὐδαίμονές ἐστε. You are happy.

At the beginning of a sentence $\ell\sigma\tau\iota(\nu)$ is not an enclitic: it has an acute accent on the penult and can mean "there is" or "it is possible."

ἔστι σοφός τις ἐν τῆ πόλει.
There is some wise man in the city.
ἔστιν ἀπελθεῖν.
It is possible to go away.

116. DATIVE OF THE POSSESSOR

With the verb $\varepsilon i\mu i$ and similar verbs (e.g., $\gamma i\gamma vo\mu\alpha i$), ownership is shown by the dative of the possessor.

έκείνω τῷ ἀνδρί ἐστι μῖκοὰ οἰκία. To that man there is a small house. That man has a small house.

Note the difference between the genitive and the dative when showing possession. The dative stresses the existence of the object and answers the question, "What does that man have?" The genitive in a similar sentence puts stress on the owner and answers the question, "Who has that thing?"

ἐκείνου τοῦ ἀνδρὸς μῖκρά ἐστιν ἡ οἰκία. Of that man small is the house. That man's house is small.

Since the Greek verb form itself contains the subject, the nominative of the personal pronouns is used only for emphasis or contrast.

έγω έδίδαξα τὸν ἀδελφόν.

I taught my brother.

It was I who taught my brother.

Compare the same sentence without the pronoun:

έδίδαξα τὸν ἀδελφόν.

I taught my brother.

Personal pronouns can also be used in nominal sentences:

έγω μεν άγαθός, σύ δε κακός.

I am good; you are bad.

When the enclitic particle $\gamma \varepsilon$ is used with the nominative and dative singular of $\dot{\varepsilon}\gamma\dot{\omega}$, the two words are written together as one; the accent is recessive: $\dot{\varepsilon}\gamma\omega\gamma\varepsilon$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\mu\omega\gamma\varepsilon$.

119. REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

A pronoun in a case other than the nominative which refers back to the subject of its own clause is called a reflexive pronoun: "We love ourselves." "Ourselves" is the reflexive pronoun and refers back to the subject of the sentence, "we." (Be sure to distinguish the English reflexive "-self" from the intensive "-self": "We ourselves love them." Remember that Greek uses $a \vec{v} \tau \delta \zeta$ in the predicate position or by itself in the nominative case as the intensive.)

117. ADVERBIAL ACCUSATIVE

An accusative which limits the meaning of a verb and functions as an adverb is called an adverbial accusative.

τί ταῦτα ἐποίησας;
For what did you do these things?
Why did you do these things?

τίνα τρόπον τοῦτο ἐποίησας; τόνδε τὸν τρόπον τοῦτο ἐποίησα. In what way did you do this? I did this in the following way.

τέλος ἀπῆλθον. In the end they went away. They finally went away.

118. PERSONAL PRONOUNS

Attic Greek uses the first-person pronouns $\partial \gamma \omega$ ("I") and $\dot{\gamma} \mu \epsilon \bar{\iota} \varsigma$ ("we"), and the second-person pronouns $\sigma \dot{v}$ ("you" singular) and $\dot{v} \mu \epsilon \bar{\iota} \varsigma$ ("you" plural). In the third person ("he," "she," "it," "they"), Attic Greek uses the demonstrative pronouns in the nominative case ($o \dot{v} \tau o \varsigma$, $o \dot{\delta} \epsilon$, $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \epsilon \bar{\iota} v o \varsigma$) and forms of $a \dot{v} \tau \dot{\sigma} \varsigma$ in cases other than the nominative.

Observations: (1) In the singular, the unaccented forms are alternative enclitic forms and are less emphatic.

(2) Note that Greek, unlike English, distinguishes between singular and plural forms of the second person pronoun. Unlike many modern languages, Greek does NOT use a polite plural form for the singular "you."

Observations: (1) Since the reflexive pronoun must refer back to the subject of the sentence, it never appears in the nominative case.

- (2) The reflexive pronoun uses $a \vec{v} \tau \delta \zeta$, $a \vec{v} \tau \eta$, $a \vec{v} \tau \delta$ either as part of a compound form (e.g., $\vec{\epsilon} \mu a v \tau o \tilde{v}$) in which it alone is declined or together with the personal pronoun (e.g., $\eta \mu \tilde{\omega} v a \vec{v} \tau \tilde{\omega} v$) where both pronouns are declined.
- (3) Note that only the third-person reflexive pronoun has a neuter.
- (4) In the plural, the third-person reflexives, both masculine and feminine, have alternative forms, $\delta av\tau \tilde{\omega} v$, etc. and $\sigma \phi \tilde{\omega} v$ $a \tilde{v} \tau \tilde{\omega} v$, etc.

(5) All forms of σεαντοῦ, σεαντῆς and ἐαντοῦ, ἑαντῆς, ἑαντοῦ can contract the first two vowels to give σαντοῦ, σαντῆς, etc. and αὐτοῦ, αὐτῆς, αὐτοῦ, etc. Distinguish carefully between the contracted third person reflexive pronoun forms and the corresponding forms of αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό; they differ only in breathing: e.g., αὐτόν "himself"; αὐτόν "him."

120. POSSESSION WITH PERSONAL AND REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

To show possession in the first and second persons, either the possessive adjective or the genitive of the personal pronoun (enclitic in the singular) can be used. The possessive adjectives are:

```
ἐμός, ἐμή, ἐμόν, "my, mine" ἡμέτερος, ἡμετέρα, ἡμέτερον, "our, ours" σός, σή, σόν, "your, yours (addressing one person)" ὑμέτερος, ὑμετέρα, ὑμέτερον, "your, yours (addressing more than one person)"
```

These possessive adjectives are the equivalent of the genitive of the personal pronouns. The possessive adjective is used in the attributive position, the genitive of the personal pronoun in the predicate position:

δ ἐμὸς φίλος	δ φίλος μου	my friend
οί ἐμοὶ φίλοι	οί φίλοι μου	my friends
δ ήμέτερος φίλος	δ φίλος ήμῶν	our friend
οί ημέτεοοι φίλοι	οί φίλοι ήμῶν	our friends
δ σὸς ἀδελφός	δ άδελφός σου	your brother (addressing one person)
οί σοὶ ἀδελφοί	οί άδελφοί σου	your brothers (addressing one person)
δ τιμέτερος ἀδελφός	δ άδελφὸς τμῶν	your brother (addressing more than one)
οί ὑμέτεροι ἀδελφοί	οί ἀδελφοὶ ὑμῶν	your brothers (addressing more than one)

Thus, to express the idea "my friend," Greek can use either the adjective ($\delta \ell \mu \delta \zeta \varphi (\lambda \delta \zeta)$) or the genitive of the personal pronoun ($\delta \varphi (\lambda \delta \zeta) \mu \delta v$, literally, "the friend of me").

SECTION 120 445

To show possession in the third person, the genitive of a demonstrative pronoun in the attributive position or the genitive of $a \dot{v} \tau \delta \zeta$, $a \dot{v} \tau \dot{\eta}$, $a \dot{v} \tau \delta$ in the predicate position is used:

δ τούτου φίλος	ό φίλος αὐτοῦ	his friend
δ ταύτης φίλος	δ φίλος αὐτῆς	her friend
οί τούτου φίλοι	οί φίλοι αὐτοῦ	his friends
οί ταύτης φίλοι	οί φίλοι αὐτῆς	her friends
δ τούτων φίλος	δ φίλος αὐτῶν	their friend
οί τούτων φίλοι	οί φίλοι αὐτῶν	their friends

To show reflexive possession in the singular, the genitive of the reflexive pronoun is used in the attributive position:

ἔπεμψα τὸν ἐμαυτοῦ ἀδελφόν. I sent my (own) brother.

ἔπεμψας τὸν σεαυτοῦ ἀδελφόν. You sent your (own) brother.

έπεμψε τὸν ἐαυτοῦ ἀδελφόν.

He sent his (own) brother.

Less commonly, the possessive adjectives $\dot{\epsilon}\mu\delta\varsigma$ and $\sigma\delta\varsigma$ are used:

ἔπεμψα τὸν ἐμὸν ἀδελφόν.

I sent my brother.

To show reflexive possession in the plural, in the first and second persons the adjectives $\eta\mu\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, $\eta\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\bar{a}$, $\eta\mu\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma v$ and $\dot{v}\mu\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, $\dot{v}\mu\epsilon\tau\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\bar{a}$, $\dot{v}\mu\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma v$ can be used by themselves, but they are usually strengthened by $a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\omega}v$, which agrees with the genitive idea in the possessive adjective. To show reflexive possession in the third person plural, $\dot{\epsilon}av\tau\tilde{\omega}v$ is used in the attributive position, or the reflexive possessive adjective $\sigma\varphi\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, $\sigma\varphi\epsilon\tau\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\bar{a}$, $\sigma\varphi\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma v$, strengthened by $a\dot{v}\tau\tilde{\omega}v$, can be used:

You sent your (own) brother.

They sent their (own) brother.

VOCABULARY NOTES

In the verb $ai\varrho\epsilon\omega$, $ai\varrho\eta\sigma\omega$, $\epsilon i\lambda o\nu$, $\eta\varrho\eta\varkappa\alpha$, $\eta\varrho\eta\varkappa\alpha$, $\eta\varrho\epsilon\theta\eta\nu$, "take, capture; (mid.) choose," observe that in the perfect active, perfect middle, and aorist passive, the iota of the diphthong ai- becomes a subscript. As with $\eta\varrho\chi\alpha$ and $\eta\varrho\chi\alpha$ from $\delta\varrho\chi\omega$, the η - of the perfect stem remains unchanged throughout the perfect and the pluperfect. The unaugmented form of the aorist passive tense stem is $ai\varrho\epsilon\theta$ -. Note also the short vowel before the - θ - of the aorist passive tense stem; contrast this with the - η - of $\epsilon \pi o\iota\eta\theta\eta\nu$, $\epsilon \nu i \nu i \nu i \eta\theta\eta\nu$. The second aorist $\epsilon i \lambda o\nu$ was borrowed from another root; the unaugmented second aorist active and middle tense stem is $\epsilon\lambda$ -.

In the active $\alpha l\varrho \acute{e}\omega$ means "take, capture" and in the middle "choose." The passive means "be chosen" NOT "be captured": i.e., it is the passive of the middle and not of the active. For the passive "I am captured" Attic Greek uses the passive of $\lambda a\mu\beta\acute{a}\nu\omega$ or another verb: $\delta\lambda l\sigma\nu\omega\mu\alpha$, $\delta\lambda\dot{\omega}\sigma\sigma\mu\alpha$, $\delta\dot{\alpha}\lambda\omega\nu$ or $\eta\lambda\omega\nu$, $\delta\dot{\alpha}\lambda\omega\nu$ or $\eta\lambda\omega\nu$, ..., "be captured."

The verb $ai\sigma\theta \acute{a}vo\mu a\iota$, $ai\sigma\theta \acute{\eta}\sigma o\mu a\iota$, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\theta \acute{o}\mu\eta\nu$, ——, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\theta\eta\mu a\iota$, ——, "perceive," is a deponent with a second agrist middle. Note the iota subscript in Principal Parts III and V.

For the conjugation of $\varepsilon l\mu l$, $\varepsilon \sigma o \mu a \iota$, —, —, —, "be," see Section 115. The neuter singular dative of the present participle is employed in the idiomatic phrase $\tau \tilde{\varphi}$ $\delta \nu \tau \iota$, "really, truly" (literally "with respect to what is, with respect to reality").

The impersonal verb (one with no personal subject) $\check{\epsilon}\xi\epsilon\sigma\tau\iota(v)$, $\check{\epsilon}\xi\check{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$, —, , —, "it is possible," takes either a dative and an infinitive or an accusative and an infinitive. When used impersonally, $\check{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota(v)$ can take the same constructions. Note the accent on the penult of the future: $\check{\epsilon}\xi\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$ ($<*\check{\epsilon}\xi\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\epsilon\tau\iota$).

ἐξῆν τῷ Σωκράτει διδάσκειν τοὺς νεāνίāς. ἐξῆν τὸν Σωκράτη διδάσκειν τοὺς νεāνίāς.

It was possible for Sokrates to teach the young men.

The verb $\mathcal{E}\pi o\mu a\iota$, $\mathcal{E}\psi o\mu a\iota$, $\mathcal{E}\sigma\pi o\mu \eta\nu$, —, —, "follow," governs the dative case. The root of the word was sek-. The loss of the initial s accounts for the rough breathing in the first two principal parts. The Indo-European labiovelar (k^w) became a - π - in this word in Greek. The augmented present tense stem is $\mathcal{E}\pi$ - (e.g., $\mathcal{E}\pi o\mu \eta\nu$, $\mathcal{E}\pi o\nu$). Principal Part III shows a past indicative augment with a rough breathing on the analogy of the first two principal parts, the zero-grade of the stem, and the ending $-o\mu \eta\nu$. The unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem is $\sigma\pi$ -, e.g., $\sigma\pi o\tilde{\nu}$ $\tau o\acute{\nu}\tau \omega$, "follow that man."

The enclitic particle $-\pi \epsilon \varrho$ has been seen in the adverb $\kappa \alpha i \pi \epsilon \varrho$. It is often added to forms of the relative pronoun:

δ Σωκράτης ὅσπερ τὴν πόλιν ἀγαθὰ ἀεὶ ἔπρᾶττεν ὑπὸ τῶν κακῶν πολῖτῶν ἐβλάβη.

Sokrates, just the one who was always doing good things to the city, was harmed by the bad citizens.

The adjectives $\pi o \tilde{\iota} o \varsigma$, $\pi o l \tilde{a}$, $\pi o \tilde{\iota} o v$, "of what kind?," $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o \varsigma$, $\tau o \iota a \tilde{v} \tau \eta$, $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o r v$, "of this/that sort, such (as this)," and $o \tilde{\iota} o \varsigma$, $o \tilde{\iota} a$, $o \tilde{\iota} o v$, "such as, of the sort which," are a set of correlative adjectives. In such a series, the word beginning with π - is interrogative, the word beginning with τ - is demonstrative, and the word beginning with the rough breathing is either a relative (introducing a relative clause) or an exclamatory word.

ποῖός ἐστιν ὁ Σωμράτης;

What kind of man is Sokrates?

τοιοῦτός ἐστιν δ Σωκράτης οίον πάντες τιμώσιν.

Sokrates is that sort of man, the sort which all men honor.

Sokrates is the sort of man whom all men honor.

οίός έστιν δ Σωκράτης.

What sort of man Sokrates is!

VOCABULARY NOTES 449

The phrase $oló\varsigma \tau' \epsilon l\mu l$ is an idiom meaning "be able"; it governs a complementary infinitive:

οὐχ οἶοί τ' ἐσμὲν νῖκᾶν. We are not able to win.

Note the accent on the enclitic forms of the verb $\varepsilon l\mu l$ in this idiom: it follows the general rule that when an enclitic follows an elided syllable (of either a non-enclitic or an enclitic word), it receives an accent (cf. the Appendix, p. 613).

Note that the verb $\delta\varrho\acute{a}\omega$, $\delta'\psi o\mu a\iota$, $\epsilon \delta \delta or$, $\delta'\varrho \delta a\varkappa a$ or $\delta'\omega \varrho \delta \varkappa a$, $\delta'\omega \varrho \delta \mu a\iota$ or $\delta'\mu \mu a\iota$, $\delta'\varphi \theta \eta v$, "see," uses several different roots. The imperfect is $\delta'\omega \varrho \omega v$, $\delta'\omega \varrho \delta \varsigma$, etc., with a double augment. The root of the second agrist was $*_{\digamma}\iota\delta$ -, $*_{\digamma}^{\rlap}\iota\delta$ -, in its augmented form. The loss of the intervocalic digamma accounts for the initial diphthong in $\epsilon \delta'\delta ov$; the agrist subjunctive is $\delta'\delta\omega$, $\delta'\delta\eta\varsigma$, etc. The second person singular, agrist imperative active is accented on the ultima: $\delta'\delta$. Cf. δ' a δ' e δ' emember that in compounds these imperatives have a recessive accent. The unaugmented agrist passive tense stem is $\delta' \varphi \theta$ -.

Note the acute accent which distinguishes the interrogative $\tau l \varsigma$, τl from the enclitic indefinite $\tau \iota \varsigma$, $\tau \iota$:

τίς ἀνήφ τοῦτο ἐποίησεν; What man did this? ἀνήφ τις τοῦτο ἐποίησεν.

Some man did this.

In $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o \varsigma$, $\tau o \iota a \tilde{v} \tau \eta$, $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o / \tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o v$ note the alternative forms in the neuter nominative/vocative/accusative singular: $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o$ and $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o v$. The word is declined like $o \tilde{v} \tau o \varsigma$, $a \tilde{v} \tau \eta$, $\tau o \tilde{v} \tau o$, with the neuter nominative/vocative/accusative plural $\tau o \iota a \tilde{v} \tau a$, and the genitive plural of all three genders $\tau o \iota o \tilde{v} \tau o v$.

The verb $\varphi \acute{e} \varrho \omega$, $o \acute{l} \sigma \omega$, $\mathring{\eta} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \varkappa \alpha$ or $\mathring{\eta} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \alpha$, $\mathring{e} \imath \mathring{\eta} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \varkappa \alpha$, $\mathring{e} \imath \mathring{\eta} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \varkappa \alpha$, $\mathring{e} \imath \mathring{\eta} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \varkappa \alpha$, $\mathring{e} \imath \imath \mathring{\eta} \imath \imath \imath \imath \varkappa \alpha$, "bring, carry, bear; (mid.) win," uses three different roots. In the aorist there are both first and second aorist forms with no difference in meaning; the first aorist forms are much more common in prose in the indicative than are the second aorist forms. In the optative, both $\mathring{e} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \iota \iota \iota \iota$, and $\mathring{e} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \iota \iota \iota \iota$, are found. The infinitive is $\mathring{e} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \iota \iota \iota$ and the participle is usually $\mathring{e} \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \imath \iota \iota$.

In the compound $\delta\iota\alpha\varphi\acute{e}\varrho\omega$, the prefix can have its usual spatial meaning of "through."

διαφέρομεν τοὺς λίθους διὰ τοῦ πεδίου. We carry the rocks through the plain.

The word can also mean "be different (from), be better (than), excel," and the person from whom one differs or than who one is better is put in the genitive case (genitive of comparison).

The compound $\sigma v \mu \varphi \dot{\epsilon} \rho \omega$ is used impersonally (in the third person singular) to mean "it is expedient"; this verb can govern an infinitive. The verb can also be used personally to mean "bring things together, confer a benefit."

UNIT 16

121. THE VERB $\varphi\eta\mu\ell$, "say, affirm, assert"

The verb $\varphi \eta \mu \ell$ is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses:

φημί, φήσω, ἔφησα, ——, ——, "say, affirm, assert"

This verb has only an active voice. It is conjugated exactly like $lor \eta \mu \iota$ (Section 100) in the present and imperfect, except that:

- (1) In the present indicative active all forms except the second person singular are enclitic (cf. $\epsilon i \mu l$, Section 115).
- (2) In the present and imperfect indicative active, and in the present imperative active, the second person singular is different.

The present tense stem shows the usual vowel gradation:

Long-vowel grade: $\varphi \eta$ -Short-vowel grade: $\varphi \alpha$ -

The athematic forms of this verb are as follows.

	PRESENT	IMPERFECT	PRESENT	PRESENT	PRESENT
	IND.	IND.	SUBJ.	OPT.	IMPER.
	ACTIVE	ACTIVE	ACTIVE	ACTIVE	ACTIVE
S 1	φημί	ἔφην	$arphi$ $\widetilde{oldsymbol{\omega}}$	φαίην

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: φάναι
PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

Observations: (1) Note the iota subscript in the second person singular, present indicative active.

- (2) In the third person plural, present indicative active the ending contracts with the stem. Cf. $i\sigma\tau\tilde{\alpha}\sigma\iota(\nu)$.
- (3) The ending $-\sigma\theta\alpha$ of the second person singular, imperfect indicative active appears also in the form $\tilde{\eta}\sigma\theta\alpha$, from $\varepsilon l\mu l$.
- (4) The subjunctive employs a stem $\varphi\varepsilon$ which contracts with the endings (cf. the stem $\delta\sigma\tau\varepsilon$ in the present subjunctive active of $\delta\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$).
- (5) The second person plural, present indicative and imperative active are identical except for their accent.
- (6) The participle is declined exactly like loτάς, loτᾶσα, loτάν. The third person plural, present imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active.
- (7) In Attic prose, instead of the participle φάς, φᾶσα, φάν, the participle of the related inchoative verb φάσκω, ——, ——, , ——, , "say," is used.

122. THE VERB γιγνώσκω, "perceive, recognize, know"

The verb γιγνώσκω has an athematic second agrist active:

γιγνώσκω, γνώσομαι, ἔγνων, ἔγνωκα, ἔγνωσμαι, ἐγνώσθην, "perceive, recognize, know"

This verb does not form an aorist middle.

The second agrist active tense stem shows vowel gradation:

Long-vowel grade: $\gamma \nu \omega$ Short-vowel grade: $\gamma \nu \omega$ -

Like the athematic second agrist $\check{e}\sigma\tau\eta\nu$ (Section 102), $\check{e}\gamma\nu\omega\nu$ is a root agrist: the long-vowel grade appears throughout the indicative and in the imperative and infinitive; the short-vowel grade in the subjunctive and optative, and in the masculine/neuter participal stem.

The usual endings are employed. The subjunctive, optative, and participle are exactly like the equivalent second agrist forms of $\delta i\delta\omega\mu\iota$.

- (3) The third person plural, agrist imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the agrist participle active. Note the shortening of the vowel of the stem before the ending.

123. FUTURE OPTATIVE

The future optative (one of whose functions is to replace a future indicative in one type of indirect statement; see Section 125) is formed as follows.

The future optative active adds to the future active and middle tense stem the endings of the present optative active of thematic verbs. The future optative middle adds to this stem the endings of the present optative middle/passive of thematic verbs.

The future optative passive adds to the future passive tense stem the endings of the present optative middle/passive of thematic verbs.

	FUTURE OPTATIVE ACTIVE	FUTURE OPTATIVE MIDDLE	FUTURE OPTATIVE PASSIVE
1	παιδεύσ οιμι	παιδευσ οίμην	παιδευθησ οίμην
2	παιδεύσ οις	παιδεύσοι ο	παιδευθήσοιο
3	παιδεύσ οι	παιδεύσοιτο	παιδευθήσοιτο
1	παιδεύσ οιμεν	παιδευσ οίμεθα	παιδευθησ οίμεθα
2	παιδεύσ οιτε	παιδεύσ οισθε	παιδευθήσ οισθε
3	παιδεύσ οιεν	παιδεύσ οιντο	παιδευθήσ οιντο

Verbs whose future active and middle tense stem ends in ε or a form the future optative active in the same way as the present optative active of $\pi o \iota \acute{\epsilon} \omega$ and $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$. Thus, from $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\omega$: $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \epsilon\lambda o \tilde{\iota}\mu\iota$, $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \epsilon\lambda o \tilde{\iota}\varsigma$, etc., or $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \epsilon\lambda o \mathring{\iota}\eta\nu$, $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \epsilon\lambda o \mathring{\iota}\eta\varsigma$, etc. The alternative endings are more common in the plural. See the Appendix, p. 656.

The future optative middle of these verbs is formed like the present optative middle/passive of $\pi o \iota \acute{\epsilon} \omega$ or $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$. Thus, from $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\omega$: $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \epsilon\lambda o \acute{\iota}\mu\eta\nu$, $\mathring{a}\gamma\gamma \epsilon\lambda o \~{\iota}o$, etc.

Remember that the future optative passive of all verbs is formed separately, from Principal Part VI.

124. FUTURE INFINITIVE

The future infinitive (one of whose functions is to replace a future indicative in one type of indirect statement; cf. Section 125) is formed as follows.

The future infinitive active adds to the future active and middle tense stem the ending $-\epsilon\iota\nu$; the future infinitive middle adds to this stem the ending $-\epsilon\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$. The future infinitive passive adds to the future passive tense stem the ending $-\epsilon\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$.

παιδεύσ ειν	παιδεύσ εσθαι	παιδευθήσ εσθαι
INFINITIVE ACTIVE	FUTURE INFINITIVE MIDDLE	FUTURE INFINITIVE PASSIVE

Verbs whose future active and middle tense stem ends in ε or α have a future infinitive active and middle formed like the present infinitive active and middle/passive of $\pi o \iota \acute{\epsilon} \omega$ and $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$.

SECTION 125 465

Thus the future infinitive active of $d\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omega$, for example, is $d\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\nu$, and the future infinitive middle is $d\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\tilde{\iota}\sigma\theta\alpha\iota$.

Remember that the future infinitive passive of all verbs is formed separately, from Principal Part VI.

125. INDIRECT STATEMENT

Statements can be quoted either directly or indirectly. Direct quotation preserves the speaker's original words, which in English are set off by quotation marks. But indirect quotation, or indirect statement, incorporates the original words into a complex sentence.

He says, "Sokrates is doing this." (direct quotation) He says that Sokrates is doing this. (indirect statement)

Indirect statement can be introduced not only by verbs of saying, but also by verbs of thinking, believing, knowing, and perceiving (e.g., He believes that Sokrates is doing this).

Greek has three different ways of expressing indirect statement. The various introductory verbs take one or more of these three constructions.

A list of verbs already learned, and those presented in this Section, showing the constructions which each commonly takes, is at the end of the Section.

The three types of indirect statement are as follows:

- 1. FINITE VERB introduced by the conjunctions $\delta \tau \iota / \delta \varsigma$, "that"
- 2. INFINITIVE + subject accusative
- 3. PARTICIPLE + subject accusative

1. FINITE VERB INTRODUCED BY ὅτι/ὡς

One verb which introduces this construction is $\lambda \ell \gamma \omega$:

λέγω, έρῶ or λέξω, εἶπον or ἔλεξα, εἴρηκα, εἴρημαι or λέλεγμαι, ἐλέχθην or ἐρρήθην, "say, speak"

WHEN THE INTRODUCTORY VERB IS IN A PRIMARY TENSE (PRESENT, PERFECT, OR FUTURE), ALL VERBS IN THE INDIRECT STATEMENT RETAIN THEIR ORIGINAL MOOD AND TENSE. NEGATIVES REMAIN UNCHANGED.

λέγει
$$\left\{ egin{array}{l} \Hat{0} & \ \Hat{\omega} & \ \end{matrix} ight\} \Sigma$$
ωκράτης τοῦτο ποιεῖ.

He says that Sokrates is doing this.

He will say that Sokrates did not do this.

WHEN THE INTRODUCTORY VERB IS IN A SECONDARY TENSE (IMPERFECT, AORIST OR PLUPERFECT), ALL VERBS IN THE INDIRECT STATEMENT ARE CHANGED FROM THE INDICATIVE TO THE OPTATIVE OF THE SAME TENSE AS IN THE ORIGINAL STATEMENT. NEGATIVES REMAIN UNCHANGED.

εἶπεν
$$\left\{ egin{array}{l} \Hat{\sigma} \ \& \varsigma \end{array} ight\} \Sigma ω κράτης τοῦτο ποιοίη.$$

He said that Sokrates was doing this.

είπεν $$\left\{ egin{array}{l} \"{\delta au \iota} \\ \dot{\delta au} \end{array} ight\} \Sigma ωκράτης τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσειεν.$$

He said that Sokrates did not do this.

The present optative $\pi o \iota o i \eta$ shows that the tense of the original statement was present: he said, "Sokrates is doing this." The aorist optative $\pi o \iota \eta \sigma \epsilon \iota \epsilon \nu$ shows that the tense of the original statement was aorist: he said, "Sokrates did not do this." In English, when the introductory verb is in past time, one often alters the tense of the verbs in indirect statement: e.g., "is doing" becomes "was doing," and "did not do" can become "had not done."

Such a change of tense never occurs in Greek. Instead, there is a change of mood from indicative to optative, while the tense remains the same.

In this construction Greek uses the future optative, to stand in place of a future indicative.

$$\left\{ egin{array}{l} \Hat{\sigma} au_i \ \& arphi \end{array} ight\} \Sigma \omega$$
κράτης τοῦτο ποιήσοι.

He said that Sokrates would do this.

For the formation of the future optative see Section 123. In the translation above, English "would" represents an original "will," i.e., a future indicative: he said, "Sokrates will do this." Distinguish this carefully from the meaning of the optative in a future less vivid ("should/would") conditional sentence.

The perfect optative, which can stand for an original perfect indicative, is rare. Its forms are given in the Appendix, pages 663-64 and 666.

When an optative stands for an indicative in indirect statement, it shows time as well as aspect. A present optative places the action of the indirect statement at a time simultaneous with that of the introductory verb; an aorist optative places the action at a time prior to that of the introductory verb; a future optative places the action at a time subsequent to that of the main verb. Contrast, e.g., purpose clauses in secondary sequence, where the tenses of the optative indicate aspect only.

Sometimes, when the introductory verb is in past time, verbs of the original statement remain in the indicative and are not changed to the optative. This usage is called the retained indicative and gives added vividness to the quoted statement, a vividness which cannot be represented in translation.

ight. egin{array}{l} \Sigma \omega \varkappa \varrho \Hat \sigma \eta arphi \ au o \~v au \sigma \iota \iota \iota \end{split}
ight.$$

He said that Sokrates would do this.

The imperfect and pluperfect, which lack an optative, are normally represented in indirect statement by a retained indicative.

In all of the examples above the verb of the original statement was in the indicative mood. The treatment of original subjunctives, optatives, and complex sentences in indirect statement is explained in the Appendix, pages 760–68.

Greek, like English, changes the person of the verb in an indirect statement when this is necessary: e.g., Sokrates says, "I did it"; Sokrates says that he (= Sokrates) did it.

2. INFINITIVE PLUS SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE

Many verbs introduce a second type of indirect statement in which an indicative verb of the original statement is replaced by the infinitive of the same tense and the subject of the original finite verb (whether separately expressed or not) appears in the accusative case as the subject of the infinitive. There is no introductory conjunction. Direct and indirect objects keep their own cases; negatives remain unchanged.

This construction remains the same, regardless of the tense of the introductory nerh.

The infinitive, which here stands for an original indicative, shows time as well as aspect. A present infinitive shows time simultaneous with that of the introductory verb; an aorist infinitive shows prior time; a future infinitive shows subsequent time; and a perfect infinitive describes an action already completed.

For the formation of the future infinitive see Section 124.

One verb which introduces this construction is $\nu o \mu l \zeta \omega$:

νομίζω, νομιῶ, ἐνόμισα, νενόμικα, νενόμισμαι, ἐνομίσθην, "consider, think, believe" νομίζει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιεῖν.

He thinks that Sokrates is doing this.

νομίζει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.

He thinks that Sokrates did this.

νομίζει Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσειν.

He thinks that Sokrates will not do this.

ένόμισε Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσειν.

He thought that Sokrates would not do this.

WHEN THE SUBJECT OF THE INFINITIVE IS THE SAME AS THAT OF THE INTRODUCTORY VERB, NO SEPARATE SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE APPEARS. WHEN THE SUBJECT IS DIFFERENT, IT MUST APPEAR.

νομίζει τοῦτο ποιήσειν.

He thinks that he (= the same person) will do this.

νομίζει αὐτὸν τοῦτο ποιήσειν.

He thinks that he (= someone else) will do this.

A predicate adjective agrees with the accusative subject of an infinitive in indirect statement, but with the subject of the introductory verb when the subject of the infinitive is the same and is not separately expressed.

νομίζει Σωκράτη ἀγαθὸν εἶναι.

He thinks that Sokrates is good.

νομίζει άγαθός είναι.

He thinks that he (= the same person) is good.

The imperfect and pluperfect tenses, which lack infinitives, can be represented in indirect statement by the present and perfect infinitives whenever the context makes the time relationship clear. This usage is illustrated in the Appendix.

3. PARTICIPLE PLUS SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE

Many verbs introduce a third type of indirect statement in which an indicative of the original statement is replaced by the participle of the same tense and the subject of the original finite verb (whether separately expressed in the original statement or not) appears in the accusative case. There is no introductory conjunction. Direct and indirect objects keep their own cases. Negatives remain unchanged.

SECTION 125 469

This construction remains the same, regardless of the tense of the introductory verb.

Indirect statement with the participle will present no difficulties since it follows exactly the same rules as indirect statement with the infinitive.

Three verbs which can introduce this construction are $\dot{a}\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omega$, $a\dot{l}\sigma\theta\dot{a}vo\mu\alpha\iota$, and $\dot{a}\kappa o\dot{v}\omega$.

ἀγγέλλει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιοῦντα. He announces that Sokrates is doing this.

ἀγγέλλει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιήσαντα. He announces that Sokrates did this.

ἀγγέλλει Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσοντα. He announces that Sokrates will not do this.

ἥγγειλε Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσοντα. He announced that Sokrates would not do this.

Participles in indirect statement, like infinitives when so used, stand

Participles in indirect statement, like infinitives when so used, stand for original indicatives and show time as well as aspect.

αἰσθάνονται κακοὶ ὄντες.

They perceive that they (='the same people) are evil.

αλσθάνονται αὐτούς κακούς ὄντας.

They perceive that they (= other people) are evil.

Predicate adjectives agree with the accusative subject of the participle or, when this is not expressed, with the subject of the introductory verb, as in the examples above.

With $\partial \omega \partial \omega$, this form of indirect statement conveys an intellectually perceived fact. The same verb can also take an object in the genitive case, accompanied by a participle (not in indirect statement) to describe something physically perceived.

ἀκούει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιοῦντα. He hears that Sokrates is doing this. ἀκούει Σωκράτους τοῦτο ποιοῦντος. He hears Sokrates doing this. The imperfect and pluperfect tenses, which lack participles, can be represented by present and perfect participles whenever the context makes the time relationship clear. This usage is illustrated in the Appendix.

4. THE THREE TYPES OF INDIRECT STATEMENT COMPARED

1. FINITE VERB introduced by $\delta \tau \iota / \delta \varsigma$

Introductory verb in primary tense:

All verbs of the original statement remain the same except for any necessary change of person.

Introductory verb in secondary tense:

Indicatives of the original statement are changed to optatives of the same tense, $\ensuremath{\mathsf{OR}}$ indicatives of the original statement are retained for vividness; person is changed when necessary.

2. INFINITIVE + subject accusative

Indicatives of the original statement are changed to infinitives of the same tense, AND the subject of the original statement appears in the accusative case as the subject of the infinitive.

3. PARTICIPLE + subject accusative

Indicatives of the original statement are changed to participles of the same tense, AND the subject of the original statement appears in the accusative case and the participle agrees with it.

5. INTRODUCTORY VERBS CLASSIFIED

Here is a list of verbs already introduced, and verbs presented in this Unit, which introduce the three types of indirect statement.

126. RETAINED SUBJUNCTIVE

Just as in indirect statement with a finite verb an original indicative can be retained after an introductory verb in a secondary tense, instead of being changed to an optative, so also in purpose clauses and fear clauses introduced by a main verb in a secondary tense a subjunctive can be retained instead of being changed to an optative according to sequence of moods.

The retained subjunctive presents the intention or fear more vividly than the optative. This vividness cannot be represented in translation.

έφοβούμεθα μὴ αἰσχοὰ ποιοίη. (optative) We feared that he might do shameful things.

ἐφοβούμεθα μὴ αἰσχρὰ ποιῆ. (retained subjunctive) We feared that he might do shameful things.

 $\tilde{\eta}\lambda\theta$ εν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἵνα χορεύσαι. (optative) He came into the city in order that he might dance.

ἥλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἴνα χορεύση. (retained subjunctive) He came into the city in order that he might dance.

127. THE ADJECTIVE πολύς, πολλή, πολύ, "much, many"

The adjective $\pi o \lambda \dot{v} \varsigma$, $\pi o \lambda \dot{v}$, $\pi o \lambda \dot{v}$ has forms belonging to the first, second, and third declensions.

The masculine and neuter nominative and accusative singular belong to the third declension and use the stem $\pi o \lambda v$.

All other forms use the stem $\pi o \lambda \lambda$ - and are declined like $\dot{a}\gamma \alpha \theta \delta \varsigma$, $\dot{a}\gamma \alpha \theta \delta \dot{\nu}$. There is no vocative.

128. THE NOUN $va\tilde{v}\varsigma$, $v\epsilon\dot{\omega}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "ship"

The third-declension noun $\nu a \tilde{v} \varsigma$, $\nu \epsilon \omega \varsigma$, η , "ship," is irregular.

Nom. S ναῦς Gen. νεώς Dat. νηί Acc. ναῦν Voc. $va\tilde{v}$ Nom./Voc. P νῆες Gen. $v \in \widetilde{\mathbf{\omega}} \mathbf{v}$ Dat. νανσί(ν) Acc. ναῦς

- Observations: (1) This noun has two stems. The stem vav- appears in the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular, and in the dative and accusative plural. The stem $v\eta$ appears elsewhere. The genitive singular was originally $v\eta \delta \varsigma$, but by quantitative metathesis the form became $v\epsilon \delta \varsigma$ (cf. $\pi \delta \lambda \epsilon \omega \varsigma$). The genitive plural imitates the genitive singular.
 - (2) Note that the accusative plural is the same as the nominative singular.

VOCABULARY NOTES

In the verb $\beta\alpha i\nu\omega$, $-\beta\dot{\eta}\sigma o\mu\alpha\iota$, $-\ddot{\epsilon}\beta\eta\nu$, $\beta\dot{\epsilon}\beta\eta\varkappa\alpha$, ——, ——, "walk, step, go," the future and a rist tenses appear only in compounds. The future tense is deponent; the a rist is a root a rist, i.e., an athematic second a rist conjugated exactly like $\ddot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\nu$ (from $\ddot{\iota}\sigma\tau\eta\mu\iota$): indicative $-\ddot{\epsilon}\beta\eta\nu$, $-\ddot{\epsilon}\beta\eta\varsigma$, etc.; subjunctive $-\beta\tilde{\omega}$, $-\beta\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, etc.; optative $-\beta\alpha i\eta\nu$, $-\beta\alpha i\eta\varsigma$, etc.; imperative $-\beta\tilde{\eta}\theta\iota$, $-\beta\dot{\eta}\tau\omega$, etc.; infinitive $-\beta\tilde{\eta}\nu\alpha\iota$; participle $-\beta\dot{\alpha}\varsigma$, $-\beta\tilde{\alpha}\sigma\alpha$, $-\beta\dot{\alpha}\nu$.

The compound verb $dva\beta a lv\omega$, "go up, go upland, board, mount," can be used of someone going up to speak in a public assembly, making a journey upland, boarding a ship, or mounting a horse. What one boards or mounts is indicated by a prepositional phrase: $\ell n l$ ($\ell l c$) $\tau \eta v v \alpha \tilde{v} v$, $\ell \varphi' l \pi \pi o v$. Xenophon's Anabasis ($dva\beta a \sigma \iota c$, $dva\beta a \sigma \epsilon \omega c$) describes an "Upland March."

The verb $\gamma\iota\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\kappa\omega$, $\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\xi\gamma\nu\omega\nu$, $\xi\gamma\nu\omega\kappa\alpha$, $\xi\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\xi\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\theta\eta\nu$, "perceive, recognize, know," is deponent in the future tense and has a root agrist. It can introduce two types of indirect statement: $\delta\tau\iota/\delta\varsigma$ + finite verb, or participle + subject accusative. This verb shows throughout its conjugation the root $\gamma\nu\omega$ -/ $\gamma\nu\sigma$ -. Principal Part I shows a reduplication of the stem and has also the inchoative suffix $-\sigma\kappa\omega$. For the conjugation of the root agrist $\xi\gamma\nu\omega\nu$ see Section 122. Note that the epsilon with which Principal Parts IV and V begin is NOT the past indicative augment. Be careful not to confuse forms of $\gamma\iota\gamma\nu\omega\sigma\kappa\omega$ with forms of $\gamma\iota\gamma\nu\omega\alpha\iota$.

The object of the preposition $\ddot{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\kappa\alpha$, "for the sake of," often precedes the preposition; cf. $\chi\dot{\alpha}\varrho\iota\nu$.

The noun $Ze\dot{v}_{\varsigma}$, $\Delta\iota\dot{o}_{\varsigma}$, δ , "Zeus," has a dative $\Delta\iota\iota$, an accusative $\Delta\iota a$, and a vocative $Ze\tilde{v}$. The noun, and the god, are inherited from Indo-European. The nominative was originally *dyēus. From the vocative *dyeu + the word for "father" (pater) comes the Latin $I\bar{u}piter$, "Jupiter."

The noun $\theta \dot{\epsilon} \bar{\alpha} \tau \rho o \nu$, $\theta \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \tau \rho o \nu$, $\tau \dot{o}$, "theater," means literally "place of viewing."

The verb $\lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \omega$, "say, speak" (cf. $\lambda \dot{\delta} \gamma \sigma \varsigma$), has several alternative tense stems, with no difference in meaning, which may be classified as follows:

The unaugmented second agrist active and middle tense stem is $\varepsilon i\pi$. The second person singular, agrist imperative active is $\varepsilon i\pi \dot{\varepsilon}$. Cf. $\dot{\varepsilon}\lambda\theta\dot{\varepsilon}$, $\dot{\iota}\delta\dot{\varepsilon}$, $\lambda\alpha\beta\dot{\varepsilon}$. The unaugmented agrist passive tense stem is $\dot{\varrho}\eta\theta$.

This verb introduces two types of indirect statement: $\delta \tau \iota / \delta \varsigma + \text{finite verb}$, and infinitive + subject accusative.

The noun $va\tilde{v}_{\varsigma}$, $ve\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma}$, $\dot{\eta}$, "ship," originally had a stem ending in digamma. The digamma survives as an upsilon in the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular, and in the dative and accusative plural. For the declension of this noun see Section 128.

The affirmative particle $\nu\dot{\eta}$ is followed by the name of a god in the accusative case and strengthens an assenting statement: $\nu\dot{\eta}$ $\tau\dot{\delta}\nu$ $\Delta \ell a$, "yes, by Zeus."

The verb $vo\mu i\zeta\omega$, $vo\mu i\tilde{\omega}$, $\dot{\epsilon}vo\mu i\sigma a$, $v\epsilon vo\mu i\kappa a$, $v\epsilon vo\mu i\sigma \mu a\iota$, $\dot{\epsilon}vo\mu i\sigma \theta\eta v$, "consider, think, believe," is formed from the noun $vo\mu o\varsigma$, "law, custom" + the verbal suffix $-\iota\zeta\omega$ and originally meant "practice customarily." Like most verbs with presents in $-\iota\zeta\omega$, this verb has a contracted future active and middle which lacks the $-\zeta$ - of the present tense stem. The suffix $-\iota\zeta\omega$ derives from $*\iota\delta\iota\omega$; the dental disappeared in all other Principal Parts. This verb introduces only one kind of indirect statement: infinitive + subject accusative.

The adverb $\pi \acute{a} vv$, "perfectly, very; by all means," is often used to express assent to a statement: $\pi \acute{a} vv \ \gamma \varepsilon$, "yes, by all means."

The verb πίπτω, πεσοῦμαι, ἔπεσον, πέπτωκα, ——, "fall," has a present tense stem which shows reduplication with long iota; the future tense is deponent and contracted; and there is a second agrist (cf. ἔλιπον). The compound verb ἐκπίπτω, "be driven out, be banished," serves as the passive of ἐκβάλλω in these senses.

έκ τῆς πόλεως ἐξεβάλομεν αὐτόν. We drove him out of the city.

ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐξέπεσεν ὑφ' ἡμῶν. He was driven out of the city by us.

For the declension of the adjective $\pi o \lambda \dot{\nu} \varsigma$, $\pi o \lambda \lambda \dot{\eta}$, $\pi o \lambda \dot{\nu}$, "much, many," see Section 127. Greek normally uses the conjunction $\kappa a \dot{\ell}$ to link this adjective with other adjectives: $\pi o \lambda \lambda \dot{\alpha}$ $\kappa a \dot{\ell}$ $\dot{\alpha} \gamma a \theta \dot{\alpha}$ $\beta \iota \beta \lambda \dot{\ell} a$, "many good books."

Monosyllabic prefixes, such as $\pi \varrho o$, do NOT drop the final vowel when compounded with a verb form beginning with a vowel or diphthong. The omicron of $\pi \varrho o$, however, can contract with an epsilon. Contrast $\mathring{a}\pi \acute{e}\delta o\sigma a\nu$ with $\pi \varrho o\acute{e}\delta o\sigma a\nu$, $\pi \varrho o\acute{e}\delta o\sigma a\nu$.

The noun $\sigma\omega\varphi\varrho\sigma\sigma\acute{v}\eta$, $\sigma\omega\varphi\varrho\sigma\sigma\acute{v}\eta\varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, "prudence, self-control, moderation," is formed from the adjective $\sigma\acute{\omega}\varphi\varrho\omega\nu$, $\sigma\~{\omega}\varphi\varrho\sigma\nu$ + the suffix $-\sigma vv\eta$, which often denotes traits of character.

The verb $\varphi\eta\mu\ell$, $\varphi\eta\sigma\omega$, $\xi\varphi\eta\sigma\alpha$, ..., ..., "say, assert, affirm," is enclitic in the present indicative; for its conjugation cf. Section 121. This verb introduces only one type of indirect statement: infinitive + subject accusative. This verb can mean "say yes, affirm" or, when negated, "say no, deny":

ἔγωγέ φημι.

I agree.

I say yes.

οὔ φημι.

I disagree.

I say no.

οὔ φημι τούτους ἀγαθούς είναι.

I deny that these men are good.

Distinguish the conjunction $\delta \varsigma$, "that," introducing indirect statement with a finite verb from the conjunction $\delta \varsigma$ introducing purpose clauses.

UNIT 17

129. ΤΗΕ ADJECTIVE μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα, "big, great, large"

This adjective has five third-declension forms:

M	F	N
μέγας	μεγάλη	μέγα
μεγάλου	μεγάλης	μεγάλου
μεγάλφ	μεγάλη	μεγάλφ
μέγαν	μεγάλην	μέγα
μεγάλε	μεγάλη	μέγα
μεγάλοι	μεγάλαι	μεγάλα
μεγάλων	μεγάλων	μεγάλων
μεγάλοις	μεγάλαις	μεγάλοις
μεγάλους	μεγάλāς	μεγάλα
	μέγας μεγάλου μεγάλφ μέγαν μεγάλε μεγάλοι μεγάλου	μέγας μεγάλη μεγάλης μεγάλου μεγάλης μεγάλης μεγάλην μεγάλην μεγάλην μεγάλοι μεγάλοι μεγάλου μεγάλου μεγάλους μεγάλους

Observation: The forms in bold face are the third-declension ones. All other forms are those of first- and second-declension adjectives built on the stem $\mu\epsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda$ - with a persistent accent on the penult.

130. ADJECTIVES OF THE TYPE $\dot{\eta}\delta\dot{v}\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}\delta\varepsilon\bar{\iota}\alpha$, $\dot{\eta}\delta\dot{v}$, "pleasant, glad"

Nom. S	ήδύς	$\eta\deltaarepsilon ilde{\iota}lpha$	ήδύ
Gen.	ήδέος	ήδε ί āς	ήδέος

Nom./Voc. P	$\eta\deltaarepsilon ilde{\imath}arepsilon$	ήδεῖαι	ήδέα
Gen.	ήδέων	ήδειῶν	$\eta\delta\epsilon\omega v$
Dat.	$\eta\delta\epsilon\sigma\iota(v)$	ήδείαις	$\eta\delta\epsilon\sigma\iota(v)$
Acc.	η δ ε $\tilde{\iota}$ ς	ήδείāς	ηδέα

Observations: (1) Note the -v- in the masculine and neuter nominative, accusative, and vocative singular; elsewhere in the masculine and neuter, the stem $\eta \delta \varepsilon$ - is used. The dative singular is the result of a contraction of $\eta \delta \varepsilon$; the masculine plural nominative is contracted from $\eta \delta \varepsilon$. The masculine plural accusative is the same as the masculine plural nominative.

- (2) The feminine has short $-\alpha$ first-declension endings, with a circumflex on the ultima in the genitive plural.
- (3) These adjectives form adverbs by adding the ending $-\omega \varsigma$ to the stem ending in $-\varepsilon$ -: $\eta \delta \varepsilon \omega \varsigma$.

131. COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

Adjectives in Greek have three degrees:

- (1) the positive degree, the one seen thus far, simply attributes a quality to a noun or pronoun (e.g., "clear, beautiful");
- (2) the comparative degree shows that of two nouns or pronouns one has more of a quality than the other (e.g., "clearer, more beautiful") or that one noun or pronoun has the quality to a rather high degree (e.g., "rather clear, rather beautiful");
- (3) the superlative degree shows that of more than two nouns or pronouns one has the most of a quality (e.g., "clearest, most beautiful") or that a noun or pronoun has the quality to a very high degree (e.g., "very clear, very beautiful").

The Greek comparative and superlative thus can show degrees of intensity in addition to strict comparison.

A Greek adjective shows degrees of comparison by using one of two sets of suffixes or by the use of comparative and superlative adverbs:

SUFFIX: either (1) Comparative in $-\tau \epsilon \varrho \sigma \varsigma$, $-\tau \epsilon \varrho \bar{\alpha}$, $-\tau \epsilon \varrho \sigma \nu$ Superlative in $-\tau \alpha \tau \sigma \varsigma$, $-\tau \alpha \tau \eta$, $-\tau \alpha \tau \sigma \nu$ or (2) Comparative in -īων, -īον Superlative in -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον

ADVERB: Comparative adverb μᾶλλον, "more" Superlative adverb μάλιστα, "most"

1. COMPARATIVE IN -τερος, -τερα, -τερον SUPERLATIVE IN -τατος, -τατη, -τατον

Since most adjectives form their comparative and superlative with these suffixes, use these suffixes for all adjectives unless told otherwise.

To form the comparative and superlative degrees of a first- and second-declension adjective, drop the ending $-o_{\zeta}$ from the masculine singular nominative to get the stem. If the stem ends in a long syllable (a syllable containing [1] a long vowel or diphthong or [2] a short vowel followed by two consonants or the double consonants ζ , ξ , or ψ), add the vowel -o- and the suffixes. If the stem ends in a short syllable (a syllable containing a short vowel not followed by two consonants or a double consonant), add the letter - ω - and the suffixes.

The comparative degree thus obtained is declined like the adjective $\mathring{a}\xi\iota\sigma\varsigma$, $\mathring{a}\xi\iota\sigma$. Except for the accent, the superlative degree is declined like $\mathring{a}\gamma a\theta \acute{o}\varsigma$, $\mathring{a}\gamma a\theta \acute{\eta}$, $\mathring{a}\gamma a\theta \acute{o}\nu$.

POSITIVE	STEM	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
δίκαιος δικαίᾶ δίκαιον "just"	бінаі-	δικαιότερος δικαιοτέρα δικαιότερον "more just, rather just"	δικαιότατος δικαιότατη δικαιότατον "most just, very just"
δῆλος δήλη δῆλον "clear"	δηλ-	δηλότερος δηλοτέρᾶ δηλότερον "clearer, rather clear"	δηλότατος δηλοτάτη δηλότατον "clearest, very clear"
ἄξιος ἀξία ἄξιον "worthy"	å$1-	ἀξιώτερος ἀξιωτέρᾶ ἀξιώτερον "worthier, rather worthy"	ἀξιώτατος ἀξιωτάτη ἀξιώτατον "worthiest, very worthy"
σοφός σοφή σοφόν "wise"	σοφ-	σοφώτερος σοφωτέρᾶ σοφώτερον "wiser, rather wise"	σοφώτατος σοφωτάτη σοφώτατον "wisest, very wise"

The following first- and second-declension adjectives are irregular. (In giving the degrees of an adjective, one gives only the masculine singular nominative.)

μέσος μεσαίτερος μεσαίτατος παλαιός παλαίτερος παλαίτατος φίλος φιλαίτερος φιλαίτατος/φίλτατος

Third-declension adjectives in $-\eta_{\zeta}$, $-\varepsilon_{\zeta}$, and third- and first-declension adjectives in $-\psi_{\zeta}$, $-\varepsilon \tilde{\iota} a$, $-\psi$ add the suffixes directly to the stem without any intervening vowel. The stem of these adjectives is identical with the neuter singular nominative and accusative.

ADJECTIVE	STEM	COMPARATIVE	$_SUPERLATIVE$
ἀμαθής	$ d\mu$ α θ ε σ -	ἀμαθέστερος	ἀμαθέστατος
$\sigma a \varphi \acute{\eta} \varsigma$	σαφεσ-	σαφέστερος	σαφέστατος
βαρύς	eta a arrho v-	βαρύτερος	βαούτατος
(cf. Vocabulary,	page 502.)

Some third-declension adjectives add the suffixes -estegos and -estatos to their stem:

ἄφοων	άφρον-	ἀφοονέστερος	ἀφρονέστατος
$\epsilon \dot{v} \delta a l \mu \omega v$	εὐδαιμον-	εὐδαιμονέστερος	εὐδαιμονέστατος
σώφεων	σωφοον-	σωφοονέστερος	σωφοονέστατος

2. COMPARATIVE IN $-\bar{\iota}\omega\nu$, $-\bar{\iota}o\nu$ SUPERLATIVE IN $-\iota\sigma\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $-\iota\sigma\tau\eta$, $-\iota\sigma\tau\sigma\nu$

The comparative and superlative degrees of these adjectives must be learned individually, since these suffixes are put on a stem different from that of the positive degree. Any adjective that takes $-\bar{\iota}\omega\nu$, $-\bar{\iota}o\nu$ in the comparative degree takes $-\iota\sigma\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $-\iota\sigma\tau\eta$, $-\iota\sigma\tau\sigma\nu$ in the superlative degree. An adjective regularly takes $-\tau\varepsilon\varrho\sigma\varsigma$, $-\tau\varepsilon\varrho\bar{\alpha}$, $-\tau\varepsilon\varrho\sigma\nu$ in the comparative degree and $-\tau\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $-\tau\alpha\tau\eta$, $-\tau\alpha\tau\sigma\nu$ in the superlative degree OR $-\bar{\iota}\omega\nu$, $-\bar{\iota}o\nu$ and $-\iota\sigma\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $-\iota\sigma\tau\eta$, $-\iota\sigma\tau\sigma\nu$, NOT both sets of suffixes.

Here are presented four adjectives with comparatives in $-i\omega v$, $-i\omega v$ and superlatives in $-i\sigma\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $-i\sigma\tau\eta$, $-i\sigma\tau\sigma v$. More such adjectives are given in Unit 19.

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
αἰσχοός	αἰσχίων	αἴσχιστος
$\dot{\epsilon}\chi hetaarrho\delta\varsigma$	$\dot{\epsilon}\chi heta\dot{\iota}\omega v$	ἔχθιστος
ήδύς	$\eta \delta t \omega v$	ἥδιστος
καλός	καλλίων	κάλλιστος

SECTION 131 495

3. DECLENSION OF COMPARATIVES OF THE TYPE $\eta\delta t\omega \nu$, $\eta\delta \bar{\iota}\omega \nu$

In the declension which follows, pay particular attention to the alternative forms.

	M/F	N
Nom. S	$\eta\delta t\omega v$	ἥδῖον
Gen.	ήδίονος	ήδίονος
Dat.	$\eta\delta ilde{t}$ ov ι	ήδίονι
Acc.	$\eta\delta t$ ονα/ $\eta\delta t\omega$	$\eta \delta ar\iota_{ov}$
Voc.	ἥδ ι ον	ἥδῖον
Nom./Voc. P	$\eta\delta t$ ov $arepsilon arepsilon / \eta\delta t$ ov $arepsilon$	ήδίονα/ήδίω
Gen.	ήδιόνων	ήδιόνων
Dat.	$\eta\delta to\sigma\iota(v)$	$\eta\delta t^{\prime} o\sigma\iota(u)$
Acc.		ήδ $\emph{tova}/\emph{η}\emph{δ}\emph{t}\omega$

- Observations: (1) Note that in the masculine/feminine singular vocative and neuter singular nominative/accusative/vocative the accent is on the antepenult.
 - (2) The alternative forms derive from a different suffix which ended in $-\sigma$. The intervocalic $-\sigma$ dropped out and the remaining vowels cor-acted:

The alternative masculine and feminine plural accusative is simply the same form as the nominative.

4. COMPARATIVE ADVERB μᾶλλον, "more" SUPERLATIVE ADVERB μάλιστα, "most"

Instead of using one of the two sets of suffixes, any adjective can form a comparative degree by using the comparative adverb $\mu\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\rho\nu$, "more," with the positive degree of the adjective. The superlative is formed by using the superlative adverb $\mu\hat{a}\lambda\iota\sigma\tau a$, "most," with the positive degree of the adjective.

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
φίλος	μᾶλλον φίλος	μάλιστα φίλος
εὖγενής	μᾶλλον εὖγενής	μάλιστα εὐγενής

5. COMPARISON WITH $\mathring{\eta}$; GENITIVE OF COMPARISON

Comparisons are made in two ways in Greek, by the conjunction $\mathring{\eta}$, "than," or by the genitive of comparison.

(1) The conjunction $\mathring{\eta}$ introduces a new clause. The case of the person or thing compared depends on its function in its own clause.

Σωκράτης σοφώτερός ἐστιν $\mathring{\eta}$ 'Αριστοφάνης. Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

νομίζομεν Σωκράτη σοφώτερον είναι $\mathring{\eta}$ 'Αριστοφάνη. We think that Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

In the first sentence, $A \rho \iota \sigma \tau \sigma \phi \dot{\alpha} \eta \gamma \zeta$ is in the nominative, since it is the subject of an understood $\dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \dot{l} \nu$ in its own clause. In the second sentence, $A \rho \iota \sigma \tau \sigma \phi \dot{\alpha} \nu \eta$ is in the accusative, since it is the subject of an understood $\epsilon \dot{l} \nu a \iota$ in its own clause.

(2) Alternatively, the person or thing being compared can stand in the genitive case without any conjunction or preposition. Such a genitive is called a genitive of comparison.

Σωκράτης σοφώτερός ἐστιν 'Αριστοφάνους. Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

νομίζομεν Σωκράτη σοφώτερον είναι 'Αριστοφάνους. We think that Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

6. DATIVE OF DEGREE OF DIFFERENCE

The degree to which two persons or things being compared differ is shown by the dative of degree of difference, with no preposition.

Σωκράτης πολλῷ σοφώτερός ἐστιν ἢ 'Αριστοφάνης. Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes by much. Sokrates is much wiser than Aristophanes.

The same idea can be expressed by an adverbial accusative.

Σωκράτης πολύ σοφώτερός ἐστιν ἢ 'Αριστοφάνης. Sokrates is much wiser than Aristophanes.

7. SUPERLATIVE WITH ως and δτι

The conjunctions $\delta \zeta$ and $\delta \tau \iota$ followed by the superlative degree mean "as ... as possible."

Sokrates, a man as wise as possible, taught the young men.

8. OTHER CONSTRUCTIONS WITH THE SUPERLATIVE

A superlative is often accompanied by a partitive genitive, a dative of degree of difference, or an adverbial accusative.

Σωκράτης, ὁ σοφώτατος μακρῷ τῶν Ἑλλήνων, τοὺς νε \bar{a} νί \bar{a} ς ἐδίδασκεν. Sokrates, by far the wisest of the Greeks, taught the young men.

Σωκράτης, δ πολ \dot{v} σοφώτατος τῶν ' $A\theta$ ηναίων, το \dot{v} ς νεᾶνίας ἐδίδασκεν. Sokrates, much the wisest of the Athenians, taught the young men.

132. THE VERB $\varepsilon l\mu\iota$, "go, come" $$\varepsilon l\mu\iota$$

, ——, ——, ——, "go, come"

This verb occurs only in the present and imperfect tenses of the active voice. A discussion of the use of the tenses follows the presentation of the forms.

Observations: (1) This verb shows vowel gradation:

Long-vowel present tense stem: ê-Short-vowel present tense stem: ê-

- (2) The present indicative is regular except for the second person singular $e\tilde{t}$. The imperfect is irregular and must be learned with special care. As in all athematic verbs, the subjunctive uses a thematic conjugation, but without the contraction of, e.g., $\delta\iota\delta\tilde{\omega}$. The optative is thematic, with one alternative form with the ending $-o\iota\eta\nu$: $ioi\eta\nu$.
- (3) Be careful not to confuse forms of $\varepsilon l\mu \iota$, "go, come," with $\varepsilon i\mu l$, "be." The two verbs are printed side by side in the Appendix, pp. 673–75. Note the following:

 εl : The form is the second person singular, present indicative active of both verbs.

Compare $\epsilon l\sigma \iota(\nu)$: third person singular, present indicative active of "to go"

 $\varepsilon i\sigma i(\nu)$: third person plural, present indicative active of "to be"

Note the iota subscript throughout the imperfect of $\varepsilon l\mu\iota$, "go, come."

Use of the tenses of εἶμι:

The present indicative forms of $\epsilon l\mu \iota$, "go, come," are used in Attic prose as the future indicative of $\epsilon \varrho \chi o \mu a \iota$, which is used only in the present indicative. (The future $\epsilon \lambda \epsilon \psi \sigma o \mu a \iota$ is not used in Attic prose.) In indirect statement the optative, the infinitive, and the participle of $\epsilon l \mu \iota$ can stand either for forms of $\epsilon l \mu \iota$ in an original statement and therefore represent an original future or they can stand for forms of $\epsilon \varrho \chi o \mu a \iota$ and therefore represent an original present tense. Context will usually allow one to distinguish between these uses. The participle $l \omega \nu$ can also function as a future and express purpose. In other uses of the optative, the infinitive, and the participle, and in all uses of the subjunctive and the imperative, the non-indicative forms of $\epsilon l \mu \iota$ show progressive/repeated aspect in contrast to the non-indicative forms derived from $\eta \lambda \theta o \nu$. The imperfect of $\epsilon l \mu \iota$ is used as the imperfect of $\epsilon \varrho \chi o \mu a \iota$.

Thus in Attic prose the principal parts and the moods and tenses formed from them which express the idea "go, come" are:

ἔοχομαι,	εἶμι,	$\tilde{\eta}\lambda\theta o\nu$,	έλήλυθα,	_,	~, "go,	come"
ἴω		$\ddot{\varepsilon}\lambda heta\omega$
ἴοιμι	ἴοιμι	ἔλθοιμι

ἰών	ἰών	ἐλθών	ἐληλυθώς
ິກິα/ἤειν			έληλύθη

Examples:

νῦν ἀπέρχονται.
They are now going away.
ἀγγέλλω αὐτοὺς νῦν ἀπιόντας.
I report that they are now going away.

νομίζω αὐτοὺς νῦν ἀπιέναι. I think that they are now going away. μετὰ τὴν μάχην ἀπίδσιν.

134. NEGATIVE PRONOUNS/ADJECTIVES

The forms of $\varepsilon l \zeta$, $\mu l \alpha$, $\varepsilon \nu$ combine with the negatives $o \delta \delta \epsilon$ and $\mu \eta \delta \epsilon$ to give the compound negative pronouns/adjectives "no one, nothing."

135. UNATTAINABLE WISH

In order to express a wish, hope, or prayer whose fulfillment is possible, Greek uses an independent optative of wish, often introduced by $\varepsilon i\theta \varepsilon$ or $\varepsilon i \gamma \delta \varphi$; cf. Section 61. If, however, the fulfillment of the wish is impossible, the optative is replaced by a past tense of the indicative: an imperfect indicative if the wish refers to present time; an aorist indicative if the wish refers to past time. Such unattainable wishes must be accompanied by $\varepsilon i\theta \varepsilon$ or $\varepsilon i \gamma d\varrho$, or they would be indistinguishable from plain factual statements about the past. The negative of all expressions of wish is $\mu \dot{\eta}$.

SECTION 135 501

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb $\delta\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\dot{\alpha}\nu\omega$, $\delta\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\dot{\eta}\sigma\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\ddot{\eta}\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\sigma\nu$, $\ddot{\eta}\mu\dot{\alpha}\varrho\tau\eta\varkappa\alpha$, $\ddot{\eta}\mu\dot{\alpha}\varrho\tau\eta\mu\alpha\iota$, $\ddot{\eta}\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\dot{\eta}-\theta\eta\nu$ means literally "miss a target"; in this sense it governs a genitive. Its extended meaning is "make a mistake, do wrong." The related noun $\delta\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\dot{\iota}\ddot{a}$, $\delta\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\dot{\iota}\ddot{a}\varsigma$, $\ddot{\eta}$ means "mistake, error." In Aristotle's Poelics, the tragic hero undergoes a change of fortune $\delta\iota$ ' $\delta\mu\alpha\varrho\tau\dot{\iota}\ddot{a}\nu$ $\tau\iota\nu\dot{a}$.

The adjective $\beta \alpha \varrho \psi \varsigma$, $\beta \alpha \varrho \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} a$, $\beta \alpha \varrho \psi$ literally means "heavy." Among its extended meanings are "heavy to bear, burdensome, severe."

The verb $\delta o \varkappa \ell \omega$, $\delta \delta \xi \omega$, $\ell \delta o \xi a$, —, $\delta \ell \delta o \gamma \mu \alpha \iota$, $-\ell \delta \delta \chi \theta \eta \nu$, related to the noun $\delta \delta \xi a$, means either "think" (with an accusative and infinitive) or "seem":

δοκῶ Σωκράτη σοφὸν εἶναι. I think that Sokrates is wise. δοκῶ τοῖς πολίταις σοφὸς εἶναι. I seem to the citizens to be wise.

The verb δύναμαι, δυνήσομαι, —, —, δεδύνημαι, ἐδυνήθην, "be able," is an athematic deponent verb. The present and the imperfect are conjugated like ἴσταμαι and ΐστάμην, the present and imperfect middle/passive of ἴστημι. The second person singular of the imperfect is, however, ἐδύνω; contrast ἴστασο. The accent in the present subjunctive and optative is recessive: δύνωμαι, δύναιτο. This verb can govern a complementary infinitive. At times the past indicative augment appears as $\mathring{\eta}$ - instead of $\mathring{\epsilon}$ -.

For the use of the forms of $\varepsilon l\mu\iota$ as the future and imperfect indicative, and as the non-indicative present and future forms of $\xi\varrho\chi o\mu\alpha\iota$, see Section 132.

The verb ἐλαύνω, ἐλῶ (ἐλάω), ἤλασα, -ἐλήλακα, ἐλήλαμαι, ἠλάθην, "drive, march," has a future which is contracted like $\tau \bar{\iota} \mu \acute{a} \omega$. The Greek verb, like the English verb "drive," can be either transitive or intransitive.

The verb $\epsilon \pi i \sigma \tau a \mu a \iota$, $\epsilon \pi \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} \sigma o \mu a \iota$, —, —, $\dot{\eta} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} \theta \eta \nu$, "know," was probably a compound of $\epsilon \pi \iota$ - and $\epsilon \sigma \tau a \mu a \iota$; cf. "understand." Note, however, that the rough breathing of the verb does not change the $-\pi$ - to a $-\varphi$ - after the $-\iota$ - of the prefix dropped out (contrast $\kappa a \theta i \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$ from $\kappa a \tau a - + i \sigma \tau \eta \mu \iota$). Note also that the past indicative augment is shown by lengthening the initial ϵ -. As in $\delta \dot{\nu} \nu a \mu a \iota$, the second person singular of the imperfect indicative active is a contracted form, $\dot{\eta} \pi i \sigma \tau \omega$, and the accent in the present subjunctive and optative is recessive: $\dot{\epsilon} \pi i \sigma \tau \omega \mu a \iota$, $\dot{\epsilon} \pi i \sigma \tau a \iota \tau o$. In Homer, the word meant "to know," with an emphasis on practical knowledge; the meaning was then extended to other forms of knowing. This verb introduces two kinds of indirect statement, the finite construction introduced by $\delta \tau \iota$ or $\delta \varsigma$ or the accusative subject + participle. The noun $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} \mu \eta$, $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \iota \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} \mu \eta \varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}$, "knowledge," had a similar development from "practical knowledge, know-how," to "knowledge" as opposed to "opinion," $\delta \dot{\epsilon} \xi a$.

The verb $\xi \chi \omega$, $\xi \xi \omega$ or $\sigma \chi \eta' \sigma \omega$, $\xi \sigma \chi \sigma \nu$, $\xi \sigma \chi \eta \kappa \alpha$, - $\xi \sigma \chi \eta \kappa \alpha$, "have, hold," has as its basic root *segh-. In the present tense stem, the loss of the initial scaused a rough breathing, which in turn was lost due to dissimilation of aspirates: *segho > * $\ddot{\epsilon}\chi\omega$ > $\ddot{\epsilon}\chi\omega$. The imperfect is $\epsilon \bar{t}\chi o\nu < *\ddot{\epsilon}\epsilon\chi o\nu < *\ddot{\epsilon}\sigma\epsilon\chi o\nu$. In the future, the suffix -\sigma- caused the loss of the aspiration on the final consonant of the stem; this allowed the rough breathing due to the loss of the initial σ - to remain: *seghso > * $\sigma \xi \xi \omega$ > $\xi \xi \omega$. The alternative future is built on the zero-grade of the root, $\sigma\chi$ -, with an added $-\eta$ -. This element $-\sigma\chi\eta$ - also appears in the perfect active and perfect middle tense stems. Note also the second agrist with the zero-grade of the root without the additional $-\eta$. The second person singular. aorist imperative active is $\sigma\chi\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma$; the aorist subjunctive has a circumflex accent: $\sigma\chi\tilde{\omega}$, $\sigma\chi\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, etc.; and in uncompounded forms the optative is $\sigma\chi\sigma\ell\eta\nu$, $\sigma\chi\sigma\ell\eta\varsigma$, $\sigma \chi o l \eta$, $\sigma \chi o \tilde{l} \mu \epsilon \nu$, $\sigma \chi o \tilde{l} \tau \epsilon$, $\sigma \chi o \tilde{l} \epsilon \nu$. In compounded forms of the agrist note the accent of the subjunctive $(\pi\alpha\varrho\acute{a}\sigma\chi\omega)$ and imperative $(\pi\alpha\varrho\acute{a}\sigma\chi\varepsilon\varsigma)$; the optative follows the usual pattern of the thematic second agrists, παράσγοιμι, παράσχοις, etc.

The verb means "have, hold." The future $\xi \xi \omega$ has progressive/repeated aspect and is used of an action that lasts; $\sigma \chi \dot{\eta} \sigma \omega$ has simple aspect. Note the difference between the imperfect and the aorist:

 $\varepsilon \bar{l} \chi \varepsilon \zeta \tau \dot{\alpha} \xi l \varphi \eta$. You were holding the swords.

The verb can also mean "be able to" and take a complementary infinitive.

In another very common idiom, any form of $\xi \chi \omega$ with an adverb is the equivalent of the verb "to be" with an adjective:

ταῦτα οὐ κακῶς ἔχει. These things are not bad. In the middle the verb can mean "cling to" or "be next to" and take a genitive:

 $τ\tilde{\eta}$ ς αὐτ $\tilde{\eta}$ ς γνώμης ἔχομαι. I cling to the same opinion.

The adjective $\mu \acute{e} \gamma \alpha \varsigma$, $\mu \acute{e} \gamma \acute{a} \lambda \eta$, $\mu \acute{e} \gamma \alpha$, "big, great, large," is used of both size and importance.

The negative pronouns/adjectives $o\vec{v}\delta\varepsilon \iota \zeta$, $o\vec{v}\delta\varepsilon \mu \iota a$, $o\vec{v}\delta\acute{\varepsilon}\nu$ and $\mu\eta\delta\varepsilon \iota \zeta$, $\mu\eta\delta\varepsilon \mu \iota a$, $\mu\eta\delta\acute{\varepsilon}\nu$, "no one, nothing," are compounds of the negatives $o\vec{v}$ and $\mu\acute{\eta}$. Any compound of $o\vec{v}$ is used where the simple $o\vec{v}$ is used. Any compound of $\mu\acute{\eta}$ is used where the simple $\mu\acute{\eta}$ is used.

The adjectives $\pi\delta\sigma\sigma\varsigma$, $\pi\delta\sigma\eta$, $\pi\delta\sigma\sigma\nu$, "how much/many?, how large?"; $\tau\sigma\sigma\sigma\tilde{v}\tau\sigma\varsigma$, $\tau\sigma\sigma\sigma\tilde{v}\tau\eta$, $\tau\sigma\sigma\sigma\tilde{v}\tau\sigma/\tau\sigma\sigma\sigma\tilde{v}\tau\sigma\nu$, "so much/many, so large"; and $\delta\sigma\sigma\varsigma$, $\delta\sigma\eta$, $\delta\sigma\sigma\nu$, "as much/many as, as large as; how much/many!, how large!" are correlatives and have the same relation to each other as $\pi\sigma\tilde{\iota}\sigma\varsigma$, $\tau\sigma\iota\sigma\tilde{v}\tau\sigma\varsigma$, and $\sigma\tilde{\iota}\sigma\varsigma$. Note the alternative neuter singular nominative and accusative form with a final $-\nu$: $\tau\sigma\sigma\sigma\tilde{v}\tau\sigma\nu$.

The interrogative adjective $\pi \delta \tau \epsilon \varrho \sigma \varsigma$, $\pi \sigma \tau \epsilon \varrho \bar{\sigma}$, $\pi \delta \tau \epsilon \varrho \sigma v$, "which," is limited to two items or groups of items. The neuter singular $\pi \delta \tau \epsilon \varrho \sigma v$ is an adverb which introduces an alternative question; often, it cannot be translated:

136. THE VERB [#]ημι, "release, hurl, send"

The verb $\tilde{\imath}\eta\mu\iota$ is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses, and in the second agrist active and middle. Except for the present and imperfect tenses, this verb usually appears in compounds.

"ίημι, -ησω, -ηκα, -είκα, -είμαι, -είθην, "release, hurl, send"

The present tense stem of this verb shows vowel gradation:

Long-vowel grade: $t\eta$ Short-vowel grade: $t\varepsilon$ -

In the present and imperfect tenses ${\it i}\eta\mu\iota$ is conjugated almost exactly like ${\it r}\ell\theta\eta\mu\iota$. Only a few forms of either verb are irregular. Irregular forms of ${\it i}\eta\mu\iota$ are printed entirely in boldface below.

The forms of $"i\eta\mu\iota$ and $\tau l\theta\eta\mu\iota$ are set forth side by side in the Appendix, pp. 670–73, 677–80. In comparing the two verbs note carefully those few instances where they employ different endings.

Gen.	ἱέντος	$tel\sigma\eta\varsigma$	ἱέντος

Observations: (1) The second person singular, present indicative active has an alternate thematic form derived from *fésic.

- (2) In the third person plural, present indicative active the ending $-\tilde{\alpha}\sigma\iota(\nu)$ contracts with the stem. Contrast $t\tilde{\alpha}\sigma\iota(\nu)$, $\tau\iota\theta\acute{e}\bar{\alpha}\sigma\iota(\nu)$.
- (3) The second and third person singular, imperfect indicative active, are thematic and derive from *^tleες, *^tleε. Cf. ἐτίθεις, ἐτίθει.
- (4) Since the initial vowel of the present tense stem is long, the addition of the past indicative augment does not change the stem, and the present and imperfect indicative active are identical in the first and second person plural.
- (5) The second person singular, present imperative active is thematic and derives from * $^{a}_{l}\epsilon\epsilon$. Cf. $\tau l\theta\epsilon\iota < *\tau l\theta\epsilon\epsilon$, $\delta l\delta ov$ $< *\delta l\delta o\epsilon$.
- (6) The second person plural, present imperative active is identical with the second person plural, present and imperfect indicative active.
- (7) The third person plural, present imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active. Context will help to determine meaning.
- (8) Distinguish the present infinitive active $l\acute{e}va\iota$ from the present infinitive active of $el\mu\iota$: $l\acute{e}va\iota$.

Observation: Since the addition of the past indicative augment does not change the initial long vowel of the present tense stem, the present and imperfect indicative middle/passive are identical in the first and second person plural. In the second person plural, the present imperative middle/passive is also identical to these forms. Context will help to determine meaning.

3. AORIST ACTIVE

The verb $\[\eta\mu\iota$, like the verbs $\delta i\delta\omega\mu\iota$ and $\tau i\theta\eta\mu\iota$, has a mixed a orist which employs the first a orist tense stem $\[\eta\iota$ - and the athematic second a orist tense stem $\[\epsilon$ - (augmented form $\[\epsilon\epsilon$ -).

Compare closely the arrist active and middle of $\tau l\theta \eta \mu \iota$ (first arrist stem $\theta \eta \varkappa$ -, second arrist stem $\theta \varepsilon$ -) and that of $\delta l\delta \omega \mu \iota$ (first arrist stem $\delta \omega \varkappa$ -, second arrist stem $\delta \sigma$ -). Only these three verbs have mixed arrists.

The agrist forms of $\[\tilde{t}\eta\mu\iota \]$ are normally found only in compounds.

Observations: (1) In the agrist subjunctive active the vowel of the stem contracts with the endings: e.g., *- $\varepsilon\omega$ > - $\tilde{\omega}$.

- (2) The rough breathing of the aorist subjunctive and optative active distinguishes them from the present subjunctive and optative active of $\varepsilon i\mu i$: $\tilde{\omega}$, $\varepsilon i\eta \nu$.
- (3) The rough breathing distinguishes the aorist infinitive active $-\varepsilon l \nu \alpha \iota$ from the present infinitive active of $\varepsilon l \mu \iota$: $\varepsilon l \nu \alpha \iota$.
- (4) The third person plural, agrist imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the agrist participle active. Context will determine meaning.
- (5) In the first and second person plural, the shorter forms of the aorist optative active are identical with those of the aorist indicative active.

 - (2) The agrist indicative middle, agrist optative middle (except for the second person singular), and pluperfect indicative middle/passive are all identical in form.
 - (3) The alternative thematic forms of the optative are exactly like the equivalent forms of $\tau l\theta \eta \mu \iota$. The stem $\dot{\epsilon}$ contracts with the endings.
 - (4) The second person singular, aorist imperative middle $-o\bar{v}$ retains its circumflex accent when compounded with a monosyllabic prefix (see the Appendix, p. 609): $d\varphi o\bar{v}$.
 - (5) Remember that ALL infinitives have fixed, non-recessive accents which are retained in compounds:

137. INDEFINITE RELATIVE PRONOUN INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN/ADJECTIVE

The indefinite relative pronoun ὅστις, ἥτις, ὅτι, "whoever, whatever," serves also as the indirect interrogative pronoun/adjective, with the meaning "who, what." An indirect interrogative introduces an indirect question. For indirect questions see Section 140.

This pronoun/adjective is formed by combining into one word the relative pronoun $\delta \varsigma$, η , δ and the indefinite pronoun/adjective $\tau \iota \varsigma$, $\tau \iota$, while declining each word separately.

There are several alternative masculine and neuter forms.

Observations: (1) The accent of the compound forms follows the rules for enclitics.

(2) The neuter nominative and accusative singular must be distinguished from the conjunction $\delta_{\tau \iota}$.

The following sentences will illustrate the use of the indefinite relative pronoun:

όστις κακά ποιεί, κακά πείσεται.

Whoever does evil things, will suffer evil things.

όστις αν κακά ποιῆ, κακά πείσεται.

Whoever does evil things, will suffer evil things.

όστις ἀν κακὸς ης, κακὰ ποιεῖ.

Whoever is evil, does evil things.

The indefinite relative pronoun adds an extra generalizing force even to a present (or past) general conditional sentence, as in the third example above.

138. INDEFINITE RELATIVES AND DIRECT AND INDIRECT INTERROGATIVES

Corresponding to the indefinite relative/indirect interrogative $\delta\sigma\tau\iota\varsigma$, $\eta\tau\iota\varsigma$, $\delta\tau\iota$ are several adjectives which serve the same two functions. These are listed in the right-hand column below. Direct interrogative forms are listed in the left-hand column.

When used as indefinite relative pronouns or adjectives, these words have a meaning which includes the element "-ever": e.g., "whoever," "whichever." When used as indirect interrogative pronouns or adjectives, these words have the same meaning as the direct interrogative but are used to introduce indirect questions.

DIRECT INTERROGATIVE	INDEFINITE RELATIVE/ INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE
$\tau l_{\mathcal{S}}, \tau l$ who?, what?	δστις, $ητις$, $δτι$ whoever, whatever who?, what?

139. INDEFINITE, RELATIVE, AND INTERROGATIVE ADVERBS

Many adverbs have three forms: direct interrogative, indefinite (enclitic), and indefinite relative/indirect interrogative.

$DIRECT$ $INTERROGATIVE$ $\pi \delta \theta \varepsilon \nu$ from where?, whence?	INDEFINITE (enclitic) $\pi o \theta \acute{e} \nu$ from somewhere	INDEFINITE RELATIVE INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE $\delta\pi\delta\theta\varepsilon\nu$ from wherever from where?, whence?

$\pi ilde{\omega} arsigma$	$\pi\omega\varsigma$	őπως

Observation: The indefinite relative/indirect interrogative $\delta \pi \omega_{\zeta}$ must be distinguished from the conjunction $\delta \pi \omega_{\zeta}$ which introduces purpose clauses and object clauses of effort.

Compare the chart of correlative pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs included in the Vocabulary, pages 530–31.

140. INDIRECT QUESTION

A question, like a statement, can be quoted either directly or indirectly. Direct quotation preserves the speaker's original words, which in English are set off by quotation marks. But indirect quotation, or indirect question, incorporates the original words into a complex sentence.

He asks, "What are they doing?" (direct quotation) He asks what they are doing. (indirect question)

The main verb which introduces an indirect question can be not only a verb of asking, but also a verb of knowing, learning, perceiving, etc. (e.g., "I learned what they were doing.").

While there are three different ways of expressing indirect statement, there is only one way of expressing indirect question; finite verb introduced by an indirect interrogative word.

SECTION 140 527

The rules for indirect question are the same as those for indirect statement with a finite verb introduced by $\"{o}\tau\iota$ or $\acute{\omega}\varsigma$:

When the introductory verb is in a primary tense, all verbs in the indirect question retain their original mood and tense.

When the introductory verb is in a secondary tense, all indicative verbs of the original question EITHER are changed to the corresponding tense of the optative OR remain unchanged (retained indicative).

In addition, all direct interrogative words of the original question are usually changed to the corresponding indirect interrogative words (cf. Sections 138, 139).

The particle $\tilde{a}\varrho a$ remains unchanged.

If the original question has no interrogative word, the indirect question is introduced by the particle ϵi , "whether, if."

If a question includes two alternatives, these are introduced in an indirect question by the following introductory words, each pair of which means "whether...or":

The negative of the original question is preserved in an indirect question.

Here are examples of direct and indirect questions:

τίς εἶ; Who are you?	(original question)
ἐρωτᾳ ὅστις εἶ. He asks who you are.	(indirect question)
πότερος τοῦτ' ἐποίησεν; Which one did this?	(original question)
ἠρωτήσαμεν δπότερος τοῦτο ποιήσειεν. We asked which one did this.	(indirect question)
Εὐοῖπίδης σοφός ἐστιν; Is Euripides wise?	(original question)
ἐρωτήσετ' εἰ Εὐρῖπίδης σοφός ἐστιν. You will ask whether (if) Euripides is wise.	(indirect question)

 $\tilde{\omega}$ βασιλεῦ, πότερον βούλει μένειν ἢ ἀπιέναι; (original question) King, do you wish to stay or go away?

ἦρώτὰ τὸν βασιλέὰ πότερον βούλοιτο

(indirect question)

μένειν ἢ ἀπιέναι. ἠοώτὰ τὸν βασιλέὰ εἴτε βούλοιτο μένειν εἴτε ἀπιέναι.

ηρώτα τὸν βασιλέα εἰ βούλοιτο μένειν εἴτε ἀπιέναι.

She was asking the king whether he wanted to stay or go away.

πόσους ἀγγέλους πέμπεις;

(original question)

How many messengers are you sending?

ἠοώτησα δπόσους ἀγγέλους πέμπεις. I asked how many messengers you were sending. (indirect question with retained indicative)

The interrogative word of the original statement is sometimes retained:

τίνες εἰσίν;

(original question)

Who are they?

ηρώτων αὐτούς τίνες είεν.

(indirect question)

I was asking them who they were.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀποθνήσκω, ἀποθανοῦμαι, ἀπέθανον, τέθνηκα, ——, "die," has a contracted deponent future and a second acrist. The perfect tense is not compounded with ἀπο-. Note that Principal Part I shows the inchoative suffix $-\sigma\kappa\omega$ and that Principal Part IV lacks the iota subscript beneath the eta. In the perfect indicative active the plural has, in addition to the regular forms, the alternative forms $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu a \mu \epsilon \nu$, $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu a \tau \epsilon$, $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu a \sigma \iota(\nu)$. The pluperfect has the alternative third person plural ἐτέθνασαν. The perfect infinitive active is $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \eta \kappa \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$. The perfect participle active is either $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \eta \kappa \iota \iota$, $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$. The perfect participle active is either $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$, $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$. The perfect participle active is either $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \epsilon \theta \nu \iota \iota \iota$. The perfect participle active is $\tau \iota \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \iota \iota \iota$ or $\tau \iota$ or $\tau \iota$ or $\tau \iota \iota$ or $\tau \iota$ or τ

In the verb ἀποκτείνω, ἀποκτενῶ, ἀπέκτεινα, ἀπέκτονα, ——, "kill," Principal Part I derives from *ἀποκτένιω and Principal Part III from *ἀπέκτενσα. Note the contracted future, and the o-grade of the root in the perfect (where the epsilon is part of the tense stem). The passive of this verb is supplied by ἀποθνήσκω:

αὐτὸν ἀπεκτείναμεν. We killed him. ὑφ' ἡμῶν ἀπέθανεν. He died at our hands. He was killed by us.

Do not confuse the verb $\beta ov \lambda ε \acute{v} ω$, $\beta ov \lambda ε \acute{v} σω$, $\dot{\epsilon} \beta o\acute{v} \lambda ε v σα$, $\beta \epsilon \beta o\acute{v} \lambda ε v \mu α\iota$, $\dot{\epsilon} \beta ov \lambda ε \acute{v} \theta \eta v$, "deliberate on, plan; (mid.) take counsel with oneself, deliberate," with the verb $\beta o\acute{v} \lambda o \mu \alpha \iota$.

Note that in the verb $\zeta\eta\tau\epsilon\omega$, $\zeta\eta\tau\dot{\eta}\sigma\omega$, $\dot{\epsilon}\zeta\dot{\eta}\tau\eta\sigma\alpha$, $\dot{\epsilon}\zeta\dot{\eta}\tau\eta\kappa\alpha$, —, $\dot{\epsilon}\zeta\eta\tau\dot{\eta}\theta\eta\nu$, "seek," the epsilon with which Principal Part IV begins is part of the tense stem. This verb can govern a direct object indicating the person or thing after which one is seeking, an indirect question indicating the problem which one is investigating, or an object infinitive of the thing which one is seeking to do.

The verb ${}^{t}\eta\mu\iota$, $-\tilde{\eta}\sigma\omega$, $-\tilde{\eta}\nu\alpha$, $-\epsilon l\nu\alpha$, $-\epsilon l\nu\alpha$, $-\epsilon l\nu\alpha$, "release, hurl, send," is conjugated almost exactly like $\tau l\theta\eta\mu\iota$, with which it should be closely compared. This will most easily be done by consulting pp. 670–73 and 677–80 of the Appendix, where the forms of these two verbs are listed side by side. (Dual forms, which appear between the singular and plural forms in the Appendix, should be ignored.)

Compare the following stems of these verbs:

 $\theta\eta\varkappa$ -

The unaugmented agrist passive tense stem is $\delta\theta$ -.

The verb $\tilde{l}\eta\mu\iota$ usually appears in compounds, two of which are $d\phi l\eta\mu\iota$, "send forth, send away; let go, neglect," and $\sigma vv l\eta\mu\iota$, "understand, comprehend."

The verb $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \lambda \omega$, $\mu \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \lambda \dot{\eta} \sigma \omega$, $\dot{\epsilon} \mu \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \lambda \eta \sigma \alpha$, ——, ——, when it means "be about to, be likely to," governs a future (sometimes a present) infinitive; used by itself, or with a present infinitive, it can mean "delay."

νῦν γε μέλλομεν νικήσειν.

Now, at least, we are about to (are likely to) win.

τί ἀεὶ ἔμελλεν οδτος;

Why did this man always delay?

The adjective $\delta\xi\psi\varsigma$, $\delta\xi\epsilon\bar{\imath}\alpha$, $\delta\xi\psi$, "sharp, keen," can refer to pointed objects, things perceived, or one's own senses.

The noun $\tau \varrho \acute{a}\pi ε \zeta a$, $\tau \varrho a\pi \acute{e}\zeta \eta \varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, "table; money-changer's table, bank," means literally something "four-footed": * $\tau \varrho \acute{a}$ - $\pi ε \delta \iota a$.

Distinguish the noun $\psi \varepsilon \hat{v} \delta o \varsigma$, $\psi \varepsilon \psi \delta o v \varsigma$, $\tau \delta$, "falsehood, lie," from the adjective $\psi \varepsilon v \delta \dot{\eta} \varsigma$, $\psi \varepsilon v \delta \dot{\epsilon} \varsigma$, "false, lying."

Distinguish carefully the various meanings of $\delta \zeta$ encountered thus far:

correlative conjunction: "as" άθάνατός ἐστιν ή ψυχή, ώς λέγει δ ποιητής.

The soul is immortal, as the poet says.

exclamatory adverb: "how!"

ώς ἄφρονες οἱ δήτορές εἰσιν.

How foolish the public speakers are!

introducing purpose clauses: "in order that"

with causal or purpose participle: cause or purpose not vouched for by speaker introducing indirect statement with finite verb: "that" with superlative adjective or adverb: "as . . . as possible"

READINGS

A. Aristophanes, Knights 150-181

So bad has the leadership of Athens become that in Aristophanes' reductio ad absurdum Demosthenes and Nikias, two servants of Demos (= the people of Athens), have just found out through an oracle that the city can be saved only when it is led by a sausage-seller. Needless to say, a sausage-seller opportunely happens along.

UNIT 19

141. COMPARISON OF ADVERBS

Adverbs have, like adjectives, a positive, comparative, and superlative degree. Those adverbs which are derived from adjectives use as their comparative degree the neuter accusative singular of the comparative degree of the adjective; they use as their superlative degree the neuter accusative plural of the superlative degree of the adjective.

POSITIVE DEGREE	COMPARATIVE DEGREE	SUPERLATIVE DEGREE
δικαίως justly	δικαιότερον more justly rather justly	δικαιότατα most justly very justly
σοφῶς wisely	σοφώτερον more wisely rather wisely	σοφώτατα most wisely very wisely
$d\lambda\eta\theta ilde{\omega}_{\mathcal{G}}$ truly	άληθέστερον more truly rather truly	άληθέστατα most truly very truly
ήδέως gladly, pleasantly	ἥδῖον more gladly, more pleasantly rather gladly, rather pleasantly	ἥδιστα most gladly, most pleasantly very gladly, very pleasantly

Comparative and superlative adverbs can take the same constructions as comparative and superlative adjectives (cf. Section 131.5-8).

'Αριστοφάνης τοῖς πολίταις σοφώτερον Εὐρῖπίδου συνεβούλευεν.

Aristophanes used to advise the citizens more wisely than Euripides.

(genitive of comparison)

δ δῆμος εἰρήνην ἐποιήσατο $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma}$ δικαιότατα. The people made peace as justly as possible. (superlative with $\dot{\omega}_{\varsigma}$)

Some adverbs also form comparatives with the ending $-\omega \varsigma$. These alternative forms (e.g., $d\lambda\eta\theta\epsilon\sigma\tau\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\omega\varsigma$, $\delta\iota\kappa\alpha\iota\sigma\tau\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\omega\varsigma$) will be easily recognized in reading. The regular rules should be followed in English-to-Greek composition.

142. IRREGULAR COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

Some adjectives alter the stem, or employ a different stem or stems, in the comparative and superlative degree.

All such adjectives employ the comparative suffix $-i\omega v$, $-i\omega v$ (or, because of phonetic changes, $-\omega v$, -ov) and the superlative suffix $-i\sigma\tau o\varsigma$, $-i\sigma\tau \eta$, $-i\sigma\tau ov$. Compare $\dot{\eta}\delta\dot{t}\omega v$, $\ddot{\eta}\delta\dot{\iota}\sigma v$; $\ddot{\eta}\delta\dot{\iota}\sigma\tau o\varsigma$, $\dot{\eta}\delta\dot{\iota}\sigma\tau o\tau$ (Section 131.2). The chart below lists only the masculine nominative singular.

For the sake of simplicity only the strict comparative and superlative meanings, e.g., "better," "best," are given, but intensive meanings, e.g., "rather good," "very good," are equally possible.

The adjectives $d\gamma a\theta \delta \varsigma$, "good," and $\kappa a\kappa \delta \varsigma$, "bad," have three different comparatives and superlatives with somewhat different meanings.

POSITIVE DEGREE	COMPARATIVE DEGREE	SUPERLATIVE DEGREE
ἀγαθός good	ἀμείνων better, (in ability or worth)	ἄριστος best (in ability or worth) βελτίων better (morally)	βέλτιστος best (morally) κρείττων stronger, better	κράτιστος strongest, best κακός bad	какі́wv worse (morally)	κάκιστος worst (morally) χείρων worse (morally, in ability)	χείοιστος worst (morally, in ability)

	ἥττων weaker, worse	adverb: ἥκιστα least, not at all μέγας	μείζων	μέγιστος
great	greater	greatest όλίγος	ἐλάττων	έλάχιστος
little	less	least
few	fewer	fewest
πολύς much many	πλείων οτ πλέων more	πλεῖστος most ૄ⁄αδιος	ὁάων	ģ̃αστος easy	easier	easiest
ταχύς	θάττων	τάχιστος
swift	swifter	swiftest

Observations: (1) Note the origins of the following comparatives:

πρείττων < *πρέτιων ήττων < *ήπιων μείζων < *μέγιων ἐλάττων < *ἐλάχιων θάττων < *θάχιων

In the positive and superlative degrees of $\tau \alpha \chi \psi \zeta$ the initial aspirate of the stem $\theta \alpha \chi$ - has lost its aspiration (dissimilation of aspirates).

- (2) The comparative $\pi \lambda \epsilon l\omega \nu/\pi \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \omega \nu$, $\pi \lambda \epsilon \tilde{\iota} o\nu/\pi \lambda \dot{\epsilon} o\nu$ has a genitive singular $\pi \lambda \epsilon lovos/\pi \lambda \dot{\epsilon} ovos$ (all genders) and employs the two alternative stems $\pi \lambda \epsilon \iota o\nu$ and $\pi \lambda \epsilon o\nu$ throughout its declension.
- (3) Adverbs derived from these adjectives use as their comparative the neuter accusative singular of the comparative degree of the adjective; the superlative degree of the adverb is the neuter accusative plural of the superlative degree of the adjective, e.g.:

κακώς κάκιον κάκιστα

143. THE VERB olδα, "know"

The first Principal Part of this verb is an unreduplicated perfect which has some endings slightly different from those of $\pi \epsilon \pi \alpha l \delta \epsilon \nu \kappa a$. This perfect tense has a present meaning: "I know"; the pluperfect means "I knew." The verb is actually the perfect tense of the verb which is used as the aorist of $\delta \varrho d\omega$: $\epsilon l \delta o \nu$. The perfect tense stem has three different forms with different vowel grades:

 \emph{oid} -: used only in the perfect indicative singular

 $l\delta$ -: used only in the perfect indicative plural and in the imperative $\epsilon l\delta \epsilon - /\epsilon l\delta$ -: used elsewhere

		PERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	PERFECT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE	PERFECT OPTATIVE ACTIVE
S	1	oloa	$arepsilon l \delta ilde{\omega}$	εἰδείην
	2	$ol\sigma\theta\alpha$	$arepsilon l\delta ilde{\eta} arsigma$	είδείης
	3	$o\bar{t}\delta \mathbf{\epsilon}(\mathbf{v})$	$arepsilon l\delta ilde{\eta}$	είδείη
P	1	ἴσμεν	$\epsilon l\delta ilde{\omega} \mu \epsilon v$	εἰδεῖμεν/εἰδείημεν
	2	ἴστε	$\epsilon l\delta \tilde{\eta} au \epsilon$	εἰδεῖτε/εἰδείητε
	3	$l\sigma\bar{\mathbf{a}}\mathbf{\sigma}\mathbf{i}(\mathbf{v})$	$\varepsilon l\delta \tilde{\omega} \sigma \iota(\nu)$	$arepsilon i \delta arepsilon i \epsilon i \delta arepsilon i \epsilon i \delta arepsilon i \eta \sigma lpha u$

- Observations: (1) The accent in the perfect subjunctive is due to the contraction of the final vowel of the stem $\varepsilon i \delta \varepsilon$ with the subjunctive endings. Note that the accent in the perfect optative active never goes back beyond the $-\iota$ -. Cf. the first person plural, a orist optative passive $\pi a \iota \delta \varepsilon v \theta \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \mu \varepsilon v$.
 - (2) Note the change of $-\delta$ to $-\sigma$ in the stem $i\delta$ in the perfect indicative plural. The second person singular was originally $*ol\delta\theta\alpha$.

PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE:

S 1 ἤδη/ἤδειν
 P 1 ἤσμεν/ἤδεμεν
 2 ἤδησθα/ἤδεις
 3 ἤδει(ν)
 P 1 ἤσμεν/ἤδεμεν
 3 ἦσαν/ἤδεσαν

Observations: (1) The augmented form of $\epsilon \hat{l}$ is $\hat{\eta}$; note the iota subscript (cf. Vocabulary Notes, pages 101–102).

- (2) Note the change of $-\delta$ to $-\sigma$ of the augmented stem $\mathring{\eta}\delta$ in the first set of forms in the plural of the pluperfect indicative active.
- (3) The form $\eta \sigma \alpha \nu$ is the third person plural, pluperfect indicative active of $\delta l \delta \alpha$ or imperfect indicative active of $\delta l \delta \alpha$. Be careful to distinguish the pluperfect of $\delta l \delta \alpha$ from the imperfects of $\delta l \delta \alpha$ and $\delta l \delta \alpha$.

PERFECT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE:

S 2 ἴσθι

Ρ 2 ἴστε

3 ἴστω

3 ἴστων

Observations: (1) The second person singular is identical in form with the second person singular, present imperative active of the verb $\varepsilon l\mu l$.

(2) Note again the change of $-\delta$ - to $-\sigma$ - in the stem $i\delta$ -.

PERFECT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: εἰδέναι

PERFECT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom.	εἰδώς	$arepsilon l\delta v ilde{\iota} a$	$arepsilon i\delta \delta \zeta$
Gen.	εἰδότος	εἰδυίᾶς	είδότος

144. TEMPORAL CLAUSES INTRODUCED BY μέχρι and ἕως μέχρι, "as long as; until" εως, "as long as, while; until"

The two most common constructions in temporal clauses introduced by these conjunctions are a past indicative when the main verb is past and the temporal clause refers to a definite act in past time, and $\tilde{\alpha}\nu$ with the subjunctive when the main verb is either present or future.

1. PAST INDICATIVE

$$\mathring{\epsilon}\mu\alpha\chi\delta\mu\eta\nu\left\{\begin{array}{l}\mu\acute{\epsilon}\chi\varrho\iota\\ \mathring{\epsilon}\omega\varsigma\end{array}\right\}\ \mathring{\epsilon}\nu\acute{t}\varkappa\omega\nu.$$

I was fighting as long as I was winning.

2. $\ddot{a}v$ + SUBJUNCTIVE

$$\mu αχοῦμαι \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \mu \acute{\epsilon} \chi \varrho \iota \\ \ddot{\epsilon} \omega \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \ \, \mathring{a}ν \ \, ν \bar{\iota} \varkappa \acute{\eta} \sigma \omega \mu \epsilon \nu.$$

I shall fight until we win.

$$\mu \alpha \chi o \tilde{v} \mu \alpha \iota \left\{ \begin{array}{c} \mu \acute{\epsilon} \chi \varrho \iota \\ \ddot{\epsilon} \omega \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \ \, \mathring{a} r \ \, \mathring{\epsilon} r \tau \alpha \tilde{v} \theta \alpha \ \, \mu \acute{\epsilon} r \eta \tau \epsilon.$$

I shall fight as long as you remain here.

Usually, as in the examples above, the conjunctions $\mu \ell \chi \varrho \iota$ and $\ell \omega \varsigma$ mean "until" when the verb which they introduce has simple aspect (a orist indicative or subjunctive) and mean "as long as" when the verb which they introduce has progressive/repeated aspect (imperfect indicative or present subjunctive).

145. TEMPORAL CLAUSES INTRODUCED BY ποίν, "before, until"

The conjunction $\pi\rho$ iv can introduce both an infinitive and a finite verb.

1. $\pi \varrho \ell \nu + INFINITIVE$

 $\pi \varrho l \nu$ introducing an infinitive means "before." The infinitive may have an accusative subject. The main clause is usually not negated.

έδίδαξεν τούς πολίτας πρίν ἀπελθεῖν.

He taught the citizens before going away.

άγγελεῖ τὴν νίκην τῆ πόλει πρὶν τοὺς κήρῦκας ἐλθεῖν.

He will announce the victory to the city before the heralds come.

2. $\pi \varrho \ell \nu + \text{FINITE VERB}$

When the verb of the main clause is negated, $\pi\varrho\ell\nu$ introduces a finite verb and means "until"; it governs the same constructions as $\mu\ell\chi\varrho\iota$ and $\ell\omega\varsigma$: a past indicative or $d\nu$ and the subjunctive.

SECTION 146 549

οὐ τοὺς πολίτᾶς ἐπαίδευσε πρὶν τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν. He did not educate the citizens until he wrote the book.

οὐ τοὺς πολίτᾶς παιδεύσει πρὶν ἄν τὸ βιβλίον γράψη. He will not educate the citizens until he writes the book.

146. ATTRACTION OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN TO THE CASE OF ITS ANTECEDENT OMISSION OF THE ANTECEDENT OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN

The relative pronoun $\mathcal{S}_{\mathcal{S}}$, $\tilde{\eta}$, $\tilde{\mathcal{S}}$ takes its gender and number from its antecedent, and its case from its use in its own clause.

οί στρατιῶται ἄξιοί εἰσι τῶν ἄθλων α οἱ πολῖται διδόασιν. The soldiers are worthy of the prizes which the citizens give.

In this sentence, the relative pronoun is neuter plural because its antecedent is the neuter plural $\mathring{a}\theta\lambda\omega\nu$, accusative because it is the direct object of $\delta\iota\delta\acute{a}\sigma\iota\nu$ in its own clause.

When the relative pronoun is accusative and the antecedent is either genitive or dative, the relative pronoun is frequently attracted into the case of the antecedent:

οί στρατιῶται ἄξιοί εἰσι τῶν ἄθλων το οί πολῖται διδόασιν. The soldiers are worthy of the prizes which the citizens give.

In this sentence, the relative pronoun has been attracted into the genitive case, the case of its antecedent. If asked for the syntax of such a relative pronoun one should say that it is neuter plural because of its antecedent $\ddot{a}\theta\lambda\omega v$, genitive by attraction to the case of its antecedent instead of accusative as direct object of $\delta\iota\delta\dot{a}\sigma\iota v$.

οὐχ ἔψομαι τούτῳ τῷ ἡγεμόνι δν πέμπετε. οὐχ ἔψομαι τούτῳ τῷ ἡγεμόνι ῷ πέμπετε. I shall not follow this leader whom you are sending.

In both sentences, the relative pronoun is masculine singular because of its antecedent $\eta\gamma\epsilon\mu\delta\nu\iota$. In the first sentence the relative pronoun is accusative because it is the direct object of the verb $\pi\epsilon\mu\pi\epsilon\tau\epsilon$. In the second the relative pronoun is dative because it is attracted to the case of its antecedent, which is dative.

The relative pronouns $\delta\sigma\sigma_{\zeta}$ and $\sigma l\sigma_{\zeta}$ are also frequently attracted into the case of their antecedent.

τοῦτόν γ' οὐκ ἀξιοῦμεν τῶν ἄθλων ὅσων πέμπετε. We do not think this man, at least, worthy of the prizes, as many as you send.

οὐχ ἐσπόμεθα τούτοις οιοις ἐπέμψατε. We did not follow these men, the sort which you sent.

At times, especially when the antecedent is either indefinite or demonstrative, it is left out and the relative is attracted to the case of the omitted antecedent.

of stratival axiol elsiv wn of $\pi o \lambda \tilde{\iota} \tau a \iota \delta \iota \delta \delta \bar{a} \sigma \iota \nu$. The soldiers are worthy (of the things) which the citizens give. The soldiers are worthy of what the citizens give.

The $\tilde{\omega}v$ is standing for $\tilde{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon i\nu\omega\nu$ $\tilde{\alpha}$, in which $\tilde{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon i\nu\omega\nu$ would be the genitive governed by $\tilde{\alpha}\xi\iota\sigma\iota$, and $\tilde{\alpha}$ the direct object of $\delta\iota\delta\delta\bar{\alpha}\sigma\iota\nu$.

The omission of the antecedent of the relative pronoun has already been seen in such sentences as:

οὖ τἶμῶ δς ἀν τοῦτο πράττη. I do not honor whoever does this.

The omission of the antecedent of the relative is frequent in such sentences as:

ἔστιν ὅστις τοῦτον τ $\bar{\iota}\mu\bar{q}$. There is (someone) who honors this man.

οὐκ ἔστιν ὅστις τοῦτον τ $\bar{\iota}\mu\bar{q}$. There is not (anyone) who honors this man. There is no one who honors this man.

οὖκ ἔστι περὶ ὅτον οὖ λέγει οὖτος.
There is not (anything) about which this man does not speak.
There is nothing about which this man does not speak.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb $ai\sigma\chi\dot{v}\nu\rho\mu\alpha\iota$, $ai\sigma\chi\nu\nu\sigma\ddot{\nu}\mu\alpha\iota$, —, —, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\mu\mu\alpha\iota$, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\dot{v}\nu\theta\eta\nu$, "be ashamed, feel shame before," is a passive deponent with a contracted future. It has the same root as the adjective $ai\sigma\chi\varrho\delta\varsigma$, $ai\sigma\chi\varrho\delta$, $ai\sigma\chi\varrho\delta\nu$. The people before whom one feels shame are put in the accusative. Note that the original form of the first person singular, perfect indicative middle/passive was $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\nu\mu\alpha\iota$. The conjugation is: $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\mu\mu\alpha\iota$, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\mu\mu\epsilon\nu\sigma\varsigma$ ϵl , $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\nu\tau\alpha\iota$, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\mu\mu\epsilon\theta\alpha$, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\nu\theta\epsilon$, $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\nu\mu\mu\epsilon\nu\iota$ $\epsilon l\sigma l(\nu)$. Both the second person singular and the third person plural use periphrastic forms, forms consisting of a participle and a form of the verb $\epsilon l\mu l$. The pluperfect follows the same pattern. The perfect infinitive middle/passive is $\mathring{\eta}\sigma\chi\dot{\nu}\nu\theta\alpha\iota$.

In the verb $d\pi\delta\lambda\lambda\bar{\nu}\mu\iota$, $d\pi\delta\lambda\tilde{\omega}$, $d\pi\delta\lambda\epsilon\sigma a$ (trans.) or $d\pi\omega\lambda\delta\mu\eta\nu$ (intrans.), $d\pi\delta\lambda\omega\lambda\epsilon\mu\alpha$ (trans.) or $d\pi\delta\lambda\omega\lambda\alpha$ (intrans.), ——, "kill, lose; (mid. and intrans.) die, cease to exist," note the contracted future and the fact that in the aorist and in the perfect, there are separate transitive forms (the first aorist $d\pi\omega\lambda\epsilon\sigma a$ and the perfect $d\pi\delta\lambda\omega\lambda\epsilon\mu a$) and intransitive forms (the second aorist middle $d\pi\omega\lambda\delta\mu\eta\nu$ and the perfect $d\pi\delta\lambda\omega\lambda a$). In the present, imperfect, and future tenses, the middle forms are also intransitive. The present and imperfect are conjugated exactly like the corresponding tenses of $d\epsilon\ell\nu\nu\bar{\nu}\mu\iota$.

The verb —, $\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\dot{\eta}\sigma\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\dot{\eta}\varrho\dot{\sigma}\mu\eta\nu$, —, —, is synonymous with the corresponding tenses of $\dot{\epsilon}\varrho\omega\tau\dot{\alpha}\omega$. Both of these verbs govern indirect questions.

In the verb εὐρίσκω, εὐρήσω, ηὖρον, ηὔρηκα, ηὕρημαι, ηὐρέθην, "find, discover," note the inchoative suffix in Principal Part I and the -ε- in Principal Part VI, ηὑρέθην. All of the forms beginning with ηύ- are also found with εύ-: e.g., the first person singular, imperfect indicative active is either ηὕρισκον or εύρισκον. The second person singular, a rist imperative active is εύρέ: cf. ε $l\pi$ έ, ἐλθέ, lδέ, λαβέ.

The verb $\eta\gamma\dot{\epsilon}o\mu\alpha\iota$, $\eta\gamma\dot{\eta}\sigmao\mu\alpha\iota$, $\eta\gamma\eta\sigma\dot{\alpha}\mu\eta\nu$, —, $\eta\gamma\eta\mu\alpha\iota$, $\eta\gamma\dot{\eta}\theta\eta\nu$ has the same root as the noun $\eta\gamma\epsilon\mu\dot{\omega}\nu$, $\eta\gamma\epsilon\mu\dot{\omega}\nu_{0}$, δ , "leader." The primary meaning of the verb is "to lead the way." From that developed the notion of "to be a commander, rule"; like $\alpha\varrho\chi\omega$, $\eta\gamma\dot{\varepsilon}o\mu\alpha\iota$ governs the genitive case. A final and very important meaning is "to believe"; in this sense, $\eta\gamma\dot{\varepsilon}o\mu\alpha\iota$, like $\nu o\mu\dot{\iota}\zeta\omega$, governs an infinitive with an accusative subject.

The adjective $l\sigma\sigma\varsigma$, $l\sigma\eta$, $l\sigma\sigma\nu$, "equal, fair; flat," has the comparative $l\sigma\alpha l\tau\epsilon\varrho\sigma\varsigma$ and the superlative $l\sigma\alpha l\tau\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$; cf. $\pi\alpha l\alpha\iota\delta\varsigma$. Note the second and more common meaning of the adverb $l\sigma\omega\varsigma$: "perhaps."

The word $\varkappa a \iota \nu \acute{o} \varsigma$, $\varkappa a \iota \nu \acute{\eta}$, $\varkappa a \iota \nu \acute{o} \nu$, "new, strange," is in some senses synonymous with $\nu \acute{e} o \varsigma$, $\nu \acute{e} \ddot{a}$, $\nu \acute{e} o \nu$. Unlike $\nu \acute{e} o \varsigma$, however, it never has the meaning "young."

The basic meaning of κρίνω, κρινῶ, ἔκρῖνα, κέκρικα, κέκριμαι, ἐκρίθην is "separate," from which developed the meanings "decide, judge." Note the -ī-in Principal Parts I and III, and the short vowel elsewhere. The future is contracted; cf. μενῶ. The compound deponent ἀποκρίνομαι, ἀποκρινοῦμαι, ἀποκρινάμην, —, ἀποκέκριμαι, —, "answer," is a very common verb. The person to whom an answer is given is in the dative.

Note that $\mu\tilde{a}\lambda\lambda\sigma\nu$, the comparative degree of the adverb $\mu\acute{a}\lambda\alpha$, has already been presented.

The verb olda, elda out, —, —, —, "know," takes two kinds of indirect statement: participle, or $\delta \tau \iota / \dot{\omega} \varsigma$ + finite verb. With an infinitive the verb means "know how (to)"

The compound $\sigma \acute{v}roi\delta a$, "know," can take a reflexive pronoun in the dative with which a participle can agree, or the participle can agree with the subject in the nominative:

σύνοιδα ἐμαυτῆ τὴν πόλιν σωσάση. σύνοιδα ἐμαυτῆ τὴν πόλιν σώσασα. I know that I saved the city.

The rhetorical figure in which the chronological order of events is reversed is called ὕστερον πρότερον.

B. Aristophanes, Acharnians 241-283

Dikaiopolis has made a private peace with Sparta during the Peloponnesian War. He is preparing to celebrate a festival of Dionysos, the Rural Dionysia, when the Chorus of aged Acharnian men, who oppose the peace, interrupt him.

UNIT 20

147. VERBAL ADJECTIVES IN -τέος, -τέα, -τέον

Many verbs form verbal adjectives which express necessity or obligation. Most such adjectives are formed from a stem obtained by dropping from Principal Part VI not only the past indicative augment and the ending $-\eta v$ but also, in those verbs where it appears, the $-\theta$ - preceding the ending. To this stem is added the adjectival suffix $-\tau \acute{e}o\varsigma$, $-\tau \acute{e}a$, $-\tau \acute{e}ov$. Verbal adjectives are declined like $\Breve{a}\xi \iota o\varsigma$.

VERB	PRINCIPAL PART VI	VERBAL ADJECTIVE
λύω	ἐλύθην	λυτέος, λυτέα, λυτέον
δίδωμι	έδόθην	δοτέος, δοτέα, δοτέον
ποιέω	ἐποιήθην	ποιητέος, ποιητέα, ποιητέον

When the consonants $-\varphi$ - or $-\chi$ - precede the adjectival suffix, they lose their aspiration and become $-\pi$ - and $-\kappa$ - respectively.

ἄρχω	$\eta_{Q}\chi heta\eta u$	ἀρκτέος, ἀρκτέā, ἀρκτέον
γράφω	ἐγράφην	γραπτέος, γραπτέα, γραπτέον
πράττω	$\dot{\epsilon}\piarrho\dot{lpha}\chi heta\eta v$	πρāκτέος, πρāκτέā, πρāκτέον

Verbal adjectives not formed according to these rules are given in the Appendix, pp. 688-89.

Verbal adjectives can be employed in two ways:

- (1) the personal (passive) construction
- (2) the impersonal (active and middle) construction

1. THE PERSONAL (PASSIVE) CONSTRUCTION OF VERBAL ADJECTIVES

If a verb is transitive and takes a direct object in the accusative case, its verbal adjective can modify a noun or pronoun in order to indicate that the verbal action is obligatory and must be performed upon that noun or pronoun:

ποιητέος, ποιητέα, ποιητέον having to be done ταῦτα ποιητέα ἐστίν.
These things are having to be done.
These things must be done.

In this construction the verbal adjective usually serves as a predicate adjective linked by some form of $\epsilon i\mu i$ to the noun or pronoun with which it agrees.

If the agent of the action is mentioned, the dative of personal agent is employed (cf. Section 44).

ἡμῖν ταῦτα γραπτέα ἐστίν.
These things must be written by us.
ὑμῖν οὖτοι λυτέοι εἰσίν.
These men must be released by you.

2. THE IMPERSONAL (ACTIVE, MIDDLE) CONSTRUCTION OF VERBAL ADJECTIVES

The verbal adjective of any verb can be placed in the neuter nominative singular, standing alone and not modifying any noun or pronoun. In this impersonal construction

- (a) the verbal adjective indicates that the action of the verb (in the active or middle voice) is obligatory;
- (b) the object of the verb, if expressed, stands in the same case as that which the verb requires in its finite forms;
- (c) if a personal agent of the action is named, a dative of personal agent is usually employed;
- (d) the verbal adjective serves as a substantive, and is the subject of the appropriate form of the verb $\varepsilon i\mu l$.

Σωκράτει δίκην δοτέον ἐστίν. Sokrates must pay the penalty.

ύμῖν τούτους λυτέον ἐστίν.
You must release these men.
ήμῖν ταῦτα γραπτέον ἐστίν.
We must write these things.
τῷ βασιλεῖ τοῦ δήμου ἀρκτέον ἐστίν.
The king must rule the people.

Sometimes the neuter nominative plural of the verbal adjective is employed in this construction with no difference in meaning.

τρίν τούτους λυτέα ἐστίν. You must release these men.

Occasionally, in this construction, the personal agent appears in the accusative case instead of the dative.

ημᾶς ταῦτα γραπτέον ἐστίν.We must write these things.

When negated by ov, verbal adjectives in either the personal or impersonal construction convey the idea that the action must not occur.

148. THE IMPERSONAL VERBS $\delta \epsilon \tilde{i}$, "it is necessary, must; there is need" $\chi \varrho \dot{\eta}$, "ought, must"

Like the impersonal verbs $\xi \sigma \tau \iota(\nu)$ and $\xi \xi \varepsilon \sigma \tau \iota(\nu)$, "it is possible," are the verbs $\delta \varepsilon \tilde{\iota}$, "there is need, must," and $\chi \varrho \dot{\eta}$, "ought, must." Such verbs have no definite subject; all finite forms are third person singular active.

δεῖ, δεήσει, ἐδέησε(ν), —, —, , "it is necessary, must; there is need" $\chi \varrho \dot{\eta}$, $\chi \varrho \ddot{\eta} \sigma \tau \alpha \iota$, —, —, "ought, must"

The verb $\delta \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$ has a present tense stem $\delta \epsilon$ - which contracts with the ending ONLY in the present indicative and infinitive active and in the imperfect indicative active.

The verb $\chi\varrho\dot{\eta}$ consists of an indeclinable noun $\chi\varrho\dot{\eta}$, not translated separately, contracted with the appropriate form of $\epsilon i\mu i$, except in the present indicative active, where $\chi\varrho\dot{\eta}$ stands by itself.

The forms of these verbs are as follows:

present indicative active	$\delta arepsilon ilde{\iota}$	χθή present subjunctive active	$\delta arepsilon \eta$	$χ \varrho \tilde{\eta} \; (χ \varrho \acute{\eta} + \tilde{\eta})$ present optative active	δέοι	χ ϱ είη (χ ϱ ή + ϵ ἴη)
present infinitive active	$\delta arepsilon ilde{\iota} arepsilon$	$χ \varrho \tilde{\eta} v \alpha \iota \ (χ \varrho \acute{\eta} + \varepsilon \bar{\iota} v \alpha \iota)$ present participle active	$\delta \acute{e}o u$	χ $arrho$ εών (χ $arrho$ ή $+$ ὄν)
imperfect indicative active	ἔδει	$\chi arrho ilde{\eta} u / arepsilon \chi arrho ilde{\eta} u \ (\chi arrho ilde{\eta} + ilde{\eta} u)$
future indicative active	δεήσει	χρῆσται (χρή + ἔσται)
aorist indicative active	ἐδέησε(ν)

Observations: (1) The participle of these verbs appears in the neuter only.

- (2) The participle $\chi \varrho \varepsilon \acute{\omega} \nu$ (from * $\chi \varrho \eta \acute{o} \nu$) results from quantitative metathesis.
- (3) The alternative imperfect form $\dot{\epsilon}\chi\varrho\tilde{\eta}\nu$ adds the past indicative augment.

These verbs take an infinitive, usually with subject accusative, to complete their meaning.

δεῖ ἡμᾶς τοῦτο ποιῆσαι. There is need for us to do this. We must do this. $\chi \varrho \dot{\eta}$ ἡμᾶς τοῦτο ποιῆσαι. We ought to do this. We must do this.

When negated, these verbs usually mean "must not," but où $\delta\epsilon\tilde{\imath}$ can sometimes mean "there is no need."

 $\begin{array}{l} o\mathring{v} \,\, \delta \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \,\, \\ o\mathring{v} \,\, \chi \varrho \mathring{\eta} \,\, \end{array} \, \begin{array}{l} \mathring{\eta} \mu \tilde{\alpha} \varsigma \,\,\, \tau o \tilde{v} \tau o \,\,\, \pi o \iota \tilde{\eta} \sigma \alpha \iota. \\ \end{array} \\ \text{We must not do this.} \\ o\mathring{v} \,\, \delta \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \,\,\, \mathring{\eta} \mu \tilde{\alpha} \varsigma \,\,\, \tau o \tilde{v} \tau o \,\,\, \pi o \iota \tilde{\eta} \sigma \alpha \iota. \\ \end{array} \\ \text{There is no need for us to do this.} \end{array}$

The verb $\delta \varepsilon \tilde{\iota}$ can take a genitive of the thing needed (a genitive of separation) and a dative of the person needing the thing.

δεῖ ἡμῖν σωφροσύνης. There is need to us of moderation. We have need of moderation. $\pi o \lambda \lambda o \tilde{v}$ $\delta \epsilon \tilde{\iota}$. There is need of much. (I.e., much is lacking.)

The neuter participle $\delta \acute{e}or$, $\delta \acute{e}or \tau o \varsigma$ means "needed, necessary."

del ποιούμεν τὰ δέοντα.We always do the things necessary.

149. THE USE OF δοκεῖ IN THE SENSE "seems best"

The verb $\delta on \ell \omega$, "seem," can be used in the third person singular with the meaning "it seems best" to express a personal or collective opinion or decision. In such sentences, the infinitive serves as the subject of $\delta one \tilde{\iota}$.

δοκεῖ μοι τοῦτο ποιεῖν. It seems best to me to do this.

ἔδοξε τοῖς 'Aθηναίοις ἀγγέλους πρὸς βασιλέᾶ πέμψαι. It seemed best to the Athenians to send messengers to the king.

ἔδοξε τῆ βουλῆ καὶ τῷ δήμω... It seemed best to the council and the people . . . (= The council and the people decided . . .)

A pronoun can stand, instead of an infinitive, as subject.

ταῦτά μοι δοκεῖ. These things seem best to me.

150. ACCUSATIVE ABSOLUTE

The participles of impersonal verbs (e.g., $\delta \varepsilon \tilde{\imath}$, $\delta \circ \varkappa \tilde{\iota}$, $\tilde{\epsilon} \xi \varepsilon \sigma \tau \iota$, $\chi \varrho \dot{\eta}$) can be employed, independently of the main verb of a sentence, in a construction called the accusative absolute. Such participles are neuter singular and can govern an infinitive just as do the other forms of these verbs. These are NOT accompanied by a noun or pronoun.

This construction is like the genitive absolute, which is employed with verbs which have a specific noun or pronoun as subject. Both the genitive absolute and the accusative absolute are circumstantial uses of the participle; both are "absolute" in the sense that they express a circumstance separate from the main clause of the sentence. But the obligation or possibility expressed by an accusative absolute usually applies to someone named in the main clause.

δέον δίκην δοῦναι, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐφύγετε.
It being necessary to pay the penalty, you left the city.
Although it was necessary to pay the penalty, you left the city.

έξὸν ἀγαθὰ ποιεῖν, ποιῶμεν ἀγαθά. It being possible to do good things, let us do good things. Since it is possible to do good things, let us do good things.

151. THE VERB κεῖμαι, "lie, be placed, be set"

The verb $\varkappa \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \mu \alpha \iota$ appears only in the present, imperfect, and future tenses. It has only a middle voice.

The verb is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses. The present tense stem has two grades:

Long-vowel grade: $\varkappa \varepsilon \iota$ Short-vowel grade: $\varkappa \varepsilon$ -

Unlike the athematic verbs already encountered, neimal employs the long-vowel grade of the present tense stem throughout the present indicative, in the present infinitive and participle, and in the imperfect indicative. The short-vowel grade is employed only in the present subjunctive and optative.

The usual athematic endings are employed, EXCEPT that the optative has thematic endings.

The short-vowel present tense stem $\varkappa\varepsilon$ - does NOT contract with the subjunctive and optative endings.

These, then, are the forms of $\varkappa \varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \mu \alpha \iota$ in the present and imperfect tenses.

	PRES IND. MID		IMPERF. IND. MIDDLE	PRESENT SUBJ. MIDDLE	PRESENT OPT. MIDDLE	PRESENT IMPER. MIDDLE κείμενος, κειμένη, κείμενον PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE:

Observation: The second person plural, present imperative middle is identical with the second person plural, present indicative middle. Context will help to determine meaning.

152. SECOND-DECLENSION NOUNS OF THE TYPE νοῦς, νοῦ, δ, "mind"

Second-declension nouns of the type $vo\tilde{v}\varsigma$, $vo\tilde{v}$, δ , "mind," have stems ending in the vowel -o-, which contracts with the declensional endings according to the regular rules. Uncontracted forms are given in parentheses.

153. THE THIRD-DECLENSION NOUN ἄστυ, ἄστεως, τό, "town"

The third-declension noun $\delastrop{\alpha}\sigma\tau v$, $\delastrop{\alpha}\sigma\tau v$, $\delastrop{\alpha}\sigma\tau v$, "town," has two stems: the stem dotv-, with no ending added, forms the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular; the stem $d\sigma\tau\varepsilon$ -, plus the appropriate endings, appears elsewhere.

Observations: (1) The genitive singular and plural are like those of $\pi\delta\lambda\iota\varsigma$, πόλεως, ή.

(2) The nominative, accusative, and vocative plural are like those of γένος, γένους, τό.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb $d\varphi_{ii}$ ψ_{i} ψ

The accent of Principal Part V follows the rule that in the perfect active and middle/passive the accent of a compound verb cannot recede beyond the initial syllable of the stem.

The deponent verb $\kappa \epsilon \tilde{\iota} \mu \alpha \iota$, $\kappa \epsilon l \sigma o \mu \alpha \iota$, —, —, —, "lie, be placed, be set," is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses (see Section 151). The present tense of this verb serves as the perfect passive of $\tau l \theta \eta \mu \iota$, and the imperfect as its pluperfect.

νόμος κεῖται περί τούτων. A law is laid down (= has been laid down) about these things. οἱ κείμενοι νόμοι the laws set the laws laid down

The deponent verb $\pi v v \theta \acute{a}v o \mu a \iota$, $\pi e \acute{v} \sigma o \mu a \iota$, $\mathring{e}\pi v \theta \acute{o}\mu \eta v$, ---, $\pi \acute{e}\pi v \sigma \mu a \iota$, ---, "inquire, learn by inquiry," has in Principal Part I both a nasal infix and the suffix -a v-; Principal Part III is a second aorist; Principal Part II shows the egrade of the root, while the other Principal Parts show the zero-grade. This verb takes the same constructions as $\mathring{a}\varkappa o \acute{v}\omega$: accusative of the thing heard, genitive of the person heard, indirect statement with a finite verb introduced by $\delta \tau \iota /\mathring{\omega}_{\mathcal{G}}$, indirect statement with a participle and subject accusative. It can also introduce indirect statement with infinitive and subject accusative.

The verb $\tau \varrho \acute{\epsilon} \pi \omega$, $\tau \varrho \acute{\epsilon} \psi \omega$, $\acute{\epsilon} \tau \varrho \epsilon \psi \omega$ or $\acute{\epsilon} \tau \varrho a \pi \acute{\epsilon} \mu \eta \nu$, ré $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, and re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$, re $\tau \varrho a \mu \omega$.

The verb $\varphi a i \nu \omega$, $\varphi a \nu \widetilde{\omega}$, $\xi \varphi \eta \nu a$, $\pi \xi \varphi \eta \nu a$, $\pi \xi \varphi a \sigma \mu a \iota$, $\xi \varphi \acute{a} \nu \eta \nu$, "show, cause to appear; (mid., perfect active, aorist passive) appear," has a contracted future active and middle. The perfect middle/passive tense stem was originally $\pi \varepsilon \varphi a \nu$, but this stem was replaced by the stem $\pi \varepsilon \varphi a \sigma$ in many but not all forms. The perfect middle/passive is conjugated as follows in the indicative: $\pi \acute{e} \varphi a \sigma \mu a \iota$, $\pi \varepsilon \varphi a \sigma \mu \acute{e} \nu \sigma \varepsilon \varepsilon l$, $\pi \acute{e} \varphi a \nu \tau a \iota$, $\pi \varepsilon \varphi a \iota \nu \theta \varepsilon$, $\pi \varepsilon \varphi a \sigma \mu \acute{e} \nu \sigma \iota \varepsilon \varepsilon l$. Note the periphrastic forms in the second person singular and third person plural. The pluperfect indicative middle/passive follows the same pattern. The perfect infinitive middle/passive is $\pi \varepsilon \varphi \acute{a} \nu \theta a \iota$ ($<*\pi \varepsilon \varphi \acute{a} \nu \sigma \theta a \iota$). The perfect active $\pi \acute{e} \varphi \eta \nu a$ means "I have appeared"; the aorist passive $\mathring{e} \varphi \acute{a} \nu \eta \nu$ is deponent and means "I appeared." In the sense "appear" this verb can govern either an infinitive or a participle with a substantial difference in meaning:

φαίνεται κακός είναι. He appears to be bad. φαίνεται κακός ὄν. He is apparent, being bad. It is apparent that he is bad.

ANSWER KEY FOR SAMPLE GRAMMAR EXAMINATION

I. I, indeed, want first on the one hand to say how I ought to speak/how it is necessary for me to speak, then on the other hand to speak. For all those having spoken earlier seem to me not to be honoring the god but to be considering (the) men blessed for the good things for which/of which the god is responsible/cause to them. But being what sort of a someone/a person he gives these things, by no one has been said. But there is one good method of all honor/honoring, by word to go through what sort he happens to be concerning whomever the speech is. Thus indeed it is just also for us to honor Love, saying about him first what sort he is, then what things he gives.

I say then that, all gods being blessed, Love, if it is right to speak in this way, is the most blessed of all, being most beautiful and best. But this one/he is most beautiful in the following way. First, on the one hand, companion, he is the youngest of the gods and is always together with the young. For the ancient saying holds well/is good, that "like is always together with like."...

Concerning on the one hand the beauty of the god, these things/the preceding things indeed are enough; concerning the virtue of Love, on the other hand, after these things one must speak, the greatest thing (being) that Love neither wrongs nor is wronged, neither by a god nor a god, (and he wrongs or is wronged) neither by a man nor a man. But in addition to justice he shares in the most/has a very large share of moderation. For all say that moderation is to be stronger than pleasures and desires, but that no pleasure is stronger than Love.

Concerning, then, the justice and moderation of the god, on the one hand, it has been spoken by me; concerning his wisdom, on the other hand, it is left/it remains (for me to speak). And first, on the one hand, in order that I in turn also may praise our craft just as Eryximachos his own/the craft of himself, the god is a poet so wise as to make even another (a poet). For everyone becomes a poet even if he is unpoetic formerly, whomever Love touches.
